THE FAMILY HEALTH

Two men were disputing over their respective churches. One was a Baptist and one was a Presbyterian. Finally one of them called a neighbour who was passing and asked his opinion as to which was the better church in which to be saved. "Well, neighbour," he said, "son and I have been hauling wheat nearly forty years. There are two roads that lead to the mill. One is the valley road and the other leads over the hill and never yet has the miller asked me which road I came, but he always asks, "Is the wheat good?"

There is a good deal of undeserved censure passed on women on account of their not making home more attractive. Most of this blame is fairly chargeable on men. With what heart can a woman strive to make the fireside cheerful when she knows, from bitter experience, that the companion of her life will come home to criticize her cooking, to disregard her personal appearance, and to let off upon her wounded but patient ear fretful language on account of everything that has gone wrong out-of-doors! See to it that you do your part, Mr. Husband, to make home happy by cheerful encouragement to your wife.

Our home should be so filled with pleasant smiles, loving words and kind acts, that the moment a member enters it the sunshine of happiness will beam from every countenance and a thrill of joy fill every heart; in fact, the home should be to its members, the pleasantest spot on earth. If cross words must be spoken let them be directed to strangers or better still go into the woods and direct them to the wild animals; but a still better way is to keep the mind so full of good thoughts and the hands so busy in performing kind, Christian acts that there will be no room for cross words to mature, and no time or disposition to utter them.

We estimate a mother's importance in her family as high as any one can; and yet we do not believe she monopolizes all the qualities needed in the great work of training up human beings. Her familiarity with her children places her in some respects, at a disadvantage for the exercise of wholesome authority. The wise father will not indeed take the reins of the family government from his wife b;ut he will make his children feel and know that her gentle sway is sustained by a firm and steady hand; that behind their mother's tender heart stands a cool judgment and a will stronger than their own, and that cannot impose upon the one or resist the other.

The great national question of the day is not, "What are we going to do with the negro" or "tariff." It is more vital, more individual and more spiritual. It is what are we going to do to vitalize the minds of our boys and girls at home and make it the mighty throne of inspiration. We hear some one say, "You are all theory, give us a basis to work upon." If you are looking for a fixed set of rules for making a home happy and attractive, you are looking in vain. The government of no two homes is likely to be the same. Homes are as varied in disposition as the minds of men. What makes one laugh might cause tears for another. Have the making of home a place of joy, pleasure and profit, as any other part of our daily work. Do not save the frowns of business worry for your fireside.

A bond of sympathy should, and in most instances does connect mother and daughter. What is more natural than that a young girl should seek her mother's sympathy and advice when trouble comes. Mother's voice has been music to her ear since memory first dawned, her hand has rocked the cradle, rested upon her head as she lisped her first prayer, and smothered her pillow during the weary hours of sickness. She can be trusted and into her ear are poured the secrets that no one else may know. Whether it be an offer of marriage or an intimation of a broken vow, mother will know best how to advise.

The truest, best and sweetest type of the girl of to-day does not come from the home of wealth, she steps out from the house where is comfort rather than luxury. She belongs to the great middle class — that class which has given us the best wifehood, which has given helpmates to the foremost men of our time; which teaches its daughters the true meaning of love which teaches the manners of the drawing room and the practical life of the kitchen as well as teaches its girls the responsibilities of wifehood and the greatness of motherhood.

It is more pleasant to be invited to take a higher seat than to be deprived of it. It is more pleasant to be king of a cottage than a servant of a palace. It is better to be a good five cent piece than a bogus quarter; in other words, it is better to hold ourselves at what we are honestly worth. The world is full of people who never know or learn anything, because they think they know enough to begin with.

Don't be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything; to run up against the sharp corners; and find out all the disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growing would often set things right.

MY CREED.

I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friend of all—the foe—the friendless;
I would be giving and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up—and laugh—and love—and lift.

Fig Pudding.

Cream a cupful of butter with two cupfuls of brown sugar; add 4 eggs well beaten, 1 teaspoonful eac h of cinnamon and nutmeg, 1-2 a teaspoonful of powdered cloves and a cupful of water. Sift in 3 cupfuls of flour with 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder and add half a pound of finely cut figs and 2 cupfuls of raisins, dredging the fruit with flour. Bake for 2 hours in a moderate oven.

Tomatoes and Shrimps.

Take half a dozen large tomatoes, cut off the tops and scoop out the pulp, leaving a thin shell. Melt a tablespoonful of butter, add the tomatoe tops and pulp and cook until thick, seasoning with salt, pepper, minced parsley and grated onion. Add 1 small can of shrimps cut fine and enough crumbs to make a paste. Fill the tomatoe shells, cover with crumbs, dot with butter, and bake in the oven. Serve with a border of boiled rice.

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.

—Macbeth, Act IV., Sc. 3.

Malcolm, the son of murdered King Duncan, had fled to England to escape the death tyrant Macbeth had planned for him. Macduff, a simple nature of heroic mould, had come to Malcolm to urge him to return to Scotland. Malcolm professed despair and to his pleading replied:

"Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there Weep our sad bosoms empty."

To which Macduff, the man of action urges:

"Let us rather
Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom."

But Malcolm, eyeing him with searching glance, merely replied:

"This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongue,
Was once thought honest; but you have loy'd him well."

Malcolm, too, was a man of action. He knows that Macbeth is still seeking after his life; may not even Macduff be a paid spy and assassin? It is true, he hints, that you (Macduff) may be the most loyal of subjects. "Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell." Macbeth was the brightest of angels. You were a staunch follower and admirer of his. Why may not you, too, be a fallen angel? This caution in a ruler or would-be ruler is admirable. Malcolm was no gloomy pessimist. Though the most trusted of men proved false there are still, he said, bright angels.

As Malcolm spoke of Macbeth he had in mind Satan, sitting on his throne of royal state after he had fallen and been cast out of heaven, according to the ancient story. The comparison of Macbeth with Satan is apt. Satan was the brightest of the angels; Macbeth, in the estimation of his king and country, was the bravest and truest of subjects. The sergeant who speaks of him in the beginning of the drama calls him "brave Macbeth" and "valor's minion." He was to Ross "Bellona's bridegroom and a "most worthy thane." Ambition caused the fall of Satan; it was 'vaulting ambition" caused the moral overthrow of Macbeth—and when he fell, he fell like Lucifer, "never to hope again."

The higher the position, the greater the opportunities, the more diligently should a man be on his guard against temptation. Who could have imagined disloyalty on the part of Macbeth? He had been honoured of late," and 'won golden opinions from all sorts of people." King Duncan reposed more trust in him than in any other man in his kingdom. Macbeth in slaying Duncan transgressed against the laws of hospitality, the blackest of all sins in Scotland,—against the ties of kinship, against his duties as a subject, and against the heart of pity within his breast that he smothered with diabolical resolution. Malcolm was an exile from his country, his life was in danger, he knew that men who had formerly fawned on him were now ready at the request of Macbeth to destroy him, but he was still an optimist. To him there were still men he could trust.

This is excellent philosophy, philosophy that it would be well for many complainers to take to heart. There are those who believe that all men are selfish, because some men in high places have been disloyal to their trust, have through vaulting ambition, cast aside the ideals they had set up for themselves in early life and used their public positions for selfish ends. The rise of civilization, to such complainers, is marked by the fall of men. There is retrogression rather than progression. They are like men standing on the bank of the river ;they fix their eyes upon an eddy and imagine that the stream is going backwards, but despite their criticism the lordly stream goes onward to the ocean, ever gaining in strength. There are more structures hit by lightning now than there were a hundred years ago, and merely because they are more in existence. There are more cases of the fall of trusted beings because the number of beings to be trusted has vastly increased. An examination of the records of crime will show that there is a tremendous decrease in crimes against society.

In ordinary life public men are slightingly spoken of as if all were corrupt; the majority are still incorruptible. Some critics, on account of the insincerity and the desire to make a gain of godliness in many professing religion, designate all worshippers as hypocrites; deliberate hypocrisy is the exception, not the rule. When Malcolm stood on the victorious battlefield where Macbeth was slain he must have realized the truth of his words, "Angels are bright still"; a host of loyal subjects acclaimed him "King of Scotland." If any man will take the trouble to look below the surface, he will see that in political life, in social life, in religious life, in business life the tendency is upwards. In all walks of life there are fallen angels, but the influence of the bright angels is still a sun able to dispel the darkness occasioned by crime and sin. In the end the good triumphs over the evil. The Macbeths and the Richards meet their Malcolms and Richmonds.

Covered With Eczema

CURED BY TWO BOTTLES D. D. D.

On March 21st, 1910, Mr. Angus McMillan, of Port Hood, N.S., wrote us:

"My little boy three years old was covered from head to foot with eczema. I tried over twenty different kinds of salves and washes but could not see any improvement—in fact it seemed to be getting worse.

I was about discouraged and had lost faith in all kinds of so-called eczema cures, when I saw an ad. telling about D.D.D. Prescription. I sent for sample bottle and the third application convinced me that I had at last got a sure cure. Two bottles effected a complete cure."

What D.D.D. did for this little boy, it will do for any skin sufferer. A mild, soothing liquid made up of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine and other ingredients, it penetrates to the root of the trouble and washes the disease germs out.

Why not get relief? Simply write to-day to the D. D. D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 49 Colborne St., Toronto, and they will send you a free trial bottle.

The Key to the Graveyard.

There is said to be an old church near Berlin, Germany, which is very attractive to tourists. The graveyard back of the church is kept locked, but on a gate is the following notice: "The key to the graveyard is to be found in the tavern."

This is an undesigned statement of a great truth. A great army of men annually find the key that opens the way for them into the graveyard by going into the tavern. They not only unlock the graveyard to themselves but oftentimes to innocent children and helpless women who are dependent upon them.—American Issue.

Missionary Grenfell of Labrador.

In the recently published book entitled "Grenfell of Labrador," there are references to drink and the drink traffic that ought to stir the souls of all friends of missionary effort, and make them labour for the overthrow of the entire liquor business. Mr. James Johnstone, the writer of Dr. Grenfell's Biography, states that he heard the Doctor say that "more fishermen had been destroyed by drink than Arctic storms had sent to the bottom of the deep," and he gives the following pronouncement of Dr. Grenfell on the question of personal abstinence:

"During twenty years' experience on the sea and on the snow in winter, an experience after an upbringing in soft places, I have found that alcohol has been entirely unnecessary for myself, and if ever I had the opportunity given to me to say a word at any time or in any place which will help to inhibit the use of alcohol as a beverage so long as I can stand on my feet, I shall be proud to get up and speak it."

Such is the testimony of this eminent medical missionary who has given his life to benefit the people living in the Labrador Peninsula, a region in the North American Continent lying between Hudson Bay and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, with a seaboard of 3,100 miles and an area of 420,000 square miles, equal in extent to the British Isles, France and Russia. It is true that there is no legalized liquor traffic in Labrador, but drink is smuggled in during the summer, and Dr. Grenfell wages relentless war against these wicked traders, and asserts "It's hard enough to sell liquor on land, but a man who will sell liquor to a seaman who is likely to lose his life if he gets drunk, is a devil."—Pioneer.

Some One Needs You to be Strong.

"Some one needs you to be strong,
Needs you in the fighting,
Needs the comfort of your song,
Needs your aid against the wrong,
Needs your lamp to help along
In the dark world's lighting.

"Some one needs you to be strong,"
Needs your heart to cheer them,
Needs the guiding of your hand
To the better, brighter land;
Shall they fail in their demand?
Wilt thou never hear them?

"Some one needs you," O! be strong,
Strong in God's own beauty;
Love shall make all labour sweet,
Go, your struggling brother meet;
God shall make your footsteps fleet,
In the cause of duty.

The Real Meaning of Drunkenness

Statistics show assaults, like accidents ,to be more numerous on Monday and Saturday or after drinking days.

The tax which indulgence in drink lays upon the taxpayers in caring for the intoxicated man and the drink-caused crime is a burdensome one. In the State of Massachusetts 60 out of every 100 persons arrested are arrested for drunkenness—85,000 in all in 1908. What does that mean? That out of ever y100 persons arrested, 60 are hued to court because their brains and nerves have been put out of order by drink. A physical fact. These persons are as physically disabled as though they have broken a limb or acquired an acute disease. What they have broken—the perfect working of brain and nerve—is vastly more important than a bone, and intoxication-poisoning by alcohol is the manifestation of a diseased condition, alcoholism.

A city becomes wildly alarmed at 100 cases of typhoid fever; twenty-five limbs broken on icy sidewalks would send a wave of protestation to the street department for not removing the cause, but the sorrowful army of "drunks" files in and out of our station-houses and jails without heed or pity, and will continue to do so until the people learn that the cause is not wholly the weakness of the drinker, but the nature of the drink.

But this is not all. Half of all the arrests outside o fdrunkenness, the Committee of Fifty tells us, are due wholly or partly to alcohol. How? Brain cells impaired lead to self-control lessened, irritability increased, a hasty word, an ill-considered blow, arrest, conviction for crime. But, again, back of all lies the physical fact of the injury alcohol does to the brain cells. And the total is what? Eighty cents out of every dollar the taxpayer has to spend for police, municipal and district court expenses is spent wholly or partly in picking up men and women whose brain and nerves have been made sick by drink which the city permits to be sold and "trying" them, putting them on probation for it or "punishing" them for it by fine or imprisonment! And the taxpayer in the United States pays the annual bill to the extent of about $300,000,000.

What is the significance of all this inefficiency, crime and misery traceable to alcohol? It puts upon the employer the waste of time, waste of spoiled material, waste of imperfect production, the cost of accident, the cost in taxes, in caring for the public results of drink. It puts upon the workman the risk of accident, higher taxes in the cost of living, a wage measured in part by the productivity of the less efficient drinking workman. Money spent for drink lowers the standard of the home in food, shelter, clothing, nourishment which needs to be kept high for the really efficient workman. Alcohol dulls ambition for self improvement and progress. "Everything that tends to plunge the workman into misery is encouraged by alcohol; everything that is working to bring him out of his wretchedness is discouraged by alcohol."—Pioneer.

If you want to free your head of dandruff and stop falling hair, you must sooner or later resort to Newbro's Herpicide.

By using Herpicide, first you save yourself worry, which is desirable, you save money, which is a considerable, and you save your hair, which is the most important of all.

My hair is now long, soft and silky and natural colour, while before it was quite gray. My friends never tire of admiring my hair."

Mrs. Lee's story is a typical history of hair troubles. After everything else fails Newbro's Herpicide brings relief. It would be just as effective if used first.

EYE-STRAIN IS BRAIN STRAIN

For the eye is practically the brain trying to see. Eye-strain, in some degree or other, is probably universal. The percentage of those with perfect eyesight is very small.

Some of the effects which cause eye-strain are easily explained. One's eyes may be of unequal length. The inequality may measure but one hundredth of an inch; still that slight inequality hinders good team-work, and causes eye-strain. Astigmatism in one or both eyes is seldom absent, and is one of the most potent causes of eye-strain. It is caused, generally, by the pressure of the upper lid upon the upper cornea. The effect of the pressure is to alter the curvature of the cornea, disturbing the refractive power, and giving a distorted image on the retina.

THE BLACK CROSS

By OLIVE M. BRIGGS

"I am only a bird," said Kaya, softly, "They won't think of me. It is Siegfreid they have come to hear, and Brunnhilde. How glorious to be a Brunnhilde!"

The Kapellmeister took out his watch: "I must go," he said, "Good-bye, little one; remember what I told you, and let your voice come out without effort; not too loud, or too soft! When your part is over, one of the stage-hands will let you down again."

Kaya nodded, swinging herself, childishly. "It is sweet to be a bird," she said. "I think I shall stay here always, and Siegfried will never find me."

"No—he shall never find you!" said the Kapellmeister suddenly and sharply. Their eyes met for a moment. "Are you all right?" he repeated: "you are pale."

Kaya shrank back into the leaves that were painted, and they trembled slightly as if a breeze had passed: and the great drop-curtain blew out, bulging.

"Keep the windows shut," called the voice of the stage manager. "Quick—before the curtain goes up. A storm is coming and the draughts — He went hurrying past.

Ritter glanced at his watch again mechanically; then he crossed the stage to the left, and hurried down a small, winding stair-case to the pit, where the orchestra waited. A sharp tap of the baton—a glance over his men—then the second Act began.

Kaya sat very still under the leaves with the painted branches about her. She was perched on a swing, high aloft in the flies; and when she looked up, she saw nothing but ropes, and machinery, and darkness, and when she looked down, there was Mime below her, crouched by a stone, the sun was rising, the shadows were breaking, and Siegfried lay stretched at the foot of the Linden. He had long, light hair and fur about his shoulders, and he was big and splendid to look at in his youth and his wrath. He was threatening Mime, and the dwarf was muttering and cursing. Beyond was the pit with the orchestra, the foot-lights the House.

Kaya listened, and her thoughts went back to St. Petersburg, and the class of Helmanoff. She was singing to him, and when she had finished, he had taken her hands. "If you were not a Countess," he said, "you could be a Lehmann in time, another Lehmann." Kaya leaned her curls against the rope of the swing dreamily. "How long ago that seems," she said to herself, "before — before I —"

Then she thought of the weeks since her illness, and how her voice had come back suddenly, over night as it were, only bigger and fuller; and how she had worked and studied, day after day, rehearsing with Ritter.

Her brow clouded a little as she remembered. He had been severe, the Kapellmeister, caustic, even irritable. How hard he was to satisfy! When she sang her best, he shrugged his shoulders; when she sang badly, he was furious. Occasionally he was kind, as to-day, but not often. . . . Siegfried was alone now, carving his reed, trying to mimic the song of the wooded birds. . . . The Kapellmeister had said nothing of Lehmann; perhaps she had lost her voice after all. Her thoughts rambled on as she waited for her cue. . . .

Siegfried's horn was to his lips and he was blowing it; a splendid figure, eager, expectant. . . Kaya stretched her throat like a bird: "If it should be barred," she said to herself, "as it was befor e,and the orchestra began with the theme, and I could'nt sing!" She trembled a little.

So the first scene passed; and the second.

The Dragon was on the stage now, and Siegfried was fighting him. The hot breath poured from the great, red nostrils; the sword flashed. The battle grew fiercer. . . . Kaya leaned over, stooping in the swing and gazing. "Siegfried has wounded him," she whispered, "in a moment the sword will have reached his heart. . Ah, now—it has struck him—he is dying! As soon as he is dead? As soon as he is — dead."

The orchestra was playing passionately, and she knew every note; the bird motive came nearer and nearer. Already her prototype was being prepared in the flies, and the wires made ready. She clung to the rope, swinging. . . . Ah, how good the Kapellmeister had been to her; how good! It was his very interest in her that had made him severe, she knew that. She must sing her best, and not wound him by failure.

The motive came nearer.

Siegfried was standing just below her now. She took a deep breath, and her lips parted. He was peering up at her, searching through the leaves, and the bird on its wire fluttered across the stage. . . . . She was singing. The notes, high and pure, poured out of her throat. The bird fluttered past.

She swayed, with her head leaning back against the ropes, and sang—and sang. Her throat was like a tunnel, and her voice was like a stream running through it, clear and glorious. Siegfried looked up and started. The orchestra played on.

"Has the Fraulien gone home?"

"No," said Marta, yawning, "she is in one of the dressing-rooms. I begged her to come, but she would not."

The Kapellmeister laid his hand on her shoulder carelessly: "If you are sleepy," he said, "go back to the mill; I will bring her myself presently. The House is dark now, and the people are going." He gave a curt nod, dismissing the old woman, and strode on through the wings.

One person after another stopped him: "Ha, Kapellmeister, where did that nightingale hail from?"

"I snared it for you, Siegfried; were you satisfied?"

"Ach, mein Gott! I thought I was back on the Riviera, and it was moon light.—Snare me another Brunnhilde, can't you?" The great tenor laughed and put his finger to his lips: "Singing with the Lehmann spoils one," he said, "Bah—! It was frightful tonight! She grows always worse. Would the bird was a goddess instead." He waved his hand: "Good-night!"

"Good-night," said the Kapellmeister, hurrying on.

"Ritter—hey! Stop a moment! What has come over the Neumann?"

"Nothing, Jacobs—nothing! She is dead."

Mime strightened his back that was stiff from much crouching; "Ausgeworfen?"

"Ja wohl."

"Then who is the lark?"

"An improvement you think—eh?"

The singer laughed: "The way Perron jumped! Did you see him? With the first note he gaped open-mouthed into the branches, and came within an ace of dropping his sword. I chuckled aloud in the wings. Who is she, Kapellmeister?

"Good-night — good-night!" cried Ritter, "excuse me, but I am late, and in a hurry. This opera conducting is frightfully wearing; I am limp as a rag. Good-night!" he ran on.

The doors of the dressing-rooms stood open, and he peered into them, one after the other. In some the electric light was still on, and the costumes were scattered about on the open trunks. The principals were gone already, and most of the chorus; and the men of the orchestra went hurrying by like shadows, with their instruments under their arms. In the House itself, behind the asbestos curtain, which was lowering slowly, came the sound of seats swinging slowly, and the voices of the ushers as they rushed to and fro.

"Kaya!" called the Kapellmeister softly, "Where are you?" He hurried from room to room

The dressing-room of Madame Schultz was on the second floor, up a short, winding stair-case, and the lights were turned low. Ritter paused in the doorway.

The prima-donna was standing before the pier-glass, still in costume: her soft white robes trailed over the floor, and her red-blonde hair hung to her waist. The helmet glittered on her head, and she held her spear aloft as if about to utter the Wakure cry. The figure was superb, magnificent; a goddess at bay. And as the Kapellmeister stared at her in astonishment, he saw that she was tense with emotion.

"Madame," he stammered, "You—You—still here?"

Her face was to the glass, her back to the door; she wheeled about quickly and faced him: "Yes, I am here!" she cried, "Brunnhilde is here! The House was cold to me to-night—they clapped Perron. It was all Siegfried. They would have hissed me if they had dared." The spear shook in her trembling hand.

"When my voice broke in the top notes, you could hear them whispering in the loggias; didn't you hear them? 'She is old,' they said, "she can't sing any more, or act! She has no business to be here. Get us another Brunnhilde!" I saw! Do you think I am blind and deaf as well as old? Look at me as I stand here! I am Brunnhilde!"

The form of the singer was rigid. drawn to its height; the head thrown back and the helmet glittering on her red-blonde hair. Her eyes were proud and scornful.

"Am I not—Brunnehilde?"

"Yes—yes!" cried Ritter, drawing back in a dazed way: "You are magnificent, Madame. If you had acted like that to-night, you would have had the House at your feet."

The singer took a step forward. "It is not I," she cried, "It is Brunnhilde herself! Come, let her sing to you! The scene is still there on the stage, the rocks and the fir-tree—and Brunnhild's couch. The fire motive soothes in my brain, and the flames are springing. Come—and waken me!"

She grasped his sleeve with her fingers, and drew him: "You are not the Kapellmeister!" she cried, "You are Siegfried, and you must sing the part in falsetto. Come!"

Ritter gave a quick glance about. The stage hands were gone, and the singers. The stage was in semi-darkness, half lighted, and the scene was unchanged. He could see it from the top of the balustrade. There was no one in the House behind, or in front, and the foot-lights were out; only the porter watched below, half asleep and waiting. He was alone with a mad woman; Brunnhilde gone crasy and frantic with grief because she was old and her voice was gone. She was dragging at his hand, and pulling him towards the stair-case. He followed her dumbly.

"Come—come!" she panted, "you think the Schultz has gone mad! No—no! It is only her youth come back, and her voice is leaping in her throat. She must sing—must sing! There is the cough. See, I fling myself on it! I am covered with the shield, and the spear lies beside me. You have wakened me, Siegfried, with your kiss; and now I raise myself slowly. I am dazed—I stare blindly about! Hark, how the fire is leaping and crackling!

The singer was seated upright now on the couch, and Ritter was standing helpless beside her. As she acted, the blood ran cold in his veins. It was true what she had said. She was no longer the Schultz; she was Brunnhilde herself, the goddess, and the kiss of Siegfried was on her lips.

She was singing now; she had sprung to her feet with the spear in her hand, and the music poured from her throat. It was not the voice of Schultz; it was richer and fuller, and the tones were deep and strong, and pure and high; and it rang out and filled the empty stage like a clarion trumpet, silver-toned. She held her hands high above her head, waving the spear; coming nearer to him and nearer.

"O Siegfried, Herrliche Hort der Welt!
Leben der Erde, lachender Held!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Isaiah's Vision and Call to Service. (Home Missionary Lesson.) Isa. vi.

1. Verses 1-4—Why did God give this vision to Isaiah?

2. Do you think that any such vision needs repeating? Why?

3. When we have any special Divine illumination what is the advantage of connecting it with some event, or putting down the date, as Isaiah seems to have done?

4. Did Isaiah or anybody else ever see with the outward eyes, the actual eternal God, and will He ever be to seen?

5. Is there any reason to think that Seraphim, or angels, are to be seen everywhere in the universe, if we had the media through which to see them?

6. Verse 5.—How was it that the sight of the Lord made Isaiah conscious of his sinfulness?

7. What if any reason is there to conclude that the use of coarse slang or profanity, proves the user to be an impure man?

8. Which is the more effectual way to reveal to sinners their guilt, to correct them with words, or to live pure lives before them? Why?

9. What effect does the teaching of the spotless purity of Jesus have upon sinful men?

10. Verses 6-7—What is God's attitude to sinners who are conscious of and loathe themselves because of their sins?

11. What is the "live coal," with which the Seraphim touched the lips of Isaiah, emblematic of?

12. What actually transpires in a man's spiritual nature when he comes to God for the pardon of his sins?

(13) What reason is there to think that angels, or spirits, have anything to do with the salvation, or the spiritual comfort of men and women to-day.

14. Verse 8.—What class of men and women does God need, and call to be missionaries?

15. What are the indications that God is calling to-day, with a loud voice, for missionaries? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the class.

16. Is it possible for any person to be in harmony with God who is not willing to be a missionary, or to support a missionary, if the Lord should so demand?

17. What reasons are there to conclude that it is the duty of pastors in these days, to look out for suitable young men, and call them to missionary work?

18. Verses 9-10—The prophet was being sent to a people familiar with God's message, and hardened in sin: what is generally the doom of such people?

19.—What is the use of continuing to preach to a gospel hardened people?

20.—When sinners hear the call of God to repentance, and heed it not, what change takes place in them for better or worse?

21. Verses 11-13—It is very trying to preach without results, but is there anything in this story to indicate that in time, a faithful servant of God will surely cause some to hear and turn to the Lord?

TAKEN THOUSAND ZUTOO TABLETS
Cured 500 Headaches.

Mrs. (Dr.) Shurtleff, of Coaticook, says. "Zutoo Tablets must have cured 500 of my headaches, for I have taken 1000 tablets. After trying every remedy within reach, I discarded them all four years ago for Zutoo, which I have taken ever since. I find the tablets a harmless and efficient cure for all kinds of headache."

An Encouraging Message

I have a message of hope and good cheer, of encouragement and inspiration to every suffering woman. I have endured the torture due to female troubles and the consequent despondency and mental agony almost to the point of despair, and I have been restored from this condition to a state of vigorous health, and to the happy, exhilarating frame of mind which accompanies physical well being. This change has been brought about wholly by the use of ORANGE LILY.

In addition I have had the privilege and pleasure of inducing multitudes of other suffering women to give ORANGE LILY a trial, and have received thousands of enthusiastic acknowledgments of the blessings it has brought to them. The following is a sample:

Truro, N. S., April 7, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah.—Your very kind letter was received yesterday. In reply to your question about my health, I am thankful to say that I am very well. As I have never given you a statement of my case you may be interested in it.

For several years I have suffered untold agony. This suffering was continuous, but I would have violent attacks every few weeks, each attack lasting several days. The first Sunday in November, I felt the pain increasing and so did not go to prayers. The rest of the family did go, and soon after the forcing down pains seized me and I had to remain on the floor until their return. I was in great pain all night and was very sick for a whole week.

Then Mrs. L. came to see me and told me of your wonderful medicine. I got my husband to send for it right away, as I was too sick to write myself. (My doctor could do nothing for me.) I have used 5 boxes of ORANGE LILY, have had three months of good rest, and am now well, never better in my life. I have not had the old pains since. I often ask my husband if it is myself that is going around and doing my own work. I can scarcely believe it. It brings tears of joy to my eyes. I could shout it to all the world. I cannot speak enough in its praise.

Your friend, MRS. E. H. F.

Receiving, as I do, dozens of such reports each day, I feel impelled to make known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from other so-called remedies in that it is not taken internally. It is a strictly local treatment, and is applied directly to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissues, expelling the stagnant foreign matter which has been irritating the membrane and oppressing the nerves, and a good-ing feeling of physical and mental relief is noticeable almost from the start. It is a positive, scientific remedy and even if you use no more than the Free Trial treatment you will be very materially benefited.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I want every reader of this, who suffers in any way from painful monthly periods, irregularities, leucorrhœa, inflammation or congestion of the womb, pains in the back, etc., to send me their addresses, and I will forward at once, without charge, 10 days' treatment. If your case is not far advanced it may entirely cure you, and in any event it will do you much good. I am so earnest in making this statement, and so positive that it is true, that I trust every sufferer who reads this notice will take advantage of my offer and get cured at home, without a doctor's bill. Address, enclosing 2 stamps, MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

DOES SOUR MILK PROLONG LIFE?

Peasants of Bulgaria Live Very Largely on That Fluid—Death of "Old Boppel"

Although the natural span of human life—said to be three score years and ten—possibly is quite long enough to satisfy most men, the peasants of Bulgaria, who live very largely on sour milk, reach a much greater age. Edison, who believes that he has discovered a way of prolonging human life to 150 years, and who has decided to live as long himself, will no doubt be interested to hear particulars of an old man of 104, called "Old Boppel," who lives in Obermoschel, in the north of Prussia, enjoying perfect health. The old man takes his daily walk and is able to read and write. He is the oldest man in Germany, and can still remember the march of the Grand Army through the Palatinate in the year 1813. Although his memory may have failed him a little, he can still eat and drink with the best. His advice to all those who want to live long is, "Live as I do, eat and drink as I do, and then you will grow as old as I do."

That is to say, eat and drink what you like; don't bother about your digestion or anything else, and you will live to be 100. Unfortunately, this is just what the majority of people can't do.

AIR FLYERS BUSY

Outlook Not Promising, However, for the "Lighter-Than-Air" Department

Preparatory to the departure of the Army Air Battalion for Amesbury, the expert military flyers that England possesses, have been practising daily at Farnborough. The general public has seeng little of these trials, for most of them have been made at daybreak, not from any motive of secrecy, but because of the high winds which rage almost continually from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. While the army aeroplanes are giving general satisfaction and the military Bleriot monoplanes are surpassing all expectations, the out look is not very pleasant in the "lighter-than-air" department, though without doubt present defects will be speedily remedied. In the dirigible department the English-built balloon Beta, occasionally flies in the direction wanted, even if only at a snail's pace, the Gamma has refused to fly for several months, and the much-advertised Lebaudy airship is proving something of a white elephant. The reason for the continued effectiveness of the Beta is found in her envelope of goldbeater's skin through which the escape of gas is almost, if not quite, imperceptible. But the case is quite otherwise with the gas bags of the Gamma and the Lebaudy. The leaking capacity of the larger dirigible is told in that fact that in ten days she lost a ton of lifting power. The serious side of this leakage, even in time of peace, is the cost of inflation, which is something like $3,500, to say nothing of the expenditure of labor in dismantling and re-erecting the internal framework.

REFORMING CRIMINALS

Help Them to Earn Money by Work and Give Them Good Wives

Geheimrath Krohne, Germany's leading criminologist and director of the famous open-air reformatory on the Island of Hela, declared to the International Criminological Congress that there are two ways of making criminals decent members of society again. "If they are not married," he said, "we must give them good wives." He assured his audience that that had succeeded in their colony in hundreds of instances. The other method, he declared, was to enable them to earn money by work; if they drank one day's earnings they got nothing the next.

AEROPLANE DANGER

Unintentional Hurried Descents May Injure Onlookers

An order has just been issued calling the attention of soldiers to the danger of aeroplanes dropping upon them, especially when the aviators are inexperienced. The Artillery Practice Camp on Salisbury Plain is close to the training ground of the Air Corps, and also the British and Colonial Aerdplane Company's ground. The camp commandant has therefore issued an order forbidding non-commissioned officers and men to follow closely any aeroplanes. Many of the men flying, he said, are only beginners. Consequently there is always the danger of unintentional hurried descents, which might "damage" men underneath; and the presence, also, of many spectators under or near a person flying may easily cause him anxiety and distract his attention from his very hazardous occupation.

HAS A REMEDY FOR SLEEPLESS

The "Spectascope" Causes a Delightful Sense of Drowsiness to Creep Over You

There is a hope for the sufferer from insomnia. A remedy, it is claimed, has been found for the sleepless, and it is not in old time nostrums, but in the recently patented "spectascope." Mr. Haydn Jones, of Caterham, is the inventor of the instrument. In appearance it is a pair of flat, "spggles," and consists of a black flat or concave opaque disc, on which are two white spots, so placed as to correspond to the position of the eyes. All you have to do is to sit down in a chair or lie on your bed, and look at the two spots on the disc, which, of course, become one apparently. The field of vision is now concentrated and reduced to its minimum. A delightful sense of drowsiness will slowly creep over you, and in a few seconds you are wrapped in a glorious natural sleep. "The spectascope," however, is intended to be used in a room lighted either by daylight or a soft night-light. The "monoscope" meets the need of those who wish to sleep soundly without the aid of a light. It is after the nature of the "spectascope," and is placed over the bed in such a position that the eyes are compelled to turn upwards, and sleep is induced.

MRS. WILLIAM B. LEEDS

Widow of the American multi-millionaire, who, in a speech before a coterie of wealthy Americans now temporarily residing in Paris, declared that she had discovered a plot on the part of French detective agencies to furnish fortune-hunting noblemen with information regarding eligible American women of preminence in the financial world. Mrs. Leeds declares that she, herself, has been placed on the market by these would-be marriage bureaus, and as a result has received several distinctly unflattering offers of marriage from needy nobility. The matter has been brought to the attention of the authorities, and it is expected that a thorough investigation with many arrests will follow.

CENSUS OF SWISS ANIMALS

Everything Was Counted Except the Cats and Dogs

While England and Germany have been taking a census of all their people, Switzerland has been taking a census of all its animals. The numbering of the beasts which took place recently included even the bees, only the number of hives, of course, being taken in this case. All animals, with the exception of cats and dogs, have had to be included in the census, the exception in favor of dogs being explained by the fact that they are generally used to pull light carts, and are thus registered already. Owners of horned cattle were obliged to state the number of their cows, calves, oxen, and bulls, and how many they possessed of each particular breed.

The GILLETTE Is An Economy
Not An Extravagance

Because a fairly good open-blade razor can be bought for two dollars, while a GILLETTE costs five, have you concluded that the GILLETTE is an extravagance? It is not.

The open-blade costs you $2.00 to buy and at least 25c. a year to keep honed and in condition. Total, $2.25 for the first year.

The GILLETTE, with 12 double-edged blades, costs $5.00, and a second box of blades (should your beard be very tough) adds $1.00. Total, $6.00 for first year. Difference $3.75.

The three-minute GILLETTE will save you 5 to 10 minutes every time you shave. Put it at 5. That's over three working days a year. Isn't your time worth over $1.25 a day?

When you're nearly late for the train or an important engagement, the five minutes which the GILLETTE saves you is apt to be worth several times the whole cost.

Then there's the comfort of the clean, cool, easy GILLETTE shave—worth in itself several times the difference in price.

For real economy—time and face as well as cash considered—buy a GILLETTE and enjoy it.

SOME AMAZING ART IN ROYAL ACADEMY

"ITALIAN GARDEN" A GEM

This Is Mr. La Thangue's Work and Is Said To Be Originally Conceived and Well Painted.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

SIR W. S. GILBERT'S dictum that the House of Lords throughout the ages did nothing in particular—and did it very well" applies exactly to the work turned out annually by members and associates of the Royal Academy for the public edification and exhibited at Burlington House each May with painstaking regularity.

The quotation is even more applicable this year than usual. In fact, with perhaps the single exception of Mrs. Laura Knight's agonizing portrayal of glistening sun-kissed flesh, there is no one canvas to arrest the eye, though a careful inspection reveals an increasing number of more than average quality canvases.

Beginning with Gallery I., Mr. Seymour Lucas' portrait of the academy's president, Sir Edward Poynter, is exactly what one would have expected from the president himself had he elected to paint his own portrait. It is hard, unsympathetic and diabolic, representing the sitter in full presidential panoply, medal and all, and compares most unfavorably with Mr. Arthur Cope's friendly and informal rendering of the president in the easy mufti of a gray tweed suit, this being Mr. Cope's diploma work on his election to fulldress academic fellowship, and it hangs in Gallery III.

The second room contains one of the gems of the whole show in Mr. La Thangue's originally conceived and wonderfully painted "Italian Garden," showing a little southern maid garbed in brilliant red, made more brilliant by the dazzling sunlight, perched on the stone rim of an Old World masonry pool teeming with golden goldfish and mirroring in its clear depths the lichen covered walls and the red maiden alike with truthful tenderness.

The grouping of the fish would alone make the picture; they are all over the pool, singly and en shoals, lying at the bottom and crowded eagerly on the surface to catch the tendered bread crumbs. The picture as a whole is at once restful and alive with movement and joyous life.

GEMS OF THE YEAR.

Room number containing another of the best pictures in Mr. Edward Stott's exquisitely tender interpretation of an Italian lady dreamily called "Her Thoughts Were Not Children," though an equally appropriate title would be "The Madonna of the Rabbit." It depicts a divinely maternal figure with a rabbit on her lap and, half clothed on her knee, with the other half crouching up to her, is the accepted position of the Saviour and the infant John, in a typical Italian landscape setting and one to be hung in any old time cathedral.

Mr. Sims' picture called "Legend" is too sentimental and exaggerated and too lacking in any happy consequence to appeal to the many admirers while Mr. John Sargent is by no means happy in his rendering of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The head is hard and looks all the harder by reason of the voluminous lawn sleeves behind.

Sir L. Alma-Tadema presents two charming figures in strange contrast to the Archbishop, next to whom they have been most unhappily hung. Of the two the spring scene of dark haired nymphs, with wreaths of yellow flowers, is stronger and more pleasing than its companion, "A Summer Offering," showing fair haired girls and white dimities with handkerchiefs and fans, though both are delightfully decorative.

In his sitturning and almost antagonistic portrait of "A Man in Black," in Gallery IV., Mr. Cope has produced very little short of a masterpiece, which reminds one, without in any way losing its originality, alternately of a sanctioned Boldini and a kindly Whistler. It is certainly the most notable portrait of the exhibition, to say the least of it.

"SUN KISSED FLESH."

Room V., although containing many good works, contains one masterpiece, Mrs. Laura Knight's "Daughters of the Sun." Though this work is but another version of her last year's success, depicting half a dozen girls more or less naked, with the sun peeping down on their moist and shining bodies, with an almost lustful fierceness, still it is as welcome as though it were as far removed from it as the pole.

A bravura so unique and so delightful as is Mrs. Knight's is not to be left in a hurry, since quite sufficient variety can be provided by change of sex and surroundings, pale always let there be glistening sun-kissed flesh and faultless anatomy of svelte young figures. It is impossible to overpraise the chief figure in this year's radiantly glowing group.

Mr. Frank O. Salisbury's allegorical work, "The Passing of War," illustrating the line "when truth and justice triumph war shall cease," is singularly appropriate at the present moment, when in America and England, at any rate—a universal peace arbitration movement is being more than casually considered. The picture represents War as a skull seated on a massive sable charger being led away by a steel clad man-at-arms, while in the foreground are Truth and Justice.

Festivities on an Unprecedented Scale Are to Mark the British Coronation

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

WEST END residents and visitors are making preparations for such an unprecedented scale for a series of elaborate entertainments in the coronation period that a famine in servants is almost inevitable. Every large house will be thronged with families and their friends during the whole of June and part of July, and coronation garden parties, banquets, automobile trips and up river boating excursions will form part of the daily round of festivities which are being privately arranged in celebration of the crowning of King George and Queen Mary.

West End hotels, too, crowded as they will be with wealthy visitors from all parts of the world, will be the scene of many festive gatherings and private banquets on a most luxurious scale already have been planned. An inevitable consequence of this vast display of hospitality throughout London is an enormous demand for servants—personal attendants, doorkeepers and waiters particularly.

The supply is not nearly equal to the demand, and so serious is the shortage that hundreds of foreigners are being specially imported. British and foreign servants are not only getting more wages as the result of this demand, but they are actually picking and choosing their positions. They refuse to go to houses in the country. One woman in Scotland advertising for a man servant about a month ago, and although the position has been offered to many first-worthy men by an agency in London, they all declined it, preferring to remain in London for the coronation.

The secretary of the Geneva Association of Employers, a friendly society which provides trained assistants free of charge, says they are engaging servants at the rate of a hundred a day and yet that does not meet the demand on their resources.

"There never has been such a boom," he said. "West End residents are increasing their staffs, and there are scores of vacancies to be filled. Women servants are very scarce, and beyond that they are out of favor, being regarded as unreliable. There are very few kitchens, nowadays, where you can find women cooks. Men cooks, though they demand more wages, are preferred, and many are employed in houses for doing ordinary domestic work."

DUKE IS PREPARING FOR CANADIAN POST

Expects to Leave England Toward the End of September to Assume New Duties.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

He expects to leave England toward the end of September on board a vessel specially chartered for the purpose. He will be accompanied, of course, by the Duchess and probably Patricia, but it is now understood that Prince Arthur will not be attached to his father's staff, as was at first suggested, but will remain in England, in order to be of assistance to the King whenever his services are required.

The Duke expects to remain for the full five years of his appointment in the Dominion and hopes during that time to make himself personally acquainted with every portion of it. He and the Duchess are very fond of entertaining, and may be expected to make good use of the outlet for this at Government House, Ottawa. The Duke is now selecting the staff to accompany him.

SUGGESTS BEARDED TRIBUTE TO KING

Captain in the Royal Navy Puts Forward Plan to Commemorate Edward's Reign.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

AMONG the many suggestions for fittingly commemorating the reign of King Edward VII., perhaps the quaintest is that now put forward by Captain MacIlwaine, R. N. His suggestion is that the men of the British Empire, following the example of the late King, should put their razors aside and proceed to grow beards.

"King Edward," said Captain MacIlwaine, "not only grew a beard, but encouraged the growth among members of his personal staff. His brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, who was a naval officer, grew a beard. The present King, sharing the views of his father, grows a beard and makes his staff do the same.

"The beard is the exception, not the rule, among men of the present day, and it is incomprehensible that the manhood of the Empire, otherwise always so ready to accept a royal lead, should in this matter show such indifference, or worse, to the views both expressed and implied of their kings."

UNTUTORED, WINS ACADEMY FAME

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

A QUARTERMASTER SERGEANT in the Royal Engineers, who never had a lesson in painting in his life, has achieved success in having a picture accepted and hung in the Royal Academy.

The successful artist is E. W. J. Stevens, a draughtsman at the Fortification School at Chatham. The picture is a painting of the "Old Sallyport at Rochester," a study of old buildings.

"I have been fond of painting all my life," said Mr. Stevens to a correspondent, "but I have never had a single lesson. All I know I have picked up myself or learned from nature. The picture in the Academy represents only six hours' work. I have always had to draw and paint very rapidly. It is a necessity for military purposes. In doing sketches from a balloon, for example, which I have often done, you have to draw and paint very quickly.

"I have got paintings of places in which I have been stationed all over the world, and I have always trained myself to paint as rapidly as possible, whether in oils or water colors. The motto of the Engineers is 'Ubique'—'Everywhere'—but I think I am the first to demonstrate the doors of Burlington House as an exhibitor."

POOR COMPLEXIONS FOUND IN ENGLAND

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

MRS. VAN RENSSELAER CRUGER, the well known American writer, has just confided her opinion of the English maid and matron through the medium of a chatty little volume entitled "From Fog to Sun," just published by Messrs. Kegan, Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co. Complimentary and caustic by turn, Mrs. Cruger has a very unflattering opinion of the English complexion.

"One cannot look upon English complexions—of the very young, at least—when one realizes what wretched food they consume, and how much tea they drink, without comprehending that fogs have their uses."

She is a fervent admirer, however, of the English great lady. "When one reaches Paris one is," she writes, "in these days sadly conscious that a republic does not encourage elegance.

"One reflects that in toilette the teacher has been surpassed by her pupil. After the exquisite, graceful draperies of the nymphs who make garden parties and Olympian bazaars a patterns of rare exotics, after the startling beauty of these great ladies, 'tranquil and tall,' who adorn England with their stately loveliness, even the petite duchesses look squat in their abridged skirts and mannish headgear.

CORONATION SEATS HALF A FARTHING

This Was the Price for the First Edward, and the Rate Has Leaped Forward.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

IN view of the prices which are being asked for coronation seats, it is amusing to contemplate the steady increase in prices which has been going on from the time of William the Conqueror until now.

From the coronation of William I., at which it is curious to note no women were present, down to that of Henry III., a good place could be had for the smallest of the base copper coins brought over by the Normans.

The procession of Edward I. could be viewed in luxury for half a farthing; but under his successor the rate was doubled: and the same price was paid under Edward III. The same rate of progress occurred with Richard II. and Henry IV. and again under Henry V., and the twopenny scale was maintained down to Henry VII. Bluff King Hal, Edward VI., and Queen Mary lived in an extravagant age, and those who wished to see them going to their crowning were compelled to spend a groat, and this sum sprang up to sixpence for Queen Elizabeth.

For the first two Stuarts a shilling was willingly laid out, and for the last Pepys the rate was half a crown. For William and Mary, Anne and George I. a crown was paid, and when George II. was crowned there were lavish patriots who went up to half a guinea. After that the prices rose by leaps and bounds. A certain "Sir Edward" hired a first floor room to see the procession of George III. for "the small price of 100 guineas." The front seats in the gallery of Westminster Abbey were let at ten guineas apiece, and immense sums were asked for the stands along the line of route.

At the Victorian coronation seven hundred seats in front of Westminster Hospital were let at a guinea, and many of them fetched a premium of two guineas before the auspicious day arrived.

It is not yet quite certain what form of souvenir will be selected by King George to commemorate his forthcoming visit to India, but it may be recalled that on the Christmas following his tour in that country as Prince of Wales he had a commemorative card specially prepared for circulation among his Indian friends and officials. The case containing it was of pure white kid, with the royal monograms, while the Prince of Wales' feathers were in each corner on the one side and a representation of the Star of India on the reverse. The interior was gorgeously lined with moiré antique picked out with gold.

As soon as circumstances will permit, presentation portraits of King George will be prodigied for the courts of Berlin, Copenhagen, Christiania, and others, as well as the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg. There are also to be canvases for Government House, Calcutta; Rideau House, Ottawa; and the Government houses in Cape Town and Melbourne. The artists for these works have not yet been selected; but it is not intended to commission a series of replicas of the Fildes picture, and all these portraits will be intrusted to British painters.

As regards Calcutta, the idea is that the permanent portrait of the King-Emperor shall represent him in the robes which he will wear at the Delhi Darbar in December next. A special commission will be given for this purpose, and the artist will proceed to India in ample time, not with the royal cruiser, but by the ordinary route, so as to enable him to make preparations beforehand.

Mr. Isaac Snowman is engaged upon portraits of King George and Queen Mary in less formal surroundings, and several sittings have already been granted by them for this purpose.

CATS' MEAT WOMAN THE LADY OF GLIN

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

A ROMANTIC story, coupling an aged cats' meat woman of Hackney with a wealthy and titled Irish family, has come to light through the death of Mrs. Charlotte Fitzgerald Betts, who was at the same time a dealer in cats' meat and claimant to the title and estates of the Knight of Glin, of Glin Castle, county Limerick.

There seems to be no doubt that Mrs. or "Mother," Betts, as she was familiarly called, was the daughter of Dr. Thomas Fitzgerald, of Glin Castle and Trinity College, Dublin, and granddaughter of John Fitzgerald, Knight of Glin, who died in 1801.

The spirit of the warlike Geraldines, one of whose numerous titles she claimed, possessed Mrs. Betts, for she declined to bend her head before misfortune. She contracted a marriage which her relatives did not approve, and her savings were lost in the Liberator crash.

"We all liked her," said one of her neighbors. "She lived here as one of us, but we knew that for love she had married beneath her. Her husband had been at one time in a fairly good position, but bad health compelled him to give up his business and become a cats' meat man. When he died, some sixteen years ago, Mrs. Betts kept up the connection, but latterly, on account of her age—she was ninety-one years last September—she was only able to go out once or twice a week, and then it was in a Bath chair."

It is understood that "The Lady of Glin" has disposed in her will of the property she did not possess, one of the clauses providing a soup kitchen for the poor of South Hackney. Mrs. Betts was associated in her early days with Florence Nightingale, and in the East End the part she played during the smallpox epidemic of 1881 is still remembered.

KING AND QUEEN FOND OF DANCING

Some Good Stories Are Recalled Now That the Festivities Are Sanctioned.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

FROM the "features" that have been made already it becomes more and more apparent that this is going to be a "dancing season." King George and Queen Mary themselves are very fond of dancing, and they will be seen frequently at balls and dances as the season progresses, while the state ball at Buckingham Palace when the German Emperor and Empress are in London will, it is openly remarked in court circles, be one of the "poliest" functions that have ever been held there.

It will open, as usual, with the stately old fashioned quadrilles, when the King will have the Empress as partner and Queen Mary will be led through the maze by the Kaiser, who is another very keen dancing man. After the dance, however, there will be a distinctly lighter and more frivolous note than has been usual at these balls in the past and the slow waltz will not be allowed to monopolize the greater part of the programme as completely. There are, indeed, rumors of lancers being included in the programme, but this remains to be seen.

King George in the lancers recalls a very merry dance when His Majesty was Duke of York. It was at Malta, and a dance was organized, literally on the spur of the moment, on board one of the ships. The Duke was always willing to join in anything that promised a bit of fun, so in "record time" a ballroom was rigged up on the quarterdeck. It was agreed, since there was not a girl in the whole party, that those who were to take the ladies' parts should wear white handkerchiefs on their left sleeves.

Presently a "lady" approached the present King, and with what was meant to be a demure simper, asked for the pleasure of a dance.

"Go away, you juggins," was the royal retort; "I'm a 'lady' myself, but I've lost my blessed handkerchief. Have a cigar!"

Another amusing story, in which Queen Mary figured, is recalled. It was at a state ball at Buckingham Palace a few years ago. The late Prince Francis of Teck, the Queen's brother, went up to a scion of a noble house and, remarking that he was not dancing, asked if he could find him a few partners.

"No, thanks, old chap," was the reply, as the man sniffed a yawn; "dancing is such a bore, I think I will rest a little longer."

Presently the man in question—he is now a full fledged peer—ventured to approach the present Queen, and request the honor of a dance. Her brother "Frank," however, had been before him.

"Thank you," was the reply of the Queen, with a cool glance at him, "but dancing is such a bore, is it not?"

His Lordship went home.

HE STILL HOPES TO BURY SHAKESPEARE

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

EXCITEMENT in Chepstow is at fever heat over the find of what Dr. Orville Owen, of Detroit, who has been conducting for some months the search in the bed of the River Wye for the Bacon-Shakespeare secret, believes to be the roof of the hiding place in which Francis Bacon is supposed to have buried his key to the mystery of the authorship of the plays.

Mr. H. Pirie-Gordon, agent for the Duke of Beaufort, who is working with Dr. Owen, told an Express correspondent the spot at which is the cache, which is supposed to be the roof of the hiding place is situated with astounding clearness in a series of new Bacon ciphers which the explorers have obtained, which the Duke and his advisers are absolutely convinced are right.

The cache, Mr. Pirie-Gordon stated, is situated in the bed of the Roman ford. It is a large framework of timber, very massive, forty-one feet long and fifteen feet wide. It is intersected by nineteen beams, each twelve inches square. These form compartments filled with stones bettered into a blue grey clay. Underneath this heavy protecting casing the Duke of Beaufort hopes to lay bare the Bacon manuscripts of "Shakespeare's" plays.

"Seven individual cipher readings each point emphatically to this particular spot," said Mr. Pirie-Gordon. "They indicate the Roman ford; they allude to a rift immediately above it—meaning, obviously, the gap in the hills through which ran the old Roman road.

"The cipher also directs us to look for a mill, and surely enough a small brook runs into the river within a few feet of the cache.

"Undoubtedly the woodwork cannot be a Roman relic; it is far too fresh—in much too good a state of preservation.

"Nor is it likely to be the remains of a bridge over the ford. This has been suggested by several local antiquaries, and I have therefore gone to considerable pains to convince myself that no bridge has ever existed on the spot.

"I have consulted in the British Museum map room maps of the locality from 1577 to 1820. I have seen maps dated 1577, 1607, 1608, 1680, 1730, 1760, 1765, 1811 and 1820. In none of these is there any indication of a bridge.

"Besides, even if there had been one, the cache is situated in that part of the river bed where the current and tide are strongest, so that the portion of a bridge in this position would be first to disappear, not the last."

PICK BUCKINGHAM FOR ROYAL PARTY

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

KING GEORGE and Queen Mary are to give a garden party at Buckingham Palace in the season. This will be the first garden party there for several years, as King Edward usually held these functions at Windsor, though he took a great interest in the gardens at Buckingham Palace, which underwent a complete transformation during his reign.

There probably will be several thousand guests, though, of course, the space being limited, the lists will not be quite so comprehensive as those for the Windsor gatherings. On the occasion of former garden parties at Buckingham Palace the royal watermen in their quaint costumes rowed the guests about on the ornamental lake. Marquees are erected, where tea is served, one of them being reserved for royalty and a few favored guests.

The King and Queen will not appear at the opera until the court mourning for King Edward expires, on May 7, nor will the Princess Royal and the Duke of Fife be seen at Covent Garden until after that date, though they have their usual box for the season.

Princess Mary, the King and Queen's only daughter, who has been seen a good deal lately driving her cream ponies about Windsor, is growing into a pretty girl, very like her mother at the same age, and it is interesting to recall that Queen Mary in her girlhood was photographed driving such another pair of ponies.

Queen Mary, however, is not considered a notable horsewoman among royalties, and her daughter gives promise of being an excellent whip, and rides her riding pony in first rate style. All King Edward's children were fearless riders, with the exception of the Princess Royal, who never cared much for horsemanship. Queen Victoria Eugenie of Spain, who is, of course, a cousin of King George, was always a keen horsewoman, and in her childhood used to cause some alarm by her daring when in the saddle. A bad fall, which might have had very serious consequences, and which she experienced at Balmoral when in her early teens, did nothing to shake her cool nerve.

KING GIVES SECOND HORSE SHOW CUP

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THIS year's International Horse Show at Olympia already promises to eclipse all records. No fewer than twelve countries will be represented in the different competitions. In addition to the King Edward £2,500 Gold Cup, another cup of similar value, presented by King George, will be offered. The King has intimated his intention of being present awhile during the show, and on the first occasion he will be accompanied by Queen Mary. At almost every performance, however, the royal box will be occupied by some prominent member of the royal family or by several of the foreign royalties visiting London for the coronation.

Additional importance is lent to the show this year by reason of the fact that for the first time the United States, Germany, Russia and Austria are being officially represented in the military events. The other countries sending teams in addition to Great Britain are Canada, France, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Norway and Sweden.

The United States will be represented by five officers and five men, with ten horses. Lieutenant Barrett, of the Field Artillery, was the sole American representative last year. As the Americans are coming equipped with what are said to be the finest jumpers that can be got in the States, there is some talk going around that the British officers, with their ordinary regimental mounts, will be unfairly handicapped, although their horses are admitted to be superior to those of the United States cavalry. The French, Belgian and Italian officers are believed to stand in the way of both American and British chances of victory.

The principal event of the show will be the competition for the King Edward Cup for the best military team, a prize which was last year carried off by Belgium. The new King George Cup will be awarded to the most successful individual competitor in the military events. In the coaching events there is already a big American entry, including Mr Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Judge Moore, Mr. C. W. Watson, of Baltimore, and Mr. H. H. Westherbee, of New York. A new American competitor will be Mrs. Bowen, of New York, who recently purchased a team of four ponies from Mr. William Foster, of London, at the Madison Square Garden Horse Show.

The whole of the ninety boxes at Olympia have already been sold and the demand for seats is already greater than at any period in the history of the show. One well known firm of booking agents has paid £15,000 for a single block of seats.

Just Adapted.

Baltimore American:—"That rooster play in New York certainly has started some nonsense. Here is the sewing society wants to have a barnyard entertainment to start an aged woman's home."

"Well, why shouldn't they? Just the idea for a lot of old hens."

Baltimore American:—"Good gracious, man, don't sit this noise get on your nerves? How can you stand all the screeching and yelling in the street outside?"

"Used to it. I've got five daughters at home, and they all take singing lessons."

SICK HEADACHES AND NERVOUSNESS

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Mr. Lamont

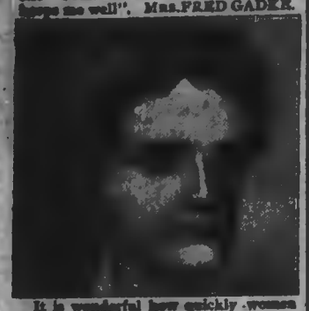
LAKELET, ONT., May 12th, 1910.

"It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This extreme Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking Doctor's medicine.

Constipation was also a source of great trouble for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life" but "Fruit-a-tives" has banished these troubles and I am a well woman.

When I started taking "Fruit-a-tives", I took four at a time, but have reduced the dose so that it is only necessary for me to take one in a week, and that one "Fruit-a-tives" tablet every week keeps me well". MRS. FRED GADEK.



It is wonderful how quickly women get better when taking "Fruit-a-tives". These famous fruit tablets relieve headaches and tone up the whole nervous system. They regulate the bowels, strengthen the stomach, stimulate the appetite, and take away that pain in the back. Pale, weak, nervous women should always use "Fruit-a-tives". 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HABITS OF CROWS, CURIOUS BIRDS

The Interesting Observations by Nelson R. Wood, a Taxidermist at Washington

"The popular belief that crows must have their tongues split before they can talk is a fallacy," said Mr. Nelson R. Wood, bird taxidermist at the Smithsonian Institution, the other day. "I have had crows for pets all my life, and the majority have talked without any doctoring whatever."

This statement was made after a visitor to Mr. Wood's workshop had been introduced to a big intelligent-looking crow, "Young Jack," who, upon being noticed, made a great commotion by hopping around in his cage.

Mr. Wood it is who stuffs the specimens which are on exhibition at the museum, and his little shop, which is in reality nothing more than an old barn, is a veritable "Old Curiosity Shop.' Big birds and little birds sit together in the various cases, or lie around dismally in bunches on the tables waiting to be mounted.

"The crow," Mr. Wood continued, after "Young Jack" had been made to keep quiet, "is the most intelligent of all birds, to my way of thinking, but is at the same time the most silly in its fear, which is apparently without foundation. That one is the fourth bird I have had within the last few years. The other three died during my absence in the summer.

"In those birds I noticed certain characteristics. One was afraid of a common soda cracker and a swinging door. Nothing could induce him to leave his perch if a cracker were put in the cage. Another was afraid of peanuts, and would go without eating for hours at a time should a peanut be put on the top of his food. Still another would be terrified at the sight of anything black, a ribbon or tie having the same effect as a whole suit."

From the fund of knowledge which Mr. Wood has stored up about crows, he is able to tell many interesting and amusing little tales which illustrate his statement concerning the intelligence of the bird.

"In my youth, I was a farmer boy," said Mr. Wood, "and one of the few pets I had was a crow, which my teacher had given me. No matter where I went, the crow would follow. When at work, Jack would be put a few feet away looking for something to eat. Sometimes I would find a worm, and would call to him, 'Come here, Jack, and see what I have found.' That was all that was needed to bring him to my side. The wild crows tried to get Jack to go with them, but he refused, and from that time on he lived in mortal terror of them.

"I have seen some wonderful instances of intelligence on the part of the crow. One old fellow, for instance, used to delight in taking the top of a blackening box in the top of an old board which stood against the house, and, getting in it, slide to the bottom. He found pleasure in that at all times. One of my Jacks used to like his bread soaked. One day he saw a box top. He took it, turned it over, and put his bread in it. Then carrying it to his trough, put it under the water for a second, and then proceeded to eat it.

"As to the crow's ability to talk, some will and others will never learn how, but I do not believe that splitting their tongues has anything to do with it. The first of the four birds I have had recently was a wonderful talker. Unlike the parrot, his conversation was intelligent, rather than simply imitative. For instance, if I said to him, 'Hello, Jack,' he would answer 'Hello' and not put on the 'Jack,' as so many parrots do when one says 'Hello, Polly.'

"But he would imitate me also. He found that when anyone called and said 'Hello, Wood,' my reply was a low 'Hello.' He tried in every way to imitate that low tone of mine, and finally succeeded. He would go over to his water trough, and with his head in the air would cry, 'Hello, Wood;' then down would go his head in the trough, and out would come the 'Hello,' just like mine.

"A crow is the most affectionate of birds, so far as I have been able to find out. Once a crow attaches himself to you he will always be your friend. Leave him, and he will be fond of but one person till you return, and when you do he will go back to you. Their affection is almost like that of a dog.

"A crow must have playthings, and he really plays with them. When I am busy hammering away, for instance, Young Jack hammers away in his cage with a stick he has. They are also the cleanest birds I know. Even while eating, if the tiniest bit gets on their plumage, they stop immediately and remove it.

"But I have never been able to understand their fear," concluded Mr. Wood. "It is so absolutely without reason. But, so far, I am glad to say, 'Young Jack' has not developed any special brand of fear."—Washington Star.

Itching Scalp Falling Hair

To prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove dandruff, allay itching and irritation of the scalp, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap, assisted by occasional dressings with Cuticura Ointment, suffice when other methods fail. Cuticura Soap and Ointment have been equally effective in the treatment of torturing, disfiguring scalp humours and the alarming loss of hair which so often results. For example, read how George E. Jefferson, 1316 Reed St., Philadelphia, tells of his remarkable cure:

"My disease started with a little pimple on my head. Then it began to itch. The more I would scratch, the worse it got until it spread all over my head. So I went to the doctor. But my head grew as raw as a piece of beef and my hair commenced to fall out in bunches. So I changed doctors. My head at this time was sore. I could not touch it. Then I decided to go to the hospital. They began to treat it, but it improved very slowly. For over three years I was a sufferer from this disease. I thought all hopes of a permanent cure were impossible. A friend, upon seeing the condition of my head—which was a mass of running corruption—asked me if I had tried the Cuticura Remedies. I told him nothing would do me any good; but being very anxious to be cured, I decided to try them. The first treatment brought immediate relief. My hair became alive and stopped falling out, all the scabs left my head and I am now well and have a full head of hair. I can truthfully say that it was entirely due to the use of the Cuticura Remedies."

AFRAID OF AN APPLE

Antipathy, like fear, is something unreasonable. It is an instinct, and therefore absolutely unconquerable.

Great men have suffered from strange antipathies. King Henry III. could not remain alone in a room with a cat. The Duc d'Epernon fainted at the sight of a leveret. Tycho Brahe was all in a tremor at the sight of a leveret or a fox. Marshal d'Albret was made ill if a young wild boar or a sucking-pig were served at the table where he sat. The famous scholar, Scaliger, shook all over at the sight of watercress.

Lord Bacon swooned away at an eclipse of the moon. Bayle went into convulsions at the sound of water running out of a faucet. Lamothe le Vayer had nervous convulsions on hearing any musical instrument. But the most extraordinary of all was King Ladislaw of Poland, who fled precipitately at the sight of an apple.

PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

Fort Vermillion Says it is Adapted to Mixed Farming

Sheridan Lawrence, Fort Vermillion, writes as follows of the Peace River country: "We have a great country for mixed farming, our great drawback being want of a market for produce. I have some six thousand bushels of wheat on hand, good stuff, some being raised five years ago. This last summer's crop was frozen, so was fed out to the stock.

"The majority of farmers here are farming in a small way, and sell for what they can get as soon as threshed to the trading companies, price ranging from 75 cents to $1.25 in trade.

"If you buy flour it is $5 to $6 per cwt., sugar $30 per cwt., nails $18 per cwt., dry fruits, at a bargain, four lbs. for a dollar, and everything else accordingly, so the margin is small for the farmer."

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

The Grim Circumstances of a Death in Montreal

While her husband was deliberately building a trap and arranging a noose to hang himself, Mrs. Jos. Bourdon, in wild alarm, went to the Recorder's Court office, Montreal, and asked the officials to intervene, to arrest him, or do anything to save his life. She did not have $3 for a warrant, so the officials sent the man a letter asking him to explain his conduct. That was the best thing they could think of. Bourdon was found hanging to the noose and quite dead. Many hours after he had tightened the noose about his neck a bailiff leisurely approached the house at 1119 C. Papineau Avenue, with the official document, asking Bourdon to explain his conduct. His widow had to explain that Bourdon was dead.

Evicted by the Sea

After living all her life in the cottage where she was born in 1837, Mrs. Knight has been compelled to move from her home in Beach Street, Pakefield, owing to the encroachment of the sea, which has washed away the cliff to within two feet of the back door. It is expected the cottage will disappear with the next high tide.

SKIN TRANSPLANTATION

Remarkable Operations by Breslau and Other German Surgeons

Details of remarkable operations in the domain of transplantation were given recently before the German Surgeons' Congress, sitting in Berlin. The transplantations were of skin, membranes, tissues, nerves, bones, and even articulations. Professor Knottner, Breslau, reported that he had replaced part of a femur, including the joint, with similar parts from a corpse. The patient died from a tumor some time later, and a post-mortem examination showed that the united bones had grown together perfectly. In two other similar cases the patients were alive and well. Professor Knottner expressed the opinion that it will henceforth be regularly possible to transplant sound articulation from corpses. Described as the inventor of the above-mentioned method of transplantation, Professor Lexer of Jena, gave an account of another triumph in this domain. He introduced to the Congress a lady patient who had attempted suicide by drinking sulphuric acid, and who had seriously burned and constricted the oesophagus. Dr. Lexer constructed an entirely new oesophagus out of intestine and a piece of outer skin, and grafted it on instead of the injured organ. It reached from the pharynx to the stomach, and proved completely successful, the patient being able to swallow solids and fluids without difficulty. This is apparently the first time that this operation has been performed, as several other surgeons present gave accounts of unsuccessful attempts.

BOGUS MONEY IN SCHOOL

The Building Used as Night for Making Spurious Money

A remarkable story of the manufacture of spurious money comes from Austria. The educational authorities had been advised that a village-schoolhouse needed repairing, and a commission arrived unexpectedly to examine the building. During the course of the inspection in one of the class-rooms a strange looking apparatus was found, which proved to be a press for the manufacture of bank-notes. Further searches revealed a small closet which had been turned into a regular mint, and there were bagfuls of ready-made silver and copper coins. It appears that the schoolhouse, where principles of morality were inculcated into the village youth by day, was employed at night by many of their parents to make their fortunes on somewhat different lines. Several prominent residents have been arrested.

CHOIR AT CASTLE

Those Who Will Sing at Investiture of Heir Hold Rehearsal

In order to test the acoustics of Carnarvon Castle, the choir selected to sing at the investiture of the Prince of Wales held a rehearsal within the walls, and under the baton of Mr. Jno. Williams, sang "Harlech," "Land of my fathers," the national anthem, and the famous Welsh hymn tune "Aberystwyth." They had a small but interested audience, which included the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is Constable of the Castle, and Mrs. Lloyd George, and the Hon. Sir Schomberg McDonnell.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

HAVE you a definite personal ideal?

Do I fail to make myself plain? I simply mean that everyone should have, besides an ideal of accomplishment, an embodied ideal in the shape of some human being whom he would like to resemble.

Admiration is the healthiest of human sentiments. Every strong admiration we feel for something good and fine lifts us a step nearer the infinite. The man who can seldom see anything in his fellow men to admire may know that he is probably at an intellectual and moral standstill.

It is the man who is continually looking up who usually gets up, not the man who doesn't believe there is anything up there worth looking at.

Now to admire character and ability in a general way is an excellent stimulant, but to focus one's admiration on some definite personality is to give this lever of admiration a vastly greater lifting power.

I don't believe there is a great man or woman today but could point to some other great man or woman and say: "Because he or she was so splendid I was helped to be what I am."

It is so easy to become concentrated on what one's self is doing, to think overmuch of what one has already accomplished, and to find progress-killing satisfaction in comparing one's achievements with what inferior men have done, instead of looking at them with the divine content that comes from comparing one's own performances with what really great men have done.

Now to fasten upon some person who has been really great in one's own particular line, to study him and admire him and love him, to remind one's self constantly of the pettiness of one's own achievements beside the greatness of his, and yet to be sinewed by his courage into following determinedly, no matter at how great a distance, in the path which he trod and towards the goal which he reached — this is to make the sentiment of admiration the strongest possible lever of self help.

If possible, select someone you not only admire, but for whom you have at least a touch of intellectual affinity — that is, someone whom you fancy you might have been congenial with and might even have been a bit like if the gods had seen fit to make you of the great men.

Will you pardon the egotism if I illustrate by telling you who my own literary ideal is?—Charles Lamb.

Somehow I feel as if, had I been multiplied to the nth power, I might have resembled him.

That may be more fancy, but anyhow I read him and love him and admire him and try to read and love myself into being just the tiniest bit like the dear, whimsical, dreamy philosopher who wrote things a hundred years ago that happen right in our daily lives to-day.

And I know it helps.

INSURING CORONATION

Lloyd's Betting Five to One That Ceremony Will Not be Postponed

A postponement of the Coronation would mean a heavy loss to many manufacturers and shopkeepers. Innumerable warehouses, particularly city warehouses, filled up with goods a great part of which would become practically valueless if the Coronation did not take place on the appointed date. But it is possible to insure against such calamities, and this peculiar sort of insurance is, underwriters say, being taken advantage of this year more than ever.

They are asking a 10 per cent. premium, so that for every $100 handed over now to the underwriters at Lloyd's $940 will be recovered if the Coronation is put off.

Most people know that King Edward was heavily insured by tradespeople and commercial men. Even before the public learned how grave his illness was the insurance premium had jumped to 20 per cent. When he died, over a million changed hands. Not only Lloyd's, but some 50 insurance companies were interested, though there are a few firms which refuse this sort of business.

But the insurance people were not so heavily hit as one might suppose, for most of the policies on King Edward's life had been taken out when he was very young, and was the Duke of Cornwall—largely by tenants of the Duchy with copyhold leases, or leases that expire when the person named in them dies. So that the insurance firms had already received more in premiums than they had to pay out.

It is for a similar reason that the young Prince of Wales, being Duke of Cornwall, is already heavily insured in the districts forming the Duchy.

But neither King Edward nor King George, nor the young Prince of Wales has ever had so much money hanging on his life as had Queen Victoria. This sort of insurance was unheard of till her accession, but she looked so delicate that it soon became popular. The insurance companies demanded—as they have always done since in the case of Royalties—a premium about half as large again as an ordinary case, owing to the fact that they could not, of course, have her examined by their medical officers. About half the London theatres insured her. Owing to the length of her reign they only recovered in the end about a third of what they had paid in premiums.

When the insurance companies have taken as much as they care for they pass the overflow on to Lloyd's. And it is Lloyd's that do all the Coronation insurance. It is all done in that famous long low room known all over the world as "The Room." There is a line of pews, called "boxes," down either side, each pew containing a narrow writing table.

In each sits an underwriter and his clerks. An insurance broker's clerk walks round the room. His firm may have had a commission to insure against the postponement of the Coronation for, say $25,000 at 20 per cent. He stops at one table and shows the "slip." The underwriter there jots his name down for $5,000 of the total.

At the next table the clerk may find an underwriter willing to be responsible for $2,500 at the suggested premium. And so the clerk goes from box to box till the whole sum is underwritten. All big responsibilities are shared in this way.

Though underwriters have got the guarantee of the whole house behind them, as have members of the Stock Exchange, a bill in Parliament gives it to them. But even without that an underwriter's financial soundness can be counted on, for before he is accepted as a member of "The Room," he has not only to undergo a searching examination into his career, but to make a deposit, the minimum being $25,000. So the Coronation money is pretty safe.

WOULD VERY OFTEN FAINT AWAY.

Doctor Said That Sometimes He Would Never Come Out of One.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, overwork, or confinement in an overheated or overcrowded room or public building makes them feel faint or dizzy.

If you neglect the warning the slight feeling of dizziness gives you, and fail to take treatment, there will be a gradual progression to something more serious.

There is no reason you should wait till your case becomes desperate before you avail yourself of a perfect cure by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. S. Chute, Whitby, Ont. writes:—"It is with gratitude I tell how your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills benefited me. I was very weak and run down, and had headache, nearly every day and would very often faint away.

"In fact, my doctor said that sometimes I would never come out of one of them. After taking eleven boxes of your pills I am glad to relate that it has been a number of years since I have had a fainting spell and scarcely have had a headache. Too much cannot be said in praise of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for in me they have effected a perfect cure."

The Village of Portsmouth was startled recently at midnight by the clanging of St. John's Church bell. Fearing the village was on fire the residents rushed into the streets. BIG NEW WHARF TO BE CONSTRUCTED HERE

$20,000 Placed in the Supplementary Estimates for A Dock South of Matthews Company Property---$35,000 for Three New Conservation Dams and $3,800 for A New Wharf at Mount Julian, Stony Lake.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, has interested himself in the interests of this constituency in securing Dominion government appropriations this year amounting to $67,800—to be expended as follows: Improved system of wharfage in Little Lake, Peterborough—$20,000; $35,000; for three conservation dams in the north country watershed, and $2,800 for wharf extension at Mount Julian, Stony Lake.

These works are rendered necessary by the approaching completion of the Trent Canal, to provide larger water supply, and wharfage advantages, such as increased traffic will demand, and in fact is already demanding.

From a city point of view, the wharfage proposal at Little Lake is the most important. The $20,000 appropriation this year is but a beginning of the expenditures that will be necessary to complete the proposed system.. It is proposed to acquire by purchase, or expropriation, the Hutton property, on George street, between the Matthews property and theMcDonald Estate property. Beginning at George street and south of the creek that empties into the Lake at this point, a concrete retaining wall will be extended eastward into deep water in the lake, a distance of 300 or 400 feet. Thence the retaining wall, turning at a right angle, will be continued southward and parallel to George street to land, at the McDonald property. The space thus enclosed by the retaining walls will be filled in with dredgings and other material and made solid for traffic. The creek will be dredged between the retaining wall and the crib-work at the south of the Matthews property. This channel will be wide enough and long enough for the berthing of steamers, two of which will be accommodated at one time on the north side of the new wharf and on the east front three more, so that, if found necessary, the new wharf can, when completed, accommodate five steamers at the same time. The new wharf will be situated opposite the street railway turn-out on George street, so that access is thus given directly to the wharf and the steamers it accommodates. As mentioned, the $20,000 appropriation for this wharf is only a beginning. It is expected that in all $35,000 or $50,000 will be needed to complete the work and give Peterborough a wharfage worthy of itself and of the completed canal, and constituting one of the several features of development and improvement of a greater Peterborough, suggested by the Examiner in November of last year.

An appropriation of $2,800 to improve the wharfage at Mount Julian, Stony Lake, will result in the provision of an extent of wharfage of about 60 x 150 feet, an improvement which the increasing steamer traffic, and the comfortable and convenient transfer of passengers and goods renders necessary in the interests of the public.

The appropriation of $36,000 for the erection of three new conservation dams in addition to the three erected last year will, still further secure a supply of water to the Trent system, adequate for navigation and power purposes.

When all these improvements are completed, it is expected that the expenditure will total between $75,000 and $100,000. This money is spent in the interests of the people, and the people are only receiving their dues in gaining these benefits. The port of Peterborough, in customs duties alone, contributed last year $450,000 to the revenue of the Dominion, an increase of $100,000 over the preceding year. So that in expending $100,000 for the permanent improvements mentioned, that will last and be of use for all time, there is being spent only the increase in customs revenue in one year.

Success of Mr. Stratton's Horses At Montreal Show Many Prizes Won

Montreal, Que., Thursday, May 11. —The attendance at the Horse Show to-day is much larger than either of the two previous days, and greater interest is being manifested in the show as it progresses.

Class 33.—This afternoon 13 Ladies' Saddle Horses made their appearance, ridden by ladies. Mrs. Col. Young, Montreal, rode "None Nicer" of Peterborough, and carried off the blue ribbon. The horses were in splendid form and the ladies all rode excellently.

Class 37.—At 4.20, 11 of the prettiest turnouts in Canada drove into the Arena in appropriate ladies' vehicles. This event was the Ladies' Single Turnout, horses to count 60 per cent., appointments 40 per cent., and to be driven by a lady. "Perfect Dream," of Peterborough, was driven by Mrs. Col. Young, of Montreal. The phaeton was a George the Fourth, made by Bruster of New York, and the harness was made in England, and the appointments were complete in many of the entries. The ladies all dressed in their best with their pretty hats and gowns, lent charming colour and variety to the occasion, but when the blue ribbon was placed on "Perfect Dream" the lady and her footman smiled the smile of justifiable triumph. Mrs Meredith, wife of the Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Montreal, was awarded second prize. It was a very handsome turnout, driven by herself. The judges of this class were from New York and expressed themselves as being well pleased with the event. They all stated that they never saw in Madison Square Gardens, New York, a prettier turnout than the first, second and third prize.

Class 34.—In the evening "My Pride" was shown in a two-wheeled vehicle in the 15.1 and over class and came out of a class of 15 with the red ribbon; Col. Grey taking the blue ribbon.

Class 42.—At 9.40 in the evening, 17 high-steppers, not exceeding 15.2, pranced into the ring. An hour was devoted to this class ,the judges having to take a little time before coming to a conclusion. "Perfect Dream" carried off the red ribbon in splendid style. "Flourish," a newly imported horse, the property of Hon. Robert Beith, of Bowmanville, which took the first prize at the Olympia Exhibition, England, carried off the blue ribbon. This was a hard class for the judges, as 17 beautiful high steppers were there all ablaze.

Class (61) Nine saddle horses, ladies to drive, second "None Nicer."

Examined Michael Fraser In Famous Marriage Case

MIDLAND, MAY 13.—Four distinguished gentlemen, three judges and court stenographers, landed in this town quietly yesterday afternoon, and were driven immediately to Bala Castle, the residence of the aged and wealthy Michael Fraser, whose blood relations are suing for the annulment of his marriage to Nurse Robertson. They conducted a personal examination of Fraser, and left town just as quietly this morning, giving no indication of their finding. The feeling in town here is much in favour of Mrs. Fraser, largely on the score that the old man has been well cared for since she married him.

AGED COUPLE'S HOME BURNED

Yesterday afternoon during the progress of the high wind storm, a fire broke out in the residence of Mr. Jas. Hancock situated on the North East corner of Ops, near Dunsford.

The house, which is a frame one, burned with lightning rapidity, and Mrs. Hancock, who was alone, was only able to save a couple of feather beds. The fire started by a spark from the chimney, which lodged in a woodpile near the house. There was a small insurance on the house, but the contents are a total loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Hancock are an aged couple, and great sympathy is being expressed for them in their loss.—Lindsay Post.

BAD FIRE AT KEENE

G. T. Gall's General Store With Stock Valued at $7000 Totally Destroyed by Fire Last Night—Other Buildings Damaged

A BUCKET BRIGADE

KEENE, MAY 13.—Mr. G. T. Gall's large general store was totally destroyed with its contents by a fire, which broke out about eleven o'clock last night. The blaze started in the north west corner of the building and fanned by the strong north-west wind made rapid headway, sweeping through the store and threatening other buildings in the neighbourhood.

The Village has no fire fighting apparatus and the best the citizens could do was to form a bucket brigade, whose efforts, although futile against the fire in Mr. Gall's property, were successful in saving the adjoining property. At one stage four old buildings in the neighbourhood were on fire, and the situation had assumed a very threatening aspect. However, by heroic efforts, these incipient fires were extinguished before they could make much progress and the loss was confined to the Gall store, which was completely wiped out.

The loss to Mr. Gall is estimated at $7,000 and there is insurance of $2,500. The building, which is owned by Mr. Fred English of Ottawa, was a frame structure and was estimated at $1,500.

SPLENDID CONCERT

The last of the series of indoor band concerts under the auspices of the 57th band was given last night in the armouries before a large crowd, who were most enthusiastic in their applause. The band's numbers included Rossini's overture, "The Barber of Seville" which was brilliantly played. The programme was one of the best of the season.

A CORRECTION

May 10th issue of the Examiner gave in the reports made at the meeting of the City Water Commissioners, the following: "A petition of a 4 inch water main on Dixon street, from Victoria avenue, to Smith street." It should have read: "Apetition for a 4 inch water main on Victoria avenue, from Reid street, to Dixon street."—Granted. Another report stated that Mrs. Parker, of Parker's Dye Works, was granted a 4 3-4 inch pipe, when it should have stated, granted an additional 1 3-4 inches to the present pipe.

NEW LODGE ROOM'S OPENED

The New Quarters of the Norwood Masonic Lodge were Dedicated Yesterday.

A very enjoyable function took place at Norwood yesterday afternoon the occasion being the dedication of the new Masonic Lodge No. 223. Judge McWatt of Sarnia, assisted by Past Grand Master Judge Harding, of Lindsay, and representatives of the Grand Lodge took a prominent part in the ceremonies.

In the evening areception was given in the lodge room, which was largely attended by the ladies and gentlemen, after which the party adjourned to the town hall, where a banquet was provided.

The Chairman of the evening was W. Bro. Pickford of Norwood Lodge, and who made a very efficient officer, pushing the details of the business through with promptitude. Responses to the several toasts were made by the P. G. M., W. Bro. Judge Harding, of Lindsay; Rgt. W. Bro. McLeod, Newcastle; Bro. Pickens, and Rev. W. Bro. Gall, of Norwood. Bro. Dobbin and Rgt. W. Bro. Kenner and Bro. F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, W. Bro. Craig, of Norwood.

To the programme, Miss Pearce contributed an instrumental solo. Miss Dodgeld, a song, Miss Pearce playing the accompaniment.

The proceedings came to an end somewhat abruptly, as at 12 o'clock the electric lights were turned off and the gathering dispersed in the dark, a rather unfortunate way of closing up a very delightful evening.

Great credit is due the Committee of Norwood Lodge, who handled the affair. Everything was done that good hospitality could think of or suggest and the records of the books will chronicle a very pronounced success.

OBITUARY

MISS EMELINE HAZLITT.

Entered into rest at 10 p.m., May 12th, 1911, Emeline Hazlitt.

Miss Emeline Hazlitt was the daughter of the late John Hazlitt, Esq., of Otonabee.

For ten years Miss Hazlitt had resided in Peterborough with her mother, who predeceased her a year and nine months ago. Since the death of her mother, Miss Hazlitt's health has been steadily declining. In May, 1910, she took a trip to the west, hoping that she might regain her strength. About four months ago she returned to Peterborough. Since that time she had been a confirmed invalid, at times suffering intense pain. She passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Sanderson, yesterday. Miss Hazlitt was a faithful member of St. Paul's church. While not able to engage actively in church work, she will always be remembered as one who rendered valuable assistance in connection with the W.F.M.S. She is survived by one brother, Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, of Otonabee and six sisters, Mrs. Howson, Quill Lake, Mrs. Millar, Toronto, Mrs. Lanoashire, Otonabee, Mrs. Dickson, Quill Lake, Mrs. Sanderson, Smith and Mrs. Johnston, Lakefield.

Suffice it—if my good and ill unreckoned
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Into my fitting place.
Some sheltering asade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expanses
The river of Thy peace.
There from the music roundabout me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath Thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

The funeral will take place on Monday, May 15, at 2 p.m. from the residence of Mr. Frank Sanderson, Chemong Road to Little Lake cemetery.

MR. LAWRENCE O'CONNOR.

The many friends of Mr. Lawrence O'Connor, in Peterborough and Ennismore, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred this Saturday morning at his home in the township of Ennismore. Mr. O'Connor has been ailing for some time and his end was not unexpected, but death came more suddenly and unexpected than anticipated, this morning.

Mr. O'Connor was forty-nine years of age and unmarried, and was the third eldest son of the late Thomas O'Connor of Ennismore, one of the pioneers of that township. Mr. O'Connor resided in Peterborough for some years and was occupied in connection with the operations of the Peterborough Radial Railway. He was of a retiring disposition, had a host of friends in Peterborough and Ennismore, who will regret to learn of his demise in the prime of life. He leaves to mourn his loss four brothers and one sister. The brothers are John of Peterborough, James of Ottawa, Patrick C. of Guelph, and Thomas of Seattle, Wash, and his sister, Miss Katharine, who resides on the homestead Ennismore.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, lot 6, concession 6, Ennismore, on Monday morning at nine o'clock and proceed to St. Martin's church and thence to St. Martin's cemetery for interment.

MAYOR MORROW EXPLAINS ACTION OF THE COUNCIL

His Worship Deals With the Matter of the Industrial Commissioner and Gives at Length the Reasons of the Council in Deciding To Dispense With the Services of the Industrial Commissioner—The Power Report Episode.

Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir:—The decision of the city council not to engage Mr. Duggan as Industrial Commissioner has been freely and severely criticized in some quarters, and while it will not be necessary to reply to all that has been said and published, yet, with your permission, it might not be amiss to present some of the facts by which the action of the council was influenced and determined.

There were two main factors to consider when the question came up. One was, what had been accomplished by the Commissioner during the past year, and, jugging from that, whether the council would be justified in spending sufficient of the peoples' money to continue him in the office as an official of the council. Mr. Duggan has pointed to two industries as the fruit of his work: The Bonnerworth Co., and Gold Medal Camp Furniture Co. As to the first, Mr. Bonner wrote me, and I handed his letter over to the Commissioner, who invited Mr. Bonner to visit Peterborough. Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth came, met members of the council, and the whole matter of the bargain between them and the city was made and concluded by the members of the council. As to the other firm, which we hope will build a factory here ,its representatives visited Peterborough, and selected a site, before Mr. Duggan came to Peterborough. On this phase of the matter ,therefore, there did not appear to be sufficient result to satisfy the council.

The other main factor was his actions in the power matter, in which his course has not been straightforward. Leaving out the scheme which he took up last year, and in connection with which he visited lake front towns, but which apparently fell through, let us consider what occurred this year. At the organization meeting of the council, Ald. Bradburn and myself were appointed a Power Committee. We promptly took action in more than one direction, and while the members of the council are aware of what has been done by the committee, it would not at present be in the public interest to refer to more than the application made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. In January 3, as Mayor, wrote to the Hon. Adam Beck and asked him to have that Commission make a report on the powers from Lakefield to Hastings, for the purpose of advising the Council as to which of the powers it would be best for the city to secure, or from which to procure power. Mr. Beck replied the Commission would do so. Later the City Solicitor saw Mr. Beck in Toronto, urged an early report and was assured that no time would be lost, and that the engineers would consult me when they came to Peterborough. I also interviewed Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., about the expected report, and he saw Mr. Beck more than once to make doubly sure that no time would be lost. Then Mr. Bradburn informed me that the report was about ready, and that Mr. Beck would be pleased to assist the council further in any way that he could. The members of the council were called together, and Mr. Bradburn was asked to meet them, which he did, and repeated to them the information, and Mr. Beck's offer. The council decided that it would be well to have Mr. Beck meet the council, and give any explanations in connection with the report that he might consider useful, and Mr. Bradburn was asked to convey the invitation to the Minister, which he readily consented to do.

Permit a digression here. Mr. Duggan knew that the application had been made for this report within a couple of days after the application had been sent in, yet he had members of the council come to his office, when he talked to them about power, and gave them to understand that the Power Committee would not do anything, because I was in some way interested in the Electric Power Co., and was opposed to securing power for the city.

Again later, once at any rate, he repeated this and endeavored to cause suspicion and division in the council, and to make my colleagues believe that I was acting contrary to the city's interests; his reasons for this can be readily imagined. At the same time, he knew one of the steps Ald. Bradburn and I had taken, and his insinuations in regard to myself were entirely untrue. I have not, directly or indirectly, near or remote, any interest in the Electric Power Co., or any other electric or power company, and if any relative or business associate of mine has any interest in any such company, I am not aware of it. No one has ever tried to influence me nor, so far as I know, Ald. Bradburn, in the matter; and as I said, Mr. Duggan knew one of the steps we had taken and must have known that in interfering with the action of the council, he was acting in an improper and discourteous manner.

Returning to the direct subject of the power report, Mr. T. E. Bradburn went to Toronto and tried to see Mr. Beck, but as is well known he is one of the busiest men in the province, and Mr. Bradburn did not see him that day. Mr. Duggan was in Toronto the same day, remained over the second day, and finally saw Mr. Beck, and got him to come to Peterborough with the report to a meeting of citizens, privately invited to a private house. Mr. Beck, however chivalrous he may be in the matter understood that Mr. Duggan represented the city, and that he (Mr. Beck) was coming to an authorized meeting. The report was read there and published before it reached the council.

Mr. Duggan obtained possession of a report that he knew belonged to the Council, and made use of it as he saw fit.

There have been several explanations given in defence of this. At the gathering where the report was presented Mr. Duggan was given credit, as the newspapers reports show, for having the report made by the Hydro-Electric Commission, and accepted it. He treated the report as if it were his by giving it out. Yet he knew that the Mayor had made the application on behalf of the council that secured the report. Then we were told at the council meeting by the deputation from the Board of Trade, that Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report, although Mr. Duggan had informed citizens that it would be at the meeting, several days before it was held, and before he knew Mr. Beck would come, showing that his getting possession of the report was premeditated. He also, according to his advocate, Mr. O'Connell, says, that he asked me in January to apply for the report. That is untrue. He did not suggest a report from the Commission, and the obtaining of that report was an act entirely due to the Committee alone, in conjunction with Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

Further, when the engineers came to the city and saw Mr. Duggan, who was aware the council had taken action in the matter, in some way it happened that the engineers did not call on me or any member of the council, as Mr. Beck said they would do, and expected they would do, and in addition to this the public was led to believe that the city had no option but the Ontario Power Co's property, which was not correct.

The council is censured by the learned counsel who has advocated Mr. Duggan's cause, because they did not take measures to have the votes brought out on the Independent Tire Co. Bylaw, but Mr. Duggan had a meeting to organize for that purpose, and the meeting was reported in the press, but I was not informed of the meeting, nor I believe was any member of the Council. If, then, the council had attempted to take any action it would have been in conflict with the Commissioner's efforts, and would have caused confusion, which would have done no good.

Mr. O'Connell says the members of the council have misconceived the position they occupy. Again, he is wrong. We know that the city is not yet governed by Commission, but that we have been elected by the people to transact their business; that we have taken an obligation to do it to the best of our ability, and that we are doing, and we do not propose to be driven by a few citizens, however estimable they may be, into any action that we are convinced would be contrary to the interests of the citizens, whose trustees we are. We are responsible to the people for our course—and let me tell Mr. O'Connell that not for the position of Mayor of the city, and it is one I am very proud of holding, would I take a course that I was convinced was not in the interests of the ratepayers. And further let me tell him that I believe the action of the council meets with approval of a large majority of the electors, and that most of those whom he or Mr. Duggan has succeeded in enlisting as his supporters in this matter have become so because they had been misled, and, still further, that he (Mr. O'Connell) has been seriously misled himself.

It is said that the members of the council are displeased because they were ignored by the Commissioner in the matter of the report. That is quite true; the report should have come to the council. The council is a representative body; its members are chosen by the people, and it represents the people. The members consequently resent being ignored, and their business taken out of their hands. The report was asked for by me for the council, and Mr. Duggan had not a shadow of a claim to it, and no reason whatever for the course he pursued.

But this is not merely a question of the dignity of the council, neither does the question stop with the important question of the effect on the business and the interests of the city. That is one reason that has so far kept me silent.

In the report it is stated that the price of the Otonabee Power Co's property is $225,000, and that price is reasonable, and details are given. Such a statement in the report coming into the hands of council would be quite proper. The council could then take up the matter with the company, make further enquiries, and endeavor when that report is placed in the hands when the report is placed in the hands of the Otonabee Power Co., as it was through Mr. Duggan's interference, there is no longer any probability of the council making any bargain with that company except by paying them

BIG NEW WHARF TO BE CONSTRUCTED HERE

$20,000 Placed in the Supplementary Estimates for A Dock South of Matthews Company Property---$35,000 for Three New Conservation Dams and $3,000 for A New Wharf at Mount Julian, Stony Lake.

Hon. J. H. Stratton, has interested himself in the interests of this constituency in securing Dominion government appropriations this year amounting to $57,300—to be expended as follows: Improved system of wharfage in Little Lake, Peterborough—$20,000; $35,000, for three conservation dams in the north country watersheds, and $2,300 for wharf extension at Mount Julian, Stony Lake.

These works are rendered necessary by the approaching completion of the Trent Canal, to provide larger water supply, and wharfage advantages, such as increased traffic will demand, and in fact is already demanding.

From a city point of view, the wharfage proposal at Little Lake is the most important. The $20,000 appropriation this year is but a beginning of the expenditures that will be necessary to complete the proposed system.. It is proposed to acquire by purchase, or expropriation, the Hatton property, on George street, between the Matthews property and theMcDonald Estate property. Beginning at George street and south of the creek that empties into the Lake at this point, a concrete retaining wall will be extended eastward into deep water in the lake, a distance of 300 or 400 feet. Thence the retaining wall, turning at a right angle, will be continued southward and parallel to George street to land, at the McDonald property. The space thus enclosed by the retaining walls will be filled in with dredgings and other material and made solid for traffic. The creek will be dredged between the retaining wall and the crib-work at the south of the Matthews property. This channel will be wide enough and long enough for the berthing of steamers, two of which will be accommodated at one time on the north side of the new wharf and on the east front three more, so that, if found necessary, the new wharf can, when completed, accommodate five steamers at the same time. The new wharf will be situated opposite the street railway turn-out on George street, so that access is thus given directly to the wharf and the steamers it accommodates. As mentioned, the $20,000 appropriation for this wharf is only a beginning. It is expected that in all $35,000 of $50,000 will be needed to complete the work and give Peterborough a wharfage worthy of itself and of the completed canal, and constituting one of the several features of development and improvement of a greater Peterborough, suggested by the Examiner in November of last year.

An appropriation of $2,300 to improve the wharfage at Mount Julian, Stony Lake, will result in the provision of an extent of wharfage of about 68 x 150 feet, an improvement which the increasing steamer traffic, and the comfortable and convenient transfer of passengers and goods renders necessary in the interests of the public.

The appropriation of $35,000 for the erection of three new conservation dams in addition to the three erected last year will, still further secure a supply of water to the Trent system, adequate for navigation and power purposes.

When all these improvements are completed, it is expected that the expenditure will total between $75,000 and $100,000. This money is spent in the interests of the people, and the people are only receiving their dues in gaining these benefits. The port of Peterborough, in customs duties alone, contributed last year $450,000 to the revenue of the Dominion, an increase of $100,000 over the preceding year. So that in expending $100,000 for the permanent improvements mentioned, that will last and be of use for all time, there is being spent only the increase in customs revenue in one year.

Success of Mr. Stratton's Horses At Montreal Show Many Prizes Won

Montreal, Que., Thursday, May 11. —The attendance at the Horse Show to-day is much larger than either of the two previous days, and greater interest is being manifested in the show as it progresses.

Class 62.—This afternoon 13 Ladies' Saddle Horses made their appearance, ridden by ladies. Mrs. Col. Young, Montreal, rode "None Nicer" of Peterborough, and carried off the blue ribbon. The horses were in splendid form and the ladies all rode excellently.

Class 37.—At 4.20, 11 of the prettiest turnouts in Canada drove into the Arena in appropriate ladies' vehicles. This event was the Ladies' Single Turnout, horses to count 60 per cent., appointments 40 per cent., and to be driven by a lady. "Perfect Dream," of Peterborough, was driven by Mrs. Col. Young, of Montreal. The phaeton was a George the Fourth, made by Bruster of New York, and the harness was made in England, and the appointments were complete in many of the entries. The ladies all dressed in their best with their pretty hats and gowns, lent charming colour and variety to the occasion, but when the blue ribbon was placed on "Perfect Dream" the lady and her footman smiled the smile of justifiable triumph. Mrs. Meredith, wife of the Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Montreal, was awarded second prize. It was a very handsome turnout driven by herself. The judges of this class were from New York and expressed themselves as being well pleased with the event. They all stated that they never saw in Madison Square Gardens, New York, a prettier turnout than the first, second and third prize.

Class 34.—In the evening "My Pride" was shown in a two-wheeled vehicle in the 15.1 and over class and came out of a class of 15 with the red ribbon; Col. Grey taking the blue ribbon.

Class 42.—At 9.40 in the evening, 17 high-steppers, not exceeding 15.2, pranced into the ring. An hour was devoted to this class ,the judges having to take a little time before coming to a conclusion. "Perfect Dream" carried off the red ribbon in splendid style. "Flourish," a newly imported horse, the property of Hon. Robert Beith, of Bowmanville, which took the first prize at the Olympia Exhibition, England, carried off the blue ribbon. This was a hard class for the judges, as 17 beautiful high steppers were there all ablaze.

Examined Michael Fraser In Famous Marriage Case

MIDLAND, MAY 13.—Four distinguished gentlemen, three judges and court stenographers, landed in this town quietly yesterday afternoon, and were driven immediately to Bala Castle, the residence of the aged and wealthy Michael Fraser, whose blood relations are suing for the annulment of his marriage to Nurse Robertson. They conducted a personal examination of Fraser, and left town just as quietly this morning, giving no indication of their finding. The feeling in town here is much in favour of Mrs. Fraser, largely on the score that the old man has been well cared for since she married him.

BAD FIRE AT KEENE

G. T. Gall's General Store With Stock Valued at $7000 Totally Destroyed by Fire Last Night—Other Buildings Damaged

A BUCKET BRIGADE

KEENE, MAY 12.—Mr. G. T. Gall's large general store was totally destroyed with its contents by a fire, which broke out about eleven o'clock last night. The blaze started in the north west corner of the building and fanned by the strong north-west wind made rapid headway, sweeping through the store and threatening other buildings in the neighbourhood.

The Village has no fire fighting apparatus and the best the citizens could do was to form a bucket brigade, whose efforts, although futile against the fire in Mr. Gall's property, were successful in saving the adjoining property. At one stage four old buildings in the neighbourhood were on fire, and the situation had assumed a very threatening aspect. However, by heroic efforts, these incipient fires were extinguished before they could make much progress and the loss was confined to the Gall store, which was completely wiped out.

The loss to Mr. Gall is estimated at $7,000 and there is insurance of $2,500. The building, which is owned by Mr. Fred English of Ottawa, was a frame structure and was estimated at $1,500.

ERECTED NEW SIGN

One of the city's enterprising furriers, in the person of Mr. Wm. E. Lech, has had erected by the J. J. Turner & Son, a brand new brass-lettered sign. While being of an undemonstrative nature, the sign is one that will serve to convey to the public the whereabouts of one of our most reliable merchants, whose first thought is to cater to the best interests of their customers.

SPLENDID CONCERT

The last of the series of indoor band concerts under the auspices of the 57th band was given last night in the armouries before a large crowd, who were most enthusiastic in their applause. The band was assisted by Miss Edna Pringle, soprano soloist, whose vocal numbers were much appreciated items on the programme. In each case she had to respond to an encore. The band's numbers included Rossini's overture, "The Barber of Seville" which was brilliantly played. The programme was one of the best of the season.

A CORRECTION

May 10th issue of the Examiner gave in the reports made at the meeting of the City Water Commissioners, the following: "A petition of a 4 inch water main on Dixon street, from Victoria avenue, to Smith street." It should have read: "Apetition for a 4 inch water main on Victoria avenue, from Reid street, to Dixon street."—Granted. Another report stated that Mrs. Parker, of Parker's Dye Works, was granted a 4 3-4 inch pipe, when it should have stated, granted an additional 1 3-4 inches to the present pipe.

NEW LODGE ROOM'S OPENED

The New Quarters of the Norwood Masonic Lodge were Dedicated Yesterday.

A very enjoyable function took place at Norwood yesterday afternoon the occasion being the dedication of the new Masonic Lodge No. 228. The new rooms are considered to be one of the finest and best fitted-up apartments that will be found in Ontario to-day. Grand Master W. M. Bro. Judge McWatt of Sarnia, assisted by Past Grand Master Judge Harding, of Lindsay, and representatives of the Grand Lodge took a prominent part in the ceremonies.

In the evening areception was given in the lodge room, which was largely attended by the ladies and gentlemen, after which the party adjourned to the town hall, where a banquet was provided.

The Chairman of the evening was W. Bro. Pickford of Norwood Lodge, and who made a very efficient officer, pushing the details of the business through with promptitude. Responses to the several toasts were made by the P. G. M., W. Bro. Judge Harding, of Lindsay; Bgt. W. Bro. McLeod, Newcastle; Bro. Pickens, and Rev. W. Bro. Gall, of Norwood. Bro. Dobbin and Bgt. W. Bro. Kenner and Bro. F. D. Kerr, Peterborough, W. Bro. Craig, of Norwood.

To the programme, Miss Pearce contributed an instrumental solo, Miss Duffield, a song, Miss Pearce playing the accompaniment.

The proceedings came to an end somewhat abruptly, as at 12 o'clock the electric lights were turned off and the gathering dispersed in the dark, a rather unfortunate way of closing up a very delightful evening.

Great credit is due the Committee of Norwood Lodge, who handled the affair. Everything was done that good hospitality could think of or suggest and the records of the books will chronicle a very pronounced success.

OBITUARY

MISS EMELINE HAZLITT.

Entered into rest at 10 p.m., May 12th, 1911, Emeline Hazlitt.

Miss Emeline Hazlitt was the daughter of the late John Hazlitt, Esq., of Otonabee.

For ten years Miss Hazlitt had resided in Peterborough with her mother, who predeceased her a year and one half ago. Since the death of her mother, Miss Hazlitt's health has been steadily declining. In May, 1910, she took a trip to the west, hoping that she might regain her strength. About four months ago she returned to Peterborough. Since that time she had been a confirmed invalid, at times suffering intense pain. She passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Sanderson, yesterday. Miss Hazlitt was a faithful member of St. Paul's church. While not able to engage actively in church work, she will always be remembered as one who rendered valuable assistance in connection with the W.F.M.S. She is survived by one brother, Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, of Otonabee and six sisters, Mrs. Howson, Quill Lake, Mrs. Millar, Toronto, Mrs. Lancashire, Otonabee, Mrs. Dickson, Quill Lake, Mrs. Sanderson, Smith and Mrs. Johnston, Lakefield.

Suffice it—if my good and ill unreckoned
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Into my fitting place.
Some sheltering shade where sun and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expanuions
The river of Thy peace.
There from the music roundabout me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath Thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

The funeral will take place on Monday, May 15, at 2 p.m. from the residence of Mr. Frank Sanderson, Chemong Road to Little Lake cemetery.

MR. LAWRENCE O'CONNOR.

The many friends of Mr. Lawrence O'Connor, in Peterborough and Ennismore, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred this Saturday morning at his home in the township of Ennismore. Mr. O'Connor has been ailing for some time and his end was not unexpected, but death came more suddenly and unexpected than anticipated, this morning.

Mr. O'Connor was forty-nine years of age and unmarried, and was the third eldest son of the late Thomas O'Connor of Ennismore, one of the pioneers of that township. Mr. O'Connor resided in Peterborough for some years and was occupied in connection with the operations of the Peterborough Radial Railway. He was of a retiring disposition, had a host of friends in Peterborough and Ennismore, who will regret to learn of his demise in the prime of life. He leaves to mourn his loss four brothers and one sister. The brothers are John of Peterborough, James of Ottawa, Patrick C. of Guelph, and Thomas of Seattle, Wash. and his sister, Miss Katharine, who resides on the homestead Ennismore.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, lot 6, concession 6, Ennismore, on Monday morning at nine o'clock and proceed to St. Martin's church and thence to St. Martin's cemetery for interment.

MAYOR MORROW EXPLAINS ACTION OF THE COUNCIL

His Worship Deals With the Matter of the Industrial Commissioner and Gives at Length the Reasons of the Council in Deciding To Dispense With the Services of the Industrial Commissioner---The Power Report Episode.

Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir:—The decision of the city council not to engage Mr. Duggan as Industrial Commissioner has been freely and severely criticised in some quarters, and while it will not be necessary to reply to all that has been said and published, yet, with your permission, it might not be amiss to present some of the facts by which the action of the council was influenced and determined.

There were two main factors to consider when the question came up. One was, what had been accomplished by the Commissioner during the past year, and, judging from that, whether the council would be justified in spending sufficient of the peoples' money to continue him in the office as an official of the council. Mr. Duggan has pointed to two industries as the fruit of his work: The Bonnerworth Co., and Gold Medal Camp Furniture Co. As to the first, Mr. Bonner wrote me, and I handed his letter over to the Commissioner, who invited Mr. Bonner to visit Peterborough. Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth came, met members of the council, and the whole matter of the bargain between them and the city was made and concluded by the members of the council. As to the other firm, which we hope will build a factory here ,its representatives visited Peterborough, and selected a site, before Mr. Duggan came to Peterborough. On this phase of the matter ,therefore, there did not appear to be sufficient result to satisfy the council.

The other main factor was his actions in the power matter, in which his course has not been straightforward. Leaving out the scheme which he took up last year, and in connection with which he visted lake front towns, but which apparently fell through, let us consider what occurred this year. At the organization meeting of the council, Ald. Bradburn and myself were appointed a Power Committee. We promptly took action in more than one direction, and while the members of the council are aware of what has been done by the committee, it would not at present be in the public interest to refer to more than the application made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. In January 1, as Mayor, wrote to the Hon. Adam Beck and asked him to have that Commission make a report on the powers from Lakefield to Hastings, for the purpose of advising the Council as to which of the powers it would be best for the city to secure, or from which to procure power. Mr. Beck replied the Commission would do so. Later the City Solicitor saw Mr. Beck in Toronto, urged an early report and was assured that no time would be lost, and that the engineers would consult me when they came to Peterborough. I also interviewed Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., about the expected report, and he saw Mr. Beck more than once to make doubly sure that no time would be lost. Then Mr. Bradburn informed me that the report was about ready, and that Mr. Beck would be pleased to assist the council further in any way that he could. The members of the council were called together, and Mr. Bradburn was asked to meet them, which he did, and repeated to them the information, and Mr. Beck's offer. The council decided that it would be well to have Mr. Beck meet the council, and give any explanations in connection with the report that he might consider useful, and Mr. Bradburn was asked to convey the invitation to the Minister, which he readily consented to do.

Permit a digression here. Mr. Duggan knew that the application had been made for this report within a couple of days after the application had been sent in, yet he had members of the council come to his office, when he talked to them about power, and gave them to understand that the Power Committee would not do anything, because I was in some way interested in the Electric Power Co., and was opposed to securing power for the city.

Again later, once at any rate, he repeated this and endeavored to cause suspicion and division in the council, and to make my colleagues believe that I was acting contrary to the city's interests; his reasons for this can be readily imagined. At the same time, he knew one of the steps Ald. Bradburn and I had taken, and his insinuations in regard to myself were entirely untrue. I have not, directly or indirectly, near or remote, any interest in the Electric Power Co., or any other electric or power company, and if any relative or business associate of mine has any interest in any such company, I am not aware of it. No one has ever tried to influence me nor, so far as I know, Ald. Bradburn, in the matter; and as I said, Mr. Duggan knew one of the steps we had taken and must have known that in interfering with the action of the council, he was acting in an improper and discourteous manner.

Returning to the direct subject of the power report, Mr. T. E. Bradburn went to Toronto and tried to see Mr. Beck, but as is well known he is one of the busiest men in the province, and Mr. Bradburn did not see him that day. Mr. Duggan was in Toronto the same day, remained over the second day, and finally saw Mr. Beck, and got him to come to Peterborough with the report to a meeting of citizens, privately invited to a private house. Mr. Beck, however chivalrous he may be in the matter understood that Mr. Duggan represented the city, and that he (Mr. Beck) was coming to an authorized meeting. The report was read there and published before it reached the council.

Mr. Duggan obtained possession of a report that he knew belonged to the Council, and made use of it as he saw fit.

There have been several explanations given in defence of this. At the gathering where the report was presented Mr. Duggan was given credit, as the newspapers reports show, for having the report made by the Hydro-Electric Commission, and accepted it. He treated the report as if it were his by giving it out. Yet he knew that the Mayor had made the application on behalf of the council that secured the report. Then we were told at the council meeting by the deputation from the Board of Trade, that Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report, although Mr. Duggan had informed citizens that it would be at the meeting, several days before it was held, and before he knew Mr. Beck would come, showing that his getting possession of the report was premeditated. He also, according to his advocate, Mr. O'Connell, says, that he asked me in January to apply for the report. That is untrue. He did not suggest a report from the Commission, and the obtaining of that report was an act entirely due to the Committee alone, in conjunction with Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

Further, when the engineers came to the city and saw Mr. Duggan, who was aware the council had taken action in the matter, in some way it happened that the engineers did not call on me or any member of the council, as Mr. Beck said they would do, and expected they would do, and in addition to this the public was led to believe that the city held an option on the Otonabee Power Co's property, which was not correct.

The council is censured by the learned counsel who has advocated Mr. Duggan's cause, because they did not take measures to have the votes brought out on the Independent Tire Co. Bylaw, but Mr. Duggan had a meeting to organize for that purpose, and the meeting was reported in the press, but I was not informed of the meeting, nor I believe was any member of the Council. If, then, the council had attempted to take any action it would have been in conflict with the Commissioner's efforts, and would have caused confusion, which would have done no good.

Mr. O'Connell says the members of the council have misconceived the position they occupy. Again, he is wrong. We know that the city is not yet governed by Commission, but that we have been elected by the people to transact their business; that we have taken an obligation to do it to the best of our ability, and that we are doing, and we do not propose to be driven by a few citizens, however estimable they may be, into any action that we are convinced would be contrary to the interests of the citizens, whose trustees we are. We are responsible to the people for our course—and let me tell Mr. O'Connell that not for the position of Mayor of the city, and it is one I am very proud of holding, would I take a course that I was convinced was not in the interests of the ratepayers. And further let me tell him that I believe the action of the council meets with approval of a large majority of the electors, and that most of those whom he or Mr. Duggan has succeeded in enlisting as his supporters in this matter have become so because they had been misled, and, still further, that he (Mr. O'Connell) has been seriously misled himself.

It is said that the members of the council are displeased because they were ignored by the Commissioner in the matter of the report. That is quite true: the report should have come to the council. The council is a representative body: its members are chosen by the people, and it represents the people. The members consequently resent being ignored, and their business taken out of their hands. The report was asked for by me for the council, and Mr. Duggan had not a shadow of a claim to it, and no reason whatever for the course he pursued.

But this is not merely a question of the dignity of the council, neither does the question stop with the important question of the effect on the business and the interests of the city. That is one reason that has so far kept me silent.

In the report it is stated that the price of the Otonabee Power Co's property is $9235,000, and that price is reasonable, and details are given. Such a statement in the report coming into the hands of council would be quite proper. The council could then take up the matter with the company, make further enquiries, and endeavor, when that report is placed in the hands of the Otonabee Power Co., as it will through Mr. Duggan's interference, there is no longer any probability of the council making any bargain with that company except by paying them

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

There are two main features of civic beautification; one the beauty, neatness, tidiness, of public places—streets, boulevards, etc., and the other the beauty of adjoining, or abutting, private premises; grounds, when there are grounds; lawns, when there are lawns, and—but rarely, it is a pleasure to say—homes where the limited outdoor space compels the employment of window boxes.

The Examiner has, two or three times, spoken in terms of appreciation of the excellent action of the Board of Works representing the City Council, in giving the streets such a general and thorough cleaning. We see the vast improvement in the long stretches of clean, tidy streets, which present an especially attractive appearance under the softened sunlight, sifting between the crinkled, half-opened, yellowish green or ruddy leaves, now expanding. But it is a matter of regret that will no doubt be overcome in the future, that there is not yet perfect cooperation between the citizens and the city authorities. One one street, after the city had cleaned it beautifully, one citizen, who had neglected to rake out the impacted leaves between the inner edge of the walk and the fence, has raked them out and dumped two or three heaps of refuse on the street; left them to be knocked about by boys or horses' feet, or scattered by the high winds to litter the adjacent streets, and undo what was well done. This is unfortunate and is a contravention of the principle of cooperation which must obtain if we are to have the best results. Hereafter the Board of Works might issue notices through the press, as to when it is likely to clean certain streets. This would permit citizens to rake out and place on the street the litter in the spaces inside walks, and the entire products of cleaning could be carted away at once.

And this sugests that the Board of Works might still do better in the way of cooperation. There is nothing of its kind that adds so much in its way, to the beauty and symmetry of the street as complete, unbroken and well-tended boulevards. We know that the attention of the Chairman of the Board of Works was this spring called to this matter, and the Street Inspector was requested to leave street scrapings to fill in boulevard spaces in front of new residences on a certain street. Now, there was more than enough suitable material raked together on the street referred to to fill the 150 linear feet of boulevard, lacking. Instead of being dumped within, in some cases, five ten or twenty feet from the spot where it was wanted, the earth, etc., was teamed away a mile or two, and the chance to cheaply complete the beauty of the street, and permit citizens to cooperate with the city in its beautification, was missed. This can be remedied in the future, and the future Board of Works, following the spirit of the present one—only in some ways in an improved manner—can, with immense advantage, adopt the policy of treating the streets as public property, whose improvement is, properly the work of the corporation that represents the great body of ratepayers, and not properly the work of the private citizen, who can cooperate by keping in good order—cleaned, watered and mown, the boulevard, it is the duty of the city to provide.

We are getting over the habit of pulling apart in these matters, and are beginning to recognise the wisdom of pulling together—cooperating.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Last Saturday the Examiner, in speaking of the proposal of the Board of Education to solicit government funds to assist in putting Central Park into decent shape, animadverted upon the action of the Board a couple of years ago in refusing, and actually rejecting, $3,500, or $4,000 of Government money, which was offered, together with plans by the Government architect, to properly lay out and grade, and beautify Central Park. It was not the present Board that did this, but the rejection of this good money was precipitated by members of the board that are not now members. The present Board is doing right in seeking to clear itself of the stigma incurred by some of its predecessors. They deserve credit, and it is hoped that the olive branch they hold out will be taken up and worn on the heart of the Militia Department, or Public Works Department. We may yet see Central Park redeemed, and the reproach of its being anything but an ornament to Peterborough, removed.

How far the impulse to action, on the part of the School Board and the Board of Works was created by the crusade of the Horticultural Society, to increase its membership, is not known, but it is probable that the spirit of public tidiness and desire for, civic and home beauty, as expressed by the action of the Society, got in the air and insensibly, or perhaps, sensibly, influenced the community generally. It is a pleasure to state that the membership and, consequently, the influence, of the Society, for the public good, has received very considerable additions, and we shall, no doubt, see results in a more general beautification of private premises and public premises adjoining them. The increase of membership this year will simply lay the foundation of greater growth another year. Whether the new membership numbers one hundred, or two hundred, multiply the increase by twelve, and, as a direct result, we shall have twelve times more bedding plants beautifying private premises than last year, and, perhaps, more, because to many, the dozen bedding or window box plants given to new members will be not enough and the number may be supplemented by additional ones.

In this climate it is hardly safe to change flannels, or plot out bedding plants before the 24th of May. Having this in view the Horticultural Society will begin the distribution of plants as premiums to new members, about the 20th of May, and to old members at the same time.

We should, in the way of civic beautification, all climb into the same boat, and steer for the same port—the making of Peterborough the City beautiful, par excellence of the Province of Ontario. One blade, or a score of blades, of grass, will not make a wide sweep of velvet turf, but millions will do it. A few persons making beauty spots will only emphasize the neglect of others. By all working together, by all doing their little share, the ensemble will be glorious and the city will be transformed.

PROVIDING FOR OLD AGE.

The Examiner has received the following postal-card communication:

Sir,—The lecture in the Collegiate Institute, by Dr. Samson, on the subject of Government Annuities was certainly interesting, but to some of us startling. The Constitution of this country, in relation to financial jurisprudence, hardly permits of such socialistic adventures, which have for the objective Government control of all business.

A BANKER.

"Give a dog a bad name and hang him" may be a good proverbial philosophy, but it will not do to dismiss the Government Annuities system as a mere freak of socialistic propagandism. It is built upon one of the most beneficial acts of legislation ever placed upon a statute book by any legislative body. It is by no means a pauproizing expedient, but is founded upon the principle of the saying that "Heaven helps them who help themselves." In the Annuities system, the paternalism of the Government consists solely in its accepting the deposits of the people, administering them and paying them back as a help to make old age self-supporting, to prevent pauperism and avert the sufferings and other evils that come to an old age of decreptude and lack of means to meet the requirements of comfortable existence. The beneficiary of the Government Annuities system receives just what he provides for. If his payments warrant an annuity of $50 a year he gets that; if his payments call for an annuity of any intermediate figure up to $400 a year, but no higher, he gets that all his life. He is under no compliment to the Government and receives no favour except administration, without cost of the money he has paid in. The payments may begin at as early an age as five years, and the allowance by the Government of compound interest on these deposits through a long course of years, permits the Government to pay without loss to the public interest, in the form of annuity, at the rate of ten or twelve per cent. upon the sum deposited. The good offices of the Government go further; the law provides that annuity is a perfectly safe and inalienable investment to provide for comfort and support in old age. It cannot be seized for debt, or contracted out of existence or diverted to any other purpose. It is paid regularly to the annuitants, and after payment passes into his hands; it depends upon himself whether or not it is wisely expended.

The Government, under the Annuities' system enters into no competition with the banks, so that "Banker" need not fear the reduction of his deposits and profits. The money saved and deposited with the Government would not be otherwise saved, and in this rests a good deal of its merit. In fact the system is to the profit of the banks. With the system generally adopted, especially the beginning of deposits in early life, a habit of national thrift—saving—will be developed that will be applied far beyond the comparatively trifling deposits required to secure an annuity. The habit of saving formed, the prospective annuitant will save a larger share of his earnings, for deposits in the savings banks. It is to be borne in mind that there is no charity in the Government Annuities System—a man or woman gets his, or her, annuity, and to an amount proportional to what is paid in. The only charity or element of charity, consists in the provision of the law protecting the interests of depositors, freeing the annuity from attachment for debt, administering payments free of fee or cost, giving the security to depositors of the whole Dominion, and returning deposits with 3 per cent. compound interest added, if the payments do not amount to enough to earn annuity of $50 a year, and return of deposits with the same interest added, to heirs or family, if the depositor dies before his annuity becomes due.

Great Britain has a Pension Bill which provides a weekly payment to every man or woman over 70 years of age, and in destitute circumstances. This costs the national treasury fifty or sixty million dollars a year. If Great Britain had had the Canadian Annuities system in operation years ago they would not have needed a Pension Act, for everybody who chose to do so could have been more comfortably and independently protected in old age and without cost to the State. In Canada, the child, or man, or woman, deposits money with the Government, which has the use of it till the annuity becomes due, when interest is paid at the rate of ten or twelve per cent., and the Government has the use of the money even after the death of the annuitant. So that there is no paupreism, no "socialism," but a perfectly legitimate financial transaction, in which one party pays in money and gets an adequate return from the other, whose payments are compensated by the use, and ultimate possession, of the money paid in. If the Government Annuities System were taken full and general advantage of, there would be no more paupreism and suffering from poverty in old age except in cases where illness or accident, prevents the saving and deposit of the trifle necessary to secure an annuity for support in old age.

EXPLAINS ACTION OF THE COUNCIL

the full $225,000, or more. This is one consideration that weighed with the members of the council, and it is not a matter of etiquette or dignity but a serious matter of business.

It has been said by his friends that Mr. Duggan may have made a mistake, but that even so, one mistake should not be sufficient to cause the council to take the course it did. That would depend on the character of the mistake, if such it were, and the consequences of it, and whether it was such as to cause such a want of confidence that the council would not feel justified in employing him.

Let me illustrate, and I hope I am not doing wrong in making public a piece of secret history of the past. When the council began negotiations with the Peterborough Water Company some years ago to purchase the waterworks system they had an engineer make a valuation of the property. The engineer reported that it was worth to the town $225,000, but that report was not made public; and the town purchased the property for $30,000 less. Would they have got it for that price if the Water Company had known what the engineer had reported? The publication of the report would have cost the town $30,000 or more in all probability a great deal more. But the late Henry Best, who was chairman of the committee in charge of the negotiations, knew how to handle a matter of business. Yet by Mr. Duggan's unwarranted interference, a similar report on the power matter was made public, even before it reached the council, and the city has to bear the consequences.

As a further illustration of Mr. Duggan's official conduct, we might refer to the fact, that even this week he asked for the use of the council chamber for a meeting of the Board of Trade. The request was granted, but the fact was that neither the President, nor Vice-Presidents had authorised the request for a meeting, and the meeting was not a meeting of the Board.

The council took the action it did deliberately, in the performance of its duty acting for the ratepayers, and I fully believe that the great majority of the people are satisfied with that action. And while the Council is convinced it acted rightly, I do not believe it will reverse its decision upon requests made by citizens who have no responsibility in the matter, nor be influenced by resolutions passed or petitions signed on the strength of representations that were not correct, and without a full knowledge of the circumstances. If it did it would not be true to its trust, nor worthy of the confidence of the ratepayers.

Yours truly,
W. G. MORROW.
Mayor.

BANK MONTREAL PROFITS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Half Yearly Statement of Canada's Leading Bank is Out.

The Bank of Montreal's statement for the half year ending April 29th came out to-day.

It showed net profits for the period of $628,945, compared with $797,765 last year, or at the rate of not quite 12 per cent on the capital.

The big bank carries forward $1,070,735 against $681,561 at this time a year ago, a very handsome increase.

The bank's current loans in Canada are over $8,000,000 above the loans of last year, while call loans outside of this country are very much smaller.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

The Beautiful Turquoise.

The turquoise is considered as a talisman in Persia, its native soil. It preserves its possessor from accidents and insures constancy in affections. The value of the turquoise depends on its shade and its size, especially its thickness. Those classed as belonging to the old rock are valued very highly.

The Cossacks.

The Cossacks are not real Russians. It was not until 1654 that they joined the Russians and became a part of the population of the great white empire.

Fur Centers.

London is the largest and most important fur distributing point in the world, followed in order of importance as named by Leipsig, Nijni Novgorod, Irbit, Kazan, Kiachta and Astrakhan. Russia's large fur trade with the United States is done through German and English houses.

Hebrew Writing.

Hebrew writing runs from right to left because the ancient Hebrews were left handed, according to a German savant, who quotes the Scriptures to prove his argument.

Skikjoring.

One of the favorite sports at the Swiss winter resorts is called skikjoring. It consists in letting a horse draw a ski runner—a combination which results in diverse accidents, mostly harmless.

Opening an Egg.

Place an egg in the palm of your left hand, then place a sharp knife in your right hand and give a very quick tap at the center of the egg, which will open nicely.

Dangerous Smoking.

Natives of Central America are inveterate users of pimenta tobacco, which they make from dried pimento berries or allspice. It invariably gives the smoker a sore throat and often causes cancer of the tongue. The natives of South Africa are affected in a peculiar manner by the smoke from the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly those who use it.

THE FIRE RECORD

Craighurst In Danger.

Craighurst, May 13.—Bush fires are raging furiously all around the Village of Craighurst, causing much alarm to the residents. Unless the high winds that prevail at the present time abate, and rain is forthcoming, the village is in danger of being wiped out. The fire is making rapid strides, fanned by high winds and the village is enveloped in smoke. A number of the male residents are out to fight the flames.

Approaching Bala.

Bala, May 13.—Wm. Carr started a fire Thursday to clear the corner of a chopping. After dinner it was beyond his control and is now across the C.P.R. track. The fire is raging before a high wind eastward along Shanty Bay towards Bala. Buildings will be in danger if it crosses the swamp north of Robertson's Point, as there is no provision of any kind for fighting it.

Lavant Threatened.

Kingston, May 13.—A big bush fire is raging at Lavant, on the line of the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, sixty miles north of here. Mayor Graham was called upon to render assistance last night. The mayor gave Fire Chief Armstrong permission to take the Chatham fire engine and as much hose as he could spare. A special train was made up and left as soon as possible with men and equipment. The report from Lavant states that the fire is about a quarter of a mile from the village. It is believed it will be checked in time to save the buildings in the village. There are less than a dozen houses at Lavant.

A special from Lavant says the employes of the Wilbur Iron Mines have been fighting bush fires for two days and nights, and that if the wind changes, it is sure to strike Lavant. Kingston firemen are at the scene checking fire as best they can.

May Become Serious.

Megantic, Que., May 13.—Forest fires are raging in the Woburn district near here. Between four and five miles square of forest have already been hurried over. A large force of men have been rushed to the scene and are now making an effort to stay its progress. Unless rain comes soon, the situation will be serious.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The King and Queen opened the Festival of Empire yesterday.

The death occurred suddenly last night of F. W. Annand, immigration agent at Halifax.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMillan of Dummer were killed while driving over a railway crossing.

The storm throughout the west has abated and the weather is generally clear and bright, but the telegraph wires generally are down.

Albany Marcil, a twelve-year-old boy of Hull, was drowned in attempting to save his younger brother, who fell into the river. The smaller boy was rescued.

The fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the 63rd Regiment, Halifax Rifles, the third oldest militia regiment in Canada, was celebrated last night.

A semi-official denial of rumors that Russian and Japan are negotiating a common plan of action inimical to China was issued at St. Petersburg last night.

Red Lopez, one of the rebel leaders, is said to be under arrest and will be tried by court-martial at Juarez, Mexico. He is charged with having sold out at the second battle at Agua Prieta.

A jury in the Supreme Court yesterday awarded Mrs. Indiana Chevrier of Montreal yesterday $1,999 damages against the G.T.R. The woman's husband was killed on Dec. 1, 1900, near the Bonaventure Station.

The British steamer Cayo Bonito, from London yesterday for Tampico, and the British steamer Gallician, outward bound from London, collided in a fog off the North Foreland. Both steamers have returned to London.

Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed half a dozen small residences and then spread to the municipal electric plant of St. Johns, Que., which was also wiped out. The total loss is placed at $75,000, with insurance of about half that amount.

Bryan at Galt.

Galt, May 13.—William Jennings Bryan, the noted American politician, who is on a tour through western Ontario, arrived in Galt yesterday morning, having motored here from Paris, where he lectured Thursday night. At 1 o'clock he was entertained to a luncheon at the Imperial Hotel, which was attended by over a hundred prominent citizens. Mr. Bryan delivered a strong address, in which he supported the Y.M.C.A., and outlined the great work the association is doing in the uplift of men. Speaking of the association as a co-operative institution, Mr. Bryan digressed from his subject somewhat to commend the system of annuities recently inaugurated by the Canadian Government. For years, he said, he had been trying to figure out a similar scheme for the benefit of the citizens of the United States. Only yesterday did he learn that such a system was in force in Canada. He could not understand why every civilized country did not follow the lead of Canada and encourage the people to put something by for the day when they would be old and could not work.

After Eight Years.

New York, May 13.—After eight years in the Arctic ice pack, a message despatched by balloon from the headquarters of the Baldwin-Ziegler polar expedition in Franz Josef Land, on June 24, 1902, is now in the hands of the original sender. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin. Baldwin sent out a series of messages stoutly sealed in small casks, and suspended by a special releasing device from balloons. When the balloon sank low enough for one of the casks to touch water or ice, that cask was released and the balloon freed of just that much weight, sailed on again until another cask touched and was released. So the process went on until all the casks were deposited. The message now in Mr. Baldwin's hands is the second that has come back to him.

Oh, you Tiger, for soiled hands!

MAY SECURE PEACE.

Diaz and Madero Are Waiting For Someone to Make Advances.

Juarez, Mexico, May 13.—The Provisional Government of Mexico made much progress with its work of organization yesterday. Although nothing was done yesterday by officers of the Provisional Government respecting peace negotiations, the fact that there is a deadlock over procedure became more pronounced. The Federal Government and the Provisional Government are standing their distance, each waiting for the other to make the first move.

Unofficial go-betweens are again busy in an effort to bring the two sides together. They expected to get an audience with Provisional President Madero yesterday, but were not successful. To-day it is expected he will listen to what is believed their new argument, having dissolved their original peace commission of three, the rebels now may conduct their peace negotiations through their newly organized body of foreign relations.

A gleam of hope for peace is contained in the fact that some rebel leaders have declared they would be willing to accept Gen. Diaz's manifesto as sufficient evidence of his intention to resign and go ahead with peace negotiations, providing that Diaz consent to immediate appointment of governors for fourteen of the twenty-seven states and to again transfer power into the hands of the revolutionary party.

On the other hand some of the insurrecto leaders believe that the military successes soon will include Mexico City, whither the Provisional Government will be moved, and that submission at this time hardly would afford a complete transfer of political power.

THE BRIGHTEST DAY FOR EVERY WOMAN

Comes With Good Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Her brightest day for every girl and every woman is the day when she looks well, feels well and is well; but with most of the fair sex such days are rare. Instead they suffer from a painful langour, have a terrible weakness in the back, headaches that make everything seem blurred, and a ceaseless aching in the limbs. These and other trials afflict girls and women through the lack of rich, red blood nature is calling for. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given the joy of real robust health to thousands of women who are happy to-day because these Pills actually make the rich, red blood that makes weak ones well and strong. This statement has been proven over and over again. Here is further proof from Mrs. C. U. Brook, Manitou, Man., who says: "After a busy term on second class work, followed only by a short time of relaxation, and a strenuous two and a half months normal course, in March, 1906, I began teaching school. I had a heavy rural school, with a large attendance, and consequently a large number of grades, thus I found the work a great nervous strain. This added to the overwork of study, previous to teaching, soon resulted in a "run down" condition. When vacation time came I did not pay much attention to my condition as I thought the holidays would fully restore me, but as I resumed work again I soon found this was not the case. One morning when I came to breakfast everything reeled before me and I almost fainted away. The lady with whom I was boarding advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She always spoke very highly of them, her daughter having used them with the most beneficial results following a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I decided to take her advice, and had only taken a few boxes when I began to improve in health—and such an appetite as I had. I rapidly gained health, my face had a healthy glow, and I gained in weight. I have since often recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to others who have used them with equally beneficial results, and I believe the Pills to be a standard remedy for the ills for which you recommend them."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Honored by McGill.

Montreal, May 13.—The annual convocation for conferring degrees in arts, applied science, law, dentistry, music at the graduating school of McGill University took place at the Royal Victoria College at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Chief Justice Fitzpatrick, who received the honorary degree of LL.D., addressed the students.

The honorary degree of doctor of civil law was conferred upon Hon. E. W. P. Geerin, B.A., B.C.L., judge of the Supreme Court.

Those receiving the honorary degree of doctor of law, besides Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, were Samuel Edward Dawson, Litt.D., F.R.C.S., C.M.G., and Rev. Jean Charlemagne Brae, Q. Litt.D., professor of modern languages, Vassar College.

The degree of doctor of music was conferred upon Charles Henry Mills, Mus. Bac.

All Foolish Stories.

Washington, May 13.—Though Secretary of State Knox, President Taft yesterday authorized American Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at Mexico City to deny in the most positive terms "all foolish stories" of intervention in Mexico by the U. S. Secretary Knox's telegram to Mr. Wilson, which also is to be made public in Mexico, was sent following a session of the Cabinet at which the Mexican tangle took up much of the time.

Finished New Bridge.

Port Hope, May 13.—Yesterday morning the last section of the big C.N.R. bridge was placed in position, and as soon as the ties and rails are laid, trains will be able to cross.

LONG-WINDED ORATORS.

Parliamentarians Are Easily Capable of Several Hours.

Common, ordinary, Canadians who go to sleep or at least feel very drowsy during the ordinary sermon must shudder with horror at the fate of a member of one of the legislative bodies having to listen to a gab-fest like the present reciprocity debate where a member may speak for three hours, or even five. But British tradition seems to be in favor of the long speech.

"Never in the history of Parliament," Mr. Balfour once exclaimed, with clenched hands and flashing eyes, "has such a proposal been made in so brief a speech." Such was the right honorable gentleman's surprise and indignation when Sir William Harcourt sat down after a five minutes' speech introducing the Evicted Tenants' Bill.

Indeed, any speech less than an hour in length on an occasion like this would almost have seemed an insult to the House.

In 1668, after hours of already oratory, a member rose and exclaimed, "The House is empty, and so be our stomachs. I pray ye, therefore, adjourn the debate for one hour." But Speaker Lenthall would not listen to the pleading. He could sit as long as legislators could talk; and sit he did, until he fell off his chair in a dead faint.

In the Stuart days, when it was no uncommon thing for a parson to turn his hour-glass three or four times before he arrived at "Lastly, my brethren," the man who could not and did not keep on his legs at Westminster for three hours at least was thought as little of as the squire who could not carry his three bottles of port. One prosy legislator, it is said, spoke for seven hours; and sat down for six, without leaving the gentlemanly seat.

In later years Sheridan, speaking on the Begum case, held the floor and his audience for five solid hours at a stretch; and Sir Robert Peel apologized for the "shortness and inadequacy" of a speech on the Corn Laws which fell just short of four hours. Lord Palmerston once orated four hours and a half on Don Pacifico and five minutes later was on his feet again, as fresh as when he started. And did not Mr. Biggar, that loquacious Irishman, once "hold the floor" from half-past twelve to half-past five on the thrilling topic of the Devon Commission?

No matter how trivial the subject, an hour was a very modest limit, as was proved when one honorable gentleman spoke for eighty minutes on undersized fish, and another took up sixty minutes with a learned harangue on bog in the Hebrides. Mr. Gladstone, who, when wound up, "could go on all day without turning a hair," spoke for five hours without a pause when introducing his first budget; and such was the magic of his tongue that he kept his auditors entertained and breathless to the last word. He made dry figures as fascinating as romance.

There have been many attempts to curb this oratorical flow since, in 1880, Mr. Milner Gibson proposed a new standing order directing "that the speeches of members be limited in duration to one hour"; but the weight of opinion has been fatal to them. Mr. Gibson's motion was negatived by 98 to 69, and a much more recent motion by Major Rasch, imposing a twenty minutes' limit, by a majority of 69.

A Raw Subaltern.

Lieut.-General Sir John Cheape McLeod, one of the oldest Knights Grand Cross of the Bath, has completed his eightieth year.

Educated at St. Andrew's and Perth, he saw more than thirty years service in the old 42nd, fighting in the Crimea, the Indian Mutiny, and the Ashanti War, and winning fresh distinctions in every campaign. He retired from the army in 1868. He has been twice married, and is the father of soldier sons, who, like himself have done honor to the fine old fighting race from which they sprang.

Sir John has recounted a good Territorial yarn. From a small town a detachment went into camp. Amongst the number there was a very young subaltern, newly appointed, and a cheerful private, who, though not in the same rank of life, knew the officer perfectly well, and was in the habit of seeing him each day.

The first evening the subaltern returned to camp he passed close to the sentry, who took no notice of him. Calling the man, he asked "Why did you not challenge me?" His fellow townsmen replied with a beaming smile, "Well, sir, it would be a pity to fall out the very first evening in camp. But I'll have a round or two with you if you like!"

Wanted It to Show.

A rich old farmer once had his portrait painted. When the portrait was finished the old farmer looked at it, shook his head and said to the artist: "Very good. Very good, indeed. But there is one fault that you must remedy. Please make the right side of the chest bulge out. That is where I carry my wallet."

The Sad Part.

"Doesn't it make you sad," exclaimed the member of the Audubon society, "to see women wearing on their hats the feathers of the poor little birds?"

"It isn't the feathers that make me sad," replied the practical married man. "It's their bills."—Philadelphia Record.

Steamers in Collision.

New York, May 13.—The steamship Merida of the Ward Line, with 287 passengers from Havana for this city, was rammed by the steamer Admiral Farragut off Cape Charles, Virginia, shortly after midnight yesterday morning. The Merida's passengers and crew were transferred to the Admiral Farragut. Water poured through the gaping wound in the Merida's side, and five hours after the collision the steamship settled beneath the waves. The Admiral Farragut was somewhat damaged in the collision, but was able to proceed.

Events That Pass Us By.

We can be but partially acquainted even with the events which actually influence our course through life and our final destiny. There are innumerable other events, if such they may be called, which come close upon us, yet pass away without actual results or even betraying their near approach by the reflection of any light or shadow across our minds. Could we know all the vicissitudes of our fortune like

"Yes, sir," the office boy respectfully replied.

Eczema Worse in the Spring

The Blood is Watery—Difficult to Get the Healing Process Started.

But Whatever the Cause You Can Relieve the Itching and Heal the Sores With

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Salt rheum and eczema are usually worse at this time of year because of the sudden change of temperature and the watery condition of the blood.

It is not necessary to refer to the suffering caused from the intense itching nor to the tendency of these ailments. The essential point is how to bring about cure, and if you have been reading the notes reported from time to time in this paper you will already know that there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis and every form of itching skin diseases.

This ointment stops the itching almost as soon as applied, lessens the discharge from the vesicles or blisters, clears out the morbid growth and stimulates the process of healing.

Because other treatments have failed, you may feel discouraged. But in Dr. Chase's Ointment there is a cure for you. We know this because of the reports we have received from so many thousands of cases.

For instance, there is the case of Mrs. Nettie Massey, of Consecon, Ont., who had psoriasis or chronic eczema so bad that almost the whole body was covered with sores, and three doctors failed to cure her. One doctor said she could never be cured. Write to Mrs. Massey about her case.

New By-laws Will be Made Dealing With Milk Vendors

Garbage Question Discussed at a Meeting of the Property Committee Held Last Night---New Boat Houses May be Erected---Other Important Matters

At a meeting of the City Property Committee last night, the matter regarding the testing of milk, and collecting of garbage came up. This question has confronted the Committee several times in the past, but no definite arrangements were made. It was decided at last night's meeting that the City Solicitor arrange a new set of by-laws according to the last Act of the Legislature, and submit the same to the Committee at an early date. The by-laws will contain clauses governing the distribution of milk, ie, that it be delivered in bottles, also regarding the purity of milk and the inspecting of all places where milk is handled. The by-laws in question will, accordingly, be submitted to the Committee at an early date.

There were present at the meeting Ald. Duncan, chairman; his Worship Mayor Morrow and Ald. Bradburn; also Dr. McPherson, M.H.O.

According to motion made, there will be repairs made to the flag on the city buildings, it at the present time being somewhat torn.

Some objection was made to the new street, named at a meeting last week, Langton ave., being called an 'avenue', so the street will be known in future as "Langton street".

The Committee decided to charge a license fee to all scavengers but they left the amount of the fee for the Police Commissioners to decide.

A communication was received from Taylor and Hall, asking for the job of putting the wall around the rear of the Public Library, spoken of at a meeting last week. Other tenders are solicited, and no action will be taken for the present, if tenders continue to come in.

Considerable discussion took place over the erection of new boat-houses in the place of those burned by the fire. It was suggested that the owners be allowed to erect their boat-houses as before upon certain conditions, such as paying a small rental for the land. Ald. Bradburn moved, seconded by Mayor Morrow, that no action be taken until the Committee go down and see the place where they intend erecting them, in company with the City Engineer.

Dr. McPherson stated to the Committee that in connection with the milk testing, etc., it would be necessary for him to go to Toronto and purchase certain articles, among which are the following; Centrefuge, costing about $15, small motor, a glass apparatus for testing the impurities in the milk, a small table, and a number of bottles in which to take samples of milk. The table and other little additions to cost about $10.00. The Mayor moved that Dr. McPherson be authorized to go to Toronto and purchase all the necessary things and that his expenses be paid. This was carried, and the Doctor stated that he would combine his trip to Toronto with that of London.

GEO. J. REILLY'S SOUTH-END DRUG STORE IMPROVEMENTS

New Automobile Service for Delivery of Neilson's Celebrated Ice Cream,---Preparations for Big Summer Trade

Mr. George J. Reilly, the enterprising proprietor of the South End drug store, corner of Bethune and King streets, has been engaged during the past few weeks in brightening up and refitting his premises for the summer trade. He has also invested in a speedy automobile for the delivery of Neilson's celebrated ice cream, for which he has worked up a large patronage in Peterborough. Watch for it—you can't mistake it. The bells will let you know when it is coming; stop it and buy an Ice Cream Brick—all flavours, made by Neilson of Toronto, and sold only by Mr. Reilly, the up-to-date druggist, at 25c each, any flavour. If the auto does not call on you let Mr. Reilly know, or call him up by 'phone, 442, and he will see that it does. Bricks will be sent to any part of the city within fifteen minutes after order. The auto will be out selling ice cream bricks all day and night. It will carry a good supply all the time.

But that is not all. Just call down to Mr. Reilly's ice cream pavilion and enjoy an ice-cream soda, and see what a nice cool spot it is.

The ice cream business will be in full blast on Monday.

The drug store has also been handsomely refitted with modern fixtures by the Peterborough Show Case Co., the work having been done personally, by Mr. Theobald. These improvements give Mr. Reilly one of the best arranged and up-to-date drug stores in Canada. A new electric sign will also be installed in a few days, which will prove an added attraction.

Mr. Reilly has also secured the privilege of selling ice cream cones at the Rex Vaudeville Theatre, which will be handed round through the audience during the performance, for only 5c each. These cones will contain the same delicious ice cream as is sold in Mr. Reilly's store.

Dr. Carman, Superintendent, Uses "Voice of Methodist Church"

His Testimony Controverts That of Dr. Workman in Ten Thousand Dollar Libel Suit---Rev. Dr. Sparling Thinks Dr. Workman was not Legally Suspended.

MONTREAL, MAY 11.—Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, took the witness stand in the Workman libel case to-day and gave evidence on points of Methodist belief involved in the alleged assertions of Dr. Workman. Dr. Carman claimed that from his position his testimony could be regarded as the voice of the Methodist Church. His statements on points of Methodist belief, he declared, were the interpretations of the Methodist Church courts. His testimony on many points was directly opposed to that of Dr. Workman, who in testifying yesterday refused to admit that the beliefs which he held were not in accord with the standards of Methodism.

On the opinion of the corporal resurrection of Christ he differed from Dr. Workman, who thought the Gospel allegorical in this particular, while Dr. Carman held that, according to the doctrinal standards of the Methodist Church, Christ was truly God and that this point was not open to investigation. Without the doctrine of Christ being Deity the Church could not exist. Contrary to Dr. Workman's testimony, Dr. Carman declared that the Sacrifice of Calvary in the eyes of the Methodist Church was both a propitiatory and expiatory act, and that the atonement had its effects not only manwards but Godwards. Original sin, he said, lay not in the fall of Adam, but in the corruption of human nature, whereby man is inclined to sin. Pressed for an answer as to whether a new-born babe is sinful, he answered in the affirmative: "Because it must be born again." This, he said, was the view of his Church. Dr. Workman held, on the other hand, that man was born in innocence.

Dr. Carman also declared that the Methodist Church held the historic accuracy of the Gospel as beyond a doubt, and could never countenance an investigation on this point. "The Scriptures contain all that is necessary for salvation," he said.

As to Dr. Workman's dismissal he held that it was quite within the jurisdiction of the Wesleyan College Board, and that there was no necessity for them to appeal to the Conference. The Methodist Church, he clared, was not dogmatic in its attitude, and would allow its members ample latitude on points not regarded as essential to salvation; but Dr. Workman seemed, according to his testimony, to have attacked the fundamentals.

Rev. Dr. Sparling of St. James' Methodist Church stated that in his opinion Dr. Workman had not been legally suspended. He believed that as a clergyman, as well as a professor, he was responsible only to the Conference for his religious beliefs, and that the board of the college had no right to dismiss him.

Mr. A. R. Oughtred, one of the board, testified that he had seconded the motion for dismissal because he believed it the best thing for the Methodist Church, but that he had protested against the legality of the move.

Dr. Workman again was questioned on a number of minor points of belief.

PORCUPINE EXTENSION DOMES

Usually it is not a good policy to buy a low priced mining stock, merely because the property it represents neighbours a proved property which commands a very much higher price. In buying mining securities the better rule is to require each stock to stand or fall by its own merits. In the case of Dome Extension, however, the stock is to be regarded as a most attractive purchase, because of the merit of the property itself, as well as because of the fact that it neighbours on the north-east, the famous Dome property, which is declared by Prof. Merrill, metallurgist of the Home Stake Mine of South Dakota, to have the makings of the greatest gold mine in the world. The south-west 40 acres of the 200 acres owned by Dome Extension adjoins the north-east 40 acres owned by Dome Mines Ltd., and since the great Domeformation on the latter property has a north-easterly and south-westerly strike, it is practically certain that into Dome Extension numerous veins off-shoot to the north east and east from this Dome formation.

As a matter of fact, several of these veins have been opened either by trenching or shaft-sinking, and the values disclosed in the shafts at a depth of 50 feet or better are of a very high grade character. In his report on the property, James H. Miller, an English engineer, gives the details of one vein which has been traced for 600 feet, which shows a width of 17 feet, and which he declares is of sufficient importance, if proved to depth, to have values of no more than $7 or $8 per ton to warrant the erection of a mill of not less than 200 stamps.

The Dome Extension property is controlled by practically the same interests that control the famous Dome Mines, W. B. Edwards being president of both companies. And one of the largest stockholders in Dome Extension.

The theory of this ownership doubtless is that, while these interests which control both properties have no plans whatsoever for allowing the public to participate in Dome Mines, they are willing that the public should share with them in good fortunes which may result from the ownership of Dome Extension.

The company is capitalized at 2,000,000 shares, of which 1,500,000 shares have been issued, 500,000 shares being retained in the treasury. The incorporation is under Ontario laws. There is no indebtedness on account of the purchase price of the property, which was originally included in the Dome staking, and having developed the Dome Mine to its present state of greatness, Captain H. C. Anchor has been detached from the Dome, and is now in charge of the development of Dome Extension.

In this development it is planned to sink the main operating shaft to a depth of not less than 500 feet, crosscutting on the way down, and with this object in view a steam hoisting plant, a compresser plant, shot drills, pumps, laboratory and an assay office, together with a camp for a full working force of miners and operatives, have been provided on the ground. The Dome Extension is the scene of as vigorous mining activity as is being carried on any place in the Porcupine district, with the exception of the Hollinger and Dome properties. It is our judgment that Dome Extension, purchaseable at around prevailing quotations, is a stock which should score an advance of several hundred per cent., coincidently with the development of the greater Porcupine boom which is just now getting under way.

Orders in Dome Extension executed for cash or on margin. T. Homer & Co., Brokers, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

So many have been disappointed at not being able to obtain certain books on account of their being always out of the library, that it is just as well to reiterate the fact that by depositing five cents with the Librarian any book in the library may be reserved and the depositor assured of getting it in due course. Whenever possible, persons are notified by telephone in order to allow of as little delay as possible in the receipt of the volume.

The public will be interested in knowing that in a short time there will be a great many more books placed on the shelves. Notice of their arrival will be announced at once in the papers.

LUXURY'S LAST WORDS

The most splendid of clubhouses has just been opened on Pall Mall street in old London. Cased in marble, spreading in vastness and in mystery over the site of the old war office, this enormous palace is the new home of the Royal Automobile Club, with its 6,000 members. Here you will have the true elite of England, lounging amidst London, leaving the gasolined air without for the perfumes of Araby within, planning on Persian divans the motoring trip abroad." Haroun al Raschid and the languishing ladies of Bagdad had not such voluptuous luxury. Aladdin's lamp could hardly with all its slaves build this imperial mansion.

Here members may live and loaf, if not live and learn. They may also sleep, 95 bedrooms and six suites being included. Lady motorists will have special rooms reserved for them. Rumour paints the place as Belshazzer, or Nero, as Cleopatra or other known masters of magnificence would have ordained it. Perhaps there may be no slaves to throw the lampreys, no such robust sport as that; yet English footmen will besprinkle the alabaster halls, like pieces in the mosaic floor.

The Daily News says that "by way of a change to motoring several members have already considered the possibility of spending a week's holiday at the club, and this is how such a holiday may be spent:

First day—A stroll round the clubhouse and a thorough inspection of the roofs, including 95 bedrooms and six suites.

Second day—Early morning swim in the Roman bath, with its Pompeiian pillars and marble walls. (This bath is about the size of the Queen's Hall, Langham place.) Exercise in the fencing room and an afternoon in the miniature rifle range (25 yards).

Third day—Stroll on the terraces overlooking Carlton House terrace gardens and St. James' Park. A quiet afternoon in the club library.

Fourth day—Turkish bath following an improved "hot, hotter, and hottest" routine before entering the cooling room and morning exercise in one of the three squash racquet courts.

Fifth day.—Visiting the school of motoring and entertainment of friends in billiard, card, smoke, or restaurant rooms.

Sixth day—Snapshotting various landmarks from the terraces and developing the photographs in the studio at the top of the building. In the evening a visit to the "Big Gallery" and lecture room, and attendance at a concert or dramatic performance on the stage.

The sublimity of these clubbers would thus be not far from the ridiculous. That first day's work will do for a beginning. After the strenuous second day, the idyllic calm of the terrace and the siesta all afternoon in the library will be very restorative. What books will be in the library? "The Arabian Nights" perhaps, some motoring literature, works on and by the peerage—but, no matter, anything to sleep on. For the seventh day the Newa makes no entry, but it is assumed that the heroes will rest on the seventh day.

Six Months in The Central Prison For Horse Thief

William Neil, of Haliburton, who was remanded for a week on a charge of stealing a horse from Melvin Bowins, of Pontypool, appeared this morning for sentence. Crown Attorney Kier had made inquiries regarding Neil's record, and learned that Neil had never been in trouble before.

Neil explained to Magistrate White that he went from Haliburton to Peterborough, and wheeled from there to Pontypool. He left Pontypool again, and went into a swamp to rest, and while there drank a bottle of whiskey. Returning to the village, he broke into Bowin's barn and stole the horse.

His Honour informed the prisoner that he had since learned that the wheel he referred to was stolen by him at Peterborough and a warrant was then issued for his arrest. After stealing the horse, he rode on it to Port Hope, a distance of thirty miles, and he considered this cruelty. He then cut off one of the forelocks, and tried to sell the horse for $155. It did not appear to His Honour like the work of a drunken man, but rather a deliberate plan. The maximum punishment was fourteen years in the penitentiary, but this being his first offence, he would deal leniently with him. He sentenced the prisoner to 9 months in the Central Prison at hard labour.—Port Hope Guide.

FUNERAL YESTERDAY OF REV. WM. BENNET

The funeral of the late William Bennet, which was largely attended by city and country, took place yesterday afternoon. There were present at the ceremony, six members of the presbytery of Peterborough, of which the deceased gentleman was secretary for 27 years.

The many friends of Miss Geraldine Rudkins, daughter of Mr. Wm. Rudkins, Collector of Inland Revenue, will be pleased to learn of her excellent progress in music at St. Joseph's Convent, Toronto, where she is pursuing her studies, with an application which her fine, natural abilities effectively emphasize. At a recent recital Miss Rudkins distinguished herself in the artistic rendering of the following pianoforte numbers—Sonata Pathetetique, Beethoven, and Kammenoi-Ostrow, Rubenstein. She also sang in duet with great success, in Rubenstein's "Voices of the Woods," and Bohr's "Remember Now Thy Creator." It is a pleasure to record the success of Peterborough girls, especially when they so evidently show a disposition to, and a success in, availing themselves of the advantages provided.

POST CARD COLUMN

HIGHER CRITICISM.

Editor Post Card Column.

Dear Sir,—The following are the theological views of the Rev. Dr. Workman and such in substance is what the higher critics teach, and would have us believe. Dr. Carman, the General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, proclaims them false. Dr. Cleaver, one of the most popular ministers of the Methodist church in the City of Toronto, proclaims them false. The late Dr. Thorne, principal of the Methodist College, in the city of Montreal, one of the ripest scholars among the educational forces of Canada, proclaimed them false and dangerous, and hundreds of the best educated men are of the same opinion. Let the higher critics eulogise themselves as they may; we are not prepared to endorse their views. We would rather take our stand and inquire for the old path and walk in it. What have the higher critics done for the church? What are they doing at the present time, but creating division, doubt and unbelief? What are they likely to do but make sceptics and infidels?

"Stand up, stand up for Jesus,
Ye Soldiers of the Cross,
Lift up His royal banner,
It must not suffer loss;
From victory unto victory,
His army will He lead,
Till every foe is vanquished,
And Christ is Lord indeed."

ALLEGED ILLEGAL FISHING.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—For years the farmers and fishermen surrounding Chemong Lake have been complaining publicly and privately of the illegal fishing that is taking place in Chemong Lake yet nothing is being done by the Provincial Officers to convict those who are said to be violating the law. I have been informed that fish houses are erected in the winter, and that nets are set in the Spring in the close season by well-known parties. Yet the Ontario Fishery Overseers are blind to all that is going on.

It is said that the Lake is being fished out illegally, yet there is none so blind as those who will not see.

If the Fishery Overseers want further information, ask the residents along the shores of Chemong and they can obtain all the information that they will require.

If the Fishery Overseers will look above the Government boom, in the floating bogs, perhaps they would find nets that would surround Peterborough.

Yours truly,
ONE WHO KNOWS.

THE FORMATION OF A ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY

In to-day's issue of the paper appears an advertisement of a meeting to be held in the city, the object of which is to promote a feeling of brotherhood among all Englishmen, who have decided to try their fortunes in this distant part of our great empire.

It is said with truth that the sun never sets on the possessions of the British Empire, so that with such a vast area there must be ample scope for each one of us to help in some little way, any of our less fortunate brothers with whom we may come in contact.

For this purpose a branch of the St. George's society would be found very useful in the city. Many of our fellow countrymen arrive week by week and a little timely help during the first week or so would be appreciated very highly by the majority of the new arrivals. We all know how a kindly word of welcome or a little friendly action, although nothing in themselves, helps forward many persons struggling on day by day and therefore the committee in charge of the inauguration of this society trusts that every Englishman in the city will interest himself in it, and by doing so will make the lot of some person a little brighter than it otherwise would have been.

Not Our Words

Dr. A. P. Grinnell, dean of the Medical Department of the University of Vermont, put on paper what he had said shortly before in a public address:—

"I wanted to say that 90 per cent of all men living at age 45 were prosperous, contented and more or less established in business, well established in whatever pursuit they were following, and were receiving an income in excess of their expenditures, and therefore, were laying up money and were independent.

Now it is a well established fact that 50 per cent of all men living at age of 45 live to be 65, and at this time I find only 3 per cent of these persons are independent or self-sustaining. In other words, about 97 out of every hundred at age 65 are dependent upon some relatives, friends, the town, or some charitable institution for a part at least of their daily subsistence.

These figures are exceedingly startling and I am free to admit have seriously impressed me with the necessity of men, in professional work at least, to take out Life Insurance between the ages of 25 and 50 as a safeguard against possible disaster which may overtake us a little later in life.

I am sure no stronger argument than the above can be made to convince men of my profession, and equally lawyers and clergymen, of the necessity of the preparation for the future which Life Insurance guarantees."

There is no safer, surer, or better way to make provision for your declining years than by securing one of the guaranteed income policies of the

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada

Dickinson Resigns

United States Secretary of War Retires to Attend to His Own Affairs and a Successor is Appointed

PRESSURE OF BUSINESS

Washington, May 13.—Secretary of War Dickinson has resigned. President Taft has appointed Henry L. Stimson, recently Republican candidate for governor of New York, to his place.

Secretary Dickinson's resignation was dated April 22, and his action was due to the pressure of his private business in Tennessee. The President's letter of acceptance, dated May 3, shows that in the meantime Mr. Dickinson had offered to sacrifice his private affairs if his leaving the Cabinet during the Mexican troubles should embarass the President. The correspondence is of the most cordial nature.

Jacob M. Dickinson is 60 years old and a lawyer. He was one of the counsel for the United States before the Alaska boundary tribunal, and is a past president of the American Bar Association. While his home is in Nashville, Tenn., and he has served on the Supreme Court Bench of that State. He was born and interested in politics in Chicago.

Stimson is a New York lawyer, formerly partner of Senator Root. He is 43 years old. He served as United States attorney for southern New York, and as such initiated proceedings against the Standard Oil Co., and most of the railroads running into New York, convicting them of rebating. He also prosecuted the Sugar Trust for defrauding the Government and recovered over $3,000,000, besides sending many of the employes and officials to jail. He also prosecuted C. W. Morse, the banker, who is now serving a fifteen-year sentence in Atlanta prison, and James Gordon Bennett of The New York Herald, who had to pay $50,000 fine for publishing indecent advertisements.

Stimson was Col. Roosevelt's choice for Republican candidate in New York last fall for governor, but went down with his party, owing to the dissensions in the Republican ranks and the opposition to Roosevelt's so-called new nationalism.

Mr. Stimson is a mighty hunter and his favorite stamping ground is the Canadian Rocky Mountains district. He has been for many years an enthusiastic militia man and holds a commission as captain in the National Guards.

TIRED, RUN DOWN PEOPLE

A North Carolina Man Suggests a Remedy.

Greensboro, N. C.—"For a long time I was so run-down and debilitated that I could hardly drag around. My appetite was poor and I could not sleep nights. I had tried different so-called tonics without benefit. I was advised to try your cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, and I am so glad I did, for it gave me a hearty appetite, I soon commenced to sleep soundly and I feel strong, well and more active than I have for years. Every run-down or debilitated person should just give Vinol a trial." K. Allsbrook. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Mr. Allsbrook it will do for every weak, run-down or debilitated person in this vicinity. To show our faith we will furnish the medicine free if it does not do as we claim. Come in and get a bottle on these terms. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte street; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe street.

Carroll Must Hang.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 13.—The assizes closed yesterday, at the last duty devolving upon Justice Britton being the sentencing of Wm. Carroll, to hang on July 26 for the murder of Joseph Faillon, in a lumber camp back of Blind River in November. Carroll received sentence in the same stoic manner, which has characterized his attitude throughout the trial. He had nothing to say, and in fact did not seem to realize his position.

It is believed that clemency will be shown in Carroll's case, as he is an old man and had been confined in asylum at London in 1902, from which he made his escape.

Frank Bishop and Charles Burgess, charged with rape upon the person of Mary Arseneau, at Michipicoten, were discharged.

The grand jury in submitting its report touched upon the necessity for a new jail and court house. It is felt that the present building is not adequate for the importance of the district.

Yesterday in House

Discussion on the Copyright Act Better Terms If Canada Withdraws From International Group

SALARIES GO UP

Ottawa, May 13.—There was a business-like sitting of the House yesterday and a number of Government measures were under consideration.

Hon. W. S. Fielding introduced a bill to extend for one year the charters of the Canadian banks, which expire at the end of every ten years. This probably means that the general revision of the Bank Act will be deferred until next session of Parliament.

Before the consideration in committee of Hon. Mr. Hibbert's bill to amend the Copyright Act was taken up, the Minister made some additional explanations in reference to it. He said that under the present arrangements British subjects and bona fide British residents had copyright privileges in Canada. Copyright acts were under consideration, both in the Imperial Parliament and in Canada, and when these were passed, he proposed to extend Canadian privileges throughout the Empire.

The question as to whether Canada should remain in the union under the new act. Under the present system a country outside of the union could get privileges in all countries in the union by obtaining copyright from one of its members. The United States was a case in point. That country, while not a member of the union, could get all its advantages without giving any concessions in return. Under the circumstances, Mr. Fisher thought it would be as well for Canada to withdraw from the union, unless an arrangement could be made whereby an outsider's privilege within the union would be restricted to the one country within which it had been obtained. The Minister farther stated his belief that if Canada were to withdraw from the union, several countries would immediately take steps to secure privileges within the Dominion. Progress was reported.

The Ontario & Quebec Railway bill, to which there have been objections, was allowed to stand in the absence of the promoter. Mr. Graham suggested that a good title for the railway might be the Ontario and Abitibi.

The bill to incorporate the Grain Growers' Grain Co. passed through committee and was given a third reading. There was a short discussion over the bill, in view of the wide powers sought by the promoters. W. S. Middleboro of North Grey suggested that it should change to the Grain Growers' Trading Co. In that case, he said, nobody would be misled.

Finding that the western Conservatives were against changing the name of the company, the question was dropped.

The resolutions to increase the salaries of postoffice employes were discussed in committee. The total amount involved was $51,650.

In reply to Mr. Taylor of Leeds Mr. Lemieux said that letter-carriers delivery was established in places of twelve thousand inhabitants. This was the rule, but the practice was to apply it to towns of between ten and twelve thousand people.

Mr. Taylor said he had seen it mentioned in the newspapers that Brockville, Hon. Mr. Graham's constituency, with nine thousand people, was to get a letter-carrier delivery. Mr. Lemieux, however, stated that he had not heard of it himself.

Jos. Russell (Toronto) pointed out that junior mail clerks got less in the beginning than mail carriers, but had no allowance for clothing.

Mr. Lemieux said he was quite willing the consider the question of supplying railway mail clerks with uniforms. He also expressed himself as inclined to the view that Canada should follow the example of the United States and other countries and provide more distinctive and ornate mail cars.

The Minister then made reference to the various increases which have been given to the service recently, and intimated that there would be more in the future.

The resolutions were passed shortly after midnight and bills based upon them were given first reading.

Killed by Fall From Ladder.

Brockville, May 13.—Mrs. James Stewart of Putnam's Corners died at her home as the result of a fracture of the skull while housecleaning. She slipped from a ladder and fell, striking her head on some crockery. The woman never regained consciousness. She was 60 years old.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health.

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy that was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them at 10 years of age and had them for four years. I tried many doctors and one specialist but all of them said he could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He is now hale, hearty and gay. I had given power away to all the last one, I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines credit for my gain. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

Is Laid To Rest

Remains of Archbishop McEvay Placed in Vault—Bishop Fallon Preached the Funeral Sermon.

A BIG CORTEGE

Toronto, May 13.—"Fergus Patrick McEvay, once Bishop of London, late Archbishop of Toronto, but ever all a priest of the holy church of Jesus Christ, farewell from all of us until we meet again with God in heaven."

With these words the Right Rev. Michael Fallon, Bishop of London, concluded an eloquent oration over the mortal remains of his grace Archbishop McEvay. It was a fitting tribute by a strong man to a strong man, and more appropriate because the one who spoke was the ecclesiastical successor in London to the one who had departed, who took up the broader life left vacant by departure to assume a larger responsibility and was now completing the work he had left unfinished.

No more impressive scene has ever been witnessed within the stately walls of St. Michael's Cathedral than that of yesterday. The ornate decorations, sufficient in themselves to form a suitable background for such a ceremonial, were amplified by the funereal drapings; the gathering of the prelates around the casket with the gorgeous colorings of the papal vestments; the sombre hue of the densely packed throng in the pews mingled with the white surplices of the visiting clergy in the centre of the nave; these, and the striking figure of the speaker in the pulpit, clothed in a simple black cassock with a broad girdle of purple, towering above and reaching over the vast throng made a picture which those who saw will never forget. And in the closing moments of his remarks, when Bishop Fallon said, "Eternal rest come unto him. The Lord let perpetual light shine upon him, and may his soul and the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace," there was a spiritual quickening, a wave of emotion passed over all, as it might be when the voice of the archangel was speaking. The soft intoning of the organ which followed and the sweet voices of the choristers as they chanted the responses of the requiem of peace. Not a few said, "Even as he who succeeded his grace to the see of London, and has so faithfully executed what was in every bear, may he also succeed him in the archiepiscopal see of Toronto, here to implement the work which has been so abundantly endowed with his blessing and spirit."

Shortly after 10 o'clock the procession of clergy arrived, the bishops and prelates passing into the chancel and grouping themselves in order of procedure around the casket. The archbishop's throne was appropriately left vacant, while on the opposite side a canopy had been erected for his excellency Mgr. Stagni, papal ablegate, who, robed in purple and gold with mitre and cope, conducted the high mass of the requiem.

The archbishops present were: Archbishop Bruchesi, Montreal; Archbishop Begin, Quebec; Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa.

The bishops in attendance were: Bishop Dowling, Hamilton; Bishop Latioleppa, vicar apostolic of Temiskaming; Bishop Weber, head of the Roman Catholic College at Berlin; Bishop Bruneau, Nicolet; Bishop Carey, St. John, N.B.; Bishop Macdonnell, Alexandria, Ont.; Bishop Fallon, London; Bishop O'Connor, Peterboro; Bishop Feehan, Fall River; Bishop Hickey, Rochester.

Those in the first seats were: Premier Whitney, A. C. Macdonnel, M.P., South Toronto; Edmund Bristol, M.P., Centre Toronto; Hon. Dr. Reaume, M.P.P., Minister of Public Works; Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines; Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General of Ontario, and Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary.

Behind them were seated Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, representing the Dominion Government; George Clare, M.P., Waterloo, and George Gordon, M.P., Nipissing.

Next came Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Justice Latchford.

The ceremony of robing the celebrant [illegible] a new mitre, was then the organ pealed forth in the solemn strains of requiem, and the choir sang in Latin:

"Eternal rest give them, O Lord; and let perpetual light shine about them. A hymn, O Lord, becometh thee in Zion; and a vow shall be paid to thee in Jerusalem, O Lord, hear my prayer, and all flesh shall come to thee."

The confiteor was recited, and then came the Kyrie Eleison, during which prayers were offered up to the Lord to have mercy on the soul which had passed away.

At the conclusion of the sermon by Bishop Fallon, final absolution was given, the prelates coming close around the casket and sprinkling the body with holy water. The funerals cortege then moved off to Mount Hope Cemetery, where the body was temporarily committed to the vault to await a decision as to the final disposition.

A Sure Tip.

London, May 13.—For the first time in two weeks, William Hayden has taken the index finger of his right hand from the tip of his nose. It was a long time to remain in one position, but Mr. Hayden will think the results worth the inconvenience, for now he has a fine tip to his nose where formerly he had none.

Yesterday morning the cartilage of the finger was cut away and there to the end of the nose stuck that cartilage.

Only one thing remains to be done, where the finger nail was, a piece of skin will have to be grafted, but that will be easily done in a week or two.

Leaders in School League Both Win Yesterday

The two leaders in the Senior Division of the Public School Baseball League took a fall out of the second division teams yesterday, the Central team beating the King Edward aggregation at Boswell's field, while the South Centrals were trimming the East City team at the Oval. The Centrals and South Centrals have each beaten the other two teams in the League handily, and it will be a battle royal when the leaders meet for the first time on Monday afternoon at the Oval.

The East City team made a much better showing against South Centrals yesterday than they did against Centrals on Monday. Their fielding showed considerable improvement, and they held the score down to 8 to 1. South Central played their usual good game and East City could not do much in the scoring line. Mr. W. J. Stacey umpired satisfactorily. The teams were:

East City—Phillips, Johnston, Moffatt, Huycke, Lipsett, Cook, Hagarman, Anderson, Thompson.

South Centrals—R. Smith, Stevenson, Chambers, Brown, Parker, Smyth, Haskill, Williamson, Richardson.

Well Played Game in Collegiate League

A good game was played in the Collegiate Institute Baseball League at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, when Manager Dixon's team defeated Manager Cresswell's team by 7 runs to 4. It was a pitcher's battle between Cresswell and Huycke, but Manager Cresswell's team gave him poor support. Although he struck out five men in the first innings, his back stop had a number of passed balls to his credit and the result was four runs for the Dixon bunch. The score was as follows:

Centrals beat the King Edwards at Boswell's Feld by 2 2to 10 in a rather loosely played game. The teams were a little off in their fielding, but the Centrals had not much difficulty in demonstrating their superiority. The batteries were Dobson, Long and Cavanagh for Centrals, and Campbell, Eakins and Frost for King Edwards.

Fresh Air.

Accustom yourself to plenty of fresh air and you will in time become impervious to drafts and sudden changes of atmosphere. Never sleep in an unventilated room. Fresh air is life.

Samoan Boats.

Each Samoan village has one to three large boats for traveling from place to place. These are seventy to ninety feet in length and manned by thirty to forty oars. Canoes are used only for fishing.

Tortillas.

Tortillas, the Mexican substitute for wheat bread, are made from selected corn. The kernels are boiled soft in limewater and after being thoroughly washed are rubbed between the hands to remove the outer husk. They are then ground while wet to a soft mass with stones or in a peanut butter mill, patted into thin cakes, baked on a dry griddle and eaten while still hot.

Alternating Currents.

An alternating current of electricity plunges back and forth through the filament in an incandescent lamp 120 times a second.

Four in Japan.

The number four is in great disfavor in Japan, because its name, "shi," is the term for death. There are no fours or forty-fours in the telephone directories of that country.

The Cannibal.

"And what," asked the cannibal chieftain in his blandest tones—"what was your business before you were captured by my men?"

"I was a newspaper man," answered the captive.

"An editor?"

"No; merely a sub-editor."

"Cheer up, young man! Shortly after my chef has finished his perusal of the cookbook you will be editor in chief."

Laughing heartily at his bonmot, the cannibal chief wanted to know if the captive had a funny bone.

The Sea a Deceiver.

Like the land, the sea has its flowers, but the most brilliant of the marine flowers bloom not upon plants, but upon animals. The living corals of tropical seas present a display of floral beauty that in richness and vividness of color and variety and grace of form rivals the splendor of a garden of flowers. The resemblance to vegetable blossoms is so complete that some persons find it difficult to believe that the brilliant display contains no element of plant life, but is wholly animal in its organization.

The Planet Mars.

The planet Mars resembles the earth more closely than any other unit of the solar system that we know anything about. Mars is smaller than the earth, and its specific gravity is less. Its atmosphere is rarer than that on the highest mountains. It has probably no oceans and very little free water, except in spring, when the snow melts.

Manipulating the Mace.

The Sergeant-at-Arms carries the mace when the Speaker enters or leaves the House of Commons, places it on the table when the Speaker takes the chair, and under it when the House goes into committee.

Prince's Income.

In the Civil List no provision is made for the Prince of Wales, his income of $425,000 from the Duchy of Cornwall being considered sufficient.

The Glue Bottle.

When using a bottle of glue the stopper may be prevented from sticking by rubbing a fresh one with a little lard or grease of some kind and using that in place of the old, sticky one.

Pamphlets.

Pamphlets owe their name to Pamphela, a Greek lady, who left behind her a number of scrap books containing notes, recipes, anecdotes and memoranda.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 12.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat came stronger, with bids 2d higher, but even at this advance they were out of line with values here at the close as much as 1½c to 3c per bushel. The foreign demand for oats continues good, and, as bids were 2d higher, further sales were made. The local market was stronger in sympathy with the advance in Winnipeg, and sellers were asking higher prices, but in the absence of business no change was established. A very firm feeling prevails in the flour market, and a fairly active trade is passing for local account, but the foreign demand is quiet.

Found Lafayette's Body.

Edinburgh, May 13.—Lying amid the fire ruins of the Empire Music Hall, in the pit where the counter weights of the iron curtain were sunk, searchers last evening found the body of Lafayette the Great, the vaudeville performer who with a number of his company perished in the fire that destroyed the theatre. A body which previously had been taken from the ruins, supposed to have been that of Lafayette, now proves to have been that of Richards, who acted as Lafayette's double in the carrying out of his illusion.

Another member of the vaudeville company died yesterday, this being the tenth fatality resulting from the fire.

The Man in the Moon.

Probably even in prehistoric times men have noticed the face of the "man in the moon." Plutarch noticed it and even wrote a whole book about the face in the moon. But, besides this, many other objects are supposed to be visible. The dark markings on the surface are likened by the Chinese to a monkey pounding rice. In India they are said to resemble a rabbit. To the Persians they seem like the earth's oceans and continents reflected in a mirror.

"HATS! MR. SPEAKER."

M.P.'s Who Have Defied the First Commoner of England.

"I have only been really afraid of two men in my life," a well-known British M.P. recently declared, "and they were Dr. Temple, my headmaster at Rugby, and Mr. Speaker Peel. Of the two, the Speaker was much the more formidable."

Such is the reverence that hedges the Chair to-day. How different it was in some past centuries the following extracts from the "Journals of the House" tell us. Thus: "The House was informed by Mr. Speaker that Sir E. Hoskyns put not off his hat to him, but put out his tongue and popped his mouth with his fingers in scorn."

And again: "The House was informed by Mr. Speaker that Mr. T——, in a loud and violent manner, standing near the Speaker's chair, cried 'Hats!' in the Speaker's ear, to the great terror and consternation of the Speaker and the members of the House."

A third irreverent member, who had drunk not wisely but too well, once actually called on "Mr. Speaker for a song!"

It is small wonder that in those days the Speaker was often openly flouted and laughed at, for he was usually a weak-kneed creature of the court or of a faction—a gilded lackey who cringed and bowed the knee.

Rich provided before Henry VIII., and compared him for justice to Solomon, for strength to Samson, and for beauty and comeliness to Absalom. Even Wolsey fell on his knees to Wolsey with abject humility. Yelverton apologised humbly for his small stature and bashful nature; and Tipkit brought tolerance for his "lack of gravity."

Of a very different mould, however, was Sir Edward Seymour, the haughty and autocratic, who, when Charles II. endeavored him to attend in the Upper House, sent back answer that he would be "torn by wild horses sooner than quit the Chair."

When Sergeant Pemberton once pested him with a familiar nod, Seymour promptly gave him into arrest; and on another occasion, when his own carriage broke down on the way to the House, he stopped the next vehicle that came along, turned its occupant out, and took his place, saying: "Sir, it is more proper for you to walk in the streets than the Speaker of the House of Commons."

Sir John Tiptoft, another autocrat of the weak-kneed days, once gave his coachman a severe lecture, and told him that he and his horses were "no better than they ought to be"; and Sir Fletcher Norton read George III. a homily on his extravagance, which cost him his Chair.

Among many remarkable Speakers of past centuries were Sir John Popham and Sir John Trevor.

Popham was kidnapped as a child, brought up among gipsies, played the rôle of highwayman—more for fun, be it said, than for profit—and ended his days as Lord Chief Justice.

It was Popham, by the way, who, when Queen Bess asked him "what hath passed in the Lower House," gravely answered, with a twinkle in his eye: "Seven weeks, your Majesty."

Trevor's career was equally adventurous. From office-boy to a lawyer, he rose to be Speaker of the Commons, filled his pockets with bribes, and finally had to proclaim his own dishonor by declaring from the Chair the decision of the House that "Sir John Trevor is guilty of the high crimes of misdemeanor."

Among Trevor's many physical peculiarities was an abominable squint, which made the process of "catching his eye" so full of confusion that it was necessary to call the member by name—a practice which has since prevailed.

Speaker William Tresham was killed by highwaymen, Thomas Thorpe died on the scaffold, and Sir John Wenlock was cloven through the skull on Towkesbury Field.

First Night Cough Appears.

An inserted slip on every program at the Kingsway Theatre, London, on the first night that Laurence Irving and his company presented "The Lily" said, "The management begs to state that any one troubled with a first night cough will be supplied with jujubes on application."

The management now exploits that there are a number of people who make a practice of coughing at first nights with the object of wrecking the play. They say it is an organized conspiracy by out of work actors, actresses, minor dramatists and other disappointed or disagreeable persons.

Mr. Irving says there will an organized storm of coughing on the first night of his production of "The Unwritten Law." The same thing happened when Sir Beerbohm Tree gave "Much Ado About Nothing." Mr. Irving says he does not object to bona fide illness, but nothing upsets actors more than constant coughing. It is a most subtle weapon, as it is so infectious.

Peterborough Post Office Placed on City Basis
Salaries Are Increased

OTTAWA, MAY 13—Under the Postmaster-General's measure, superintendents of city offices will receive a maximum salary of $2,500. The minimum and maximum salary of railway mail clerks is raised to $800 and $1,400, respectively; clerks in city offices are reclassified and their salaries fixed at $600 to $1,000; the present junior second-class clerk gets a maximum of $1,000, while first class clerks will receive maximums of from $1,050 to $1,800. Other provisions authorize the employment of temporary clerks and increases of salary to certain inspectors and superintendents in recognition of years of service.

The total amount required to meet the increases was $51,950.

The semi-staff office, of which Station B in Toronto is one, will be brought eventually under the civil service act, but in these offices up to the present salaries were paid out of revenue. Hereafter employees of these offices would get their increases exactly as those under the civil service act did, doing away with political influence. The general salary increase proposed was $200.

The Classification.

The offices classed under the new bill as city offices are: Charlottetown, Halifax, St. John, Fredericton, Quebec, Sherbrooke, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, London, Windsor, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria.

Bush Fires Are Raging In Haliburton County

The Lindsay Warder says: Bush fires, which have got beyond control, are causing considerable damage in Haliburton county and are laying waste large tracks of bush land. The more serious aspect, however, is the loss sustained by two or three farmers in having their houses and barns burned down.

Yesterday afternoon a farmer living near Kinmount by the name of Henderson had his house and barn, with contents, destroyed by fire, caused from a bush fire. A strong wind was blowing and it was impossible to save anything. The flames spread rapidly.

A farmer living near the village of Minden was also burned out of house and home, the fire being caused by a bush fire.

This morning Conductor Geo. Bowhey, of the Haliburton train, informed a Warder reporter that bush fires were also raging in the limits owned by Malloy and Bryans north of Haliburton, and that it was feared that if the wind did not change that the fire would spread through the country.

Workmen Make a Ghastly Find To-day

Skeleton of a Man Discovered at the Rear of Post Office—Mystery Surrounding the Placing of the Body There—Remains are not Those of an Indian.

The workmen employed in the excavation for the addition to the local post office made a gruesome find this morning when they uncovered a human skeleton, and the discovery has furnished an interesting topic for conversation. The skeleton was found at a depth of about nine feet immediately at the rear of the present building and almost at the street line. The remains were that of a man, who in life must have been of large stature; the skull is in a good state of preservation, the jaw bone containing four teeth that are perfectly sound.

There are mysterious features in connection with the find. How came the body there? is the question those who have seen the remains are asking. It was suggested that the bones were those of an Indian, but Dr. King, who examined them this morning, stated that the skull was not like that of one of the first inhabitants of this country. There has never been any building on the lot in question. Years ago a man named Harvey started to build there and dug a cellar and built a foundation, but for some reason did not go ahead with the building he had intended to erect.

It is said that the bones were doubled up as if the body had been carelessly thrown into a hole and covered up. None of the older residents have any theory that would explain the discovery. The skeleton had evidently been there for very many years, how long, of course, it is impossible to say.

NO MORE OIL ON THE STREETS? NEW EXPERIMENT TRIED TO-DAY

A Tarry Substance Called Tarbia Being put on Simcoe St. Hardens Almost Immediately and Will Last for the Whole Season—Manufactured by Patterson Mfg. Co., Ltd. Toronto.

Another experiment is being tried to overcome the dust nuisance. The Patterson Manufacturing Co., Ltd., of Toronto, shiped five barrels of Tarbia to the city to-day, and this afternoon it is being spread over Simcoe street between Water and the little Market lane. If it proves satisfactory it will likely be exclusively used in this city.

The manufacturers claim that one coat will last for a whole season and probably more, also that loads may be drawn over it almost immediately after it has been put on the ground, thereby causing no delay, or tying up traffic on a street. There is absolutely no smell off the stuff, and it gives a very clean and neat appearance to the street.

Emperor William Was Well Received In London

LONDON, MAY 15.—Emperor William of Germany, with the Empress and Princess Victoria Louise entered London to-day and were received with a demonstration that somewhat relieved the tension that has existed in Anglo-German relations since it became public gossip that Germany was trying to outwit England at her own Naval game. King George and Queen Mary, with a staff, met the distinguished visitors this morning at Victoria station, in the presence of enormous, cheering crowds. All along the route the carriages of the Emperor's party were given a tremendous ovation. They will remain here for a week.

THE SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. M. O'BRIEN

Mr. Michael O'Brien passed away this morning at 3 o'clock, just three hours after his arrival in Peterborough, from Saskatoon, where he had been for the past three months. He was compelled to return home on account of illness and arrived on the midnight train, dying three hours afterwards. He was fifty-seven years of age.

He was a member of the Bottle Lake Hunt Club and also of the Catholic Order of Foresters, who will hold a special meeting to-night to make arrangements for the funeral.

Notice of the funeral will be given in a later issue.

The deceased, who was in business as a butcher for several years in Peterborough leaves a wife, four sons, Harry, of Saskatoon, Leo, Gerald, and Stanley of Peterborough, two daughters, Mary of Saskatoon and Georgine of Peterborough, one brother, John, of Downey street, and three sisters, Margaret and Josephine of Downey street, and Mrs. Shannon of Saginaw.

Well Known East City Resident Passes Away

A life-long resident of East City, and one of the best known citizens of Peterborough passed away yesterday in the person of Mr. Robert Sheridan, whose demise followed an illness of but a few days from pneumonia. The deceased, who was sixty-one years of age, was born in Ashburnham and was known to everyone in that section of the city who lived and respected him for his many good qualities. He was, for several years, a member of the Ashburnham Council, and also of the Ashburnham School Board, and in both capacities worthily served the ratepayers whom he represented. For the past few years he had been assistant lock-master at the lift-lock and was on duty last week, until illness compelled him to go home. He was an ardent temperance worker and a strong Liberal, although for the past few years he had not taken an active part in politics. He was an attendant at the Mark Street Methodist church, and was a member of Court Peterborough C. O. F.

He was married to Miss Sarah Carew, who, with two sons, Robert and John, residing here, survive him.

The funeral will take place to-morrow at 8 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Rev. J. G. Potter Appreciated The Examiner Editorial

The following letter from Rev. Jas. G. Potter, of Montreal, to the Editor of the Examiner, needs no explanation:

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir—I received yesterday's Examiner, and wish to state that I read your editorial re "The Simple Truth," with great relish, and the least I can do is to express my delight. The need of the world is so great and the importance of a proper development in Canadian citizenship is so pressing that, as you say, the time of professors and preachers might better be spent in seeking to build up strong lives, and thus help men bear the burdens of life. I am going to read your editorial to my congregation to-morrow, and will have some pleasure in saying it is from Peterborough.

I have long been of the opinion that if the Colleges would stick to the simple truth of Scripture there would not be found such a pitiful shortage in men for the ministry.

Not many days ago a University convocation graduated some 40 in arts, 15 in science, 45 in medicine and 2 in theology.

With kindest regards.

Yours sincerely,

JAMES G. POTTER

EYE-STRAIN IS BRAIN STRAIN
For the eye is practically the brain laying to sun. Eye-strain, in some degree at least is probably universal. The percentage of those with perfect eyesight is very small.
Some of the effects which cause eye-strain are easily explained. One's eyes may be of unequal length. The unequality may measure but one hundredth of an inch; still that slight unequality hinders good vision-work, and causes eye-strain. Astigmatism in one or both eyes is seldom absent and is one of the most potent causes of eye-strain. It is caused, generally, by the pressure of the upper lid upon the upper cornea. The effect of the pressure is to alter the curvature of the cornea, disturbing the refractive power, and giving a distorted image on the retina.

MAKING THE ELEPHANT EARN.

The Intercolonial Railway has long been classed as an elephant on the hands of the Treasurer of the Dominion, an animal which has for years and years failed to pay the cost of its 'keep.' Last year the government line earned a small margin beyond its cost. This year a surplus of $972,712 has been achieved. This is a very encouraging and satisfactory achievement, especially in view of the long currency of lean years, and in view of the unusually heavy expenditure — an exceptional showing. The total income for the year was $9,863,783, from which was deducted $600,000 for equipment account; $20,000 for revenue account on equipment; $76,000 to cover the cost of replacing the shops destroyed by fire at Campbellton; $5,000 per month expenditure on new fire account, in addition to all the general operating expenditures.

Much gratification is felt at the splendid showing, which goes to indicate that the railway is permanently on a paying basis, and is a vindication of Hon. Mr. Graham's policy of placing the railway under a special Board of Management, and providing for its operation on business principles.

A LAME EXCUSE.

We look for light, leading, uplift, and all that sort of thing from church synods, above all things. The other day a synod accounted for the increased prevalence of shop lifting by putting the blame on merchants—they so displayed their goods as to make stealing, without detection, comparatively easy, but it is not much more easy than the moral principle, or rahter immoral principle, or, again, rather lack of principle, implied in the specious excuse put forward for the practise of dishonesty. Down at the bottom of this shoplifting is the vice of stealing. The cause of the pilfering is a dishonest principle. The church is supposed to teach the moral virtues and one of these is honesty, not only honesty, when it pays; not only honesty, when it is risky to be dishonest, but honesty as a principle, because it is right to be honest. The synod, in practically justifying shop-lifting, by putting the blame on the merchants were, perhaps, unknowingly preaching a most pernicious doctrine. They had better insisted upon the placing the fault where it really lies—in the heart of the thief. Douglas Jerold tells us of one of his characters being honest, if temptation were removed from his eyes, nose, ears, and fingers. The honesty to teach our boys and girls is the honesty—the character—that will be honesty no matter what the temptation. Taking the temptation and opportunity to steal from a thief does not make him honest, though in action he is as honest as a man honest from principle, because he has no chance to steal. Make the man right and the man's life will be right. The synod got its cart before the horse in practically putting the blame for robbery on the possession of money, instead of upon the dishonesty of the thief. It's a very lame excuse for shop-lifting to urge that merchants should keep their goods behind a grill, like the paying teller's cage in a bank.

NEGLECTING ONTARIO SETTLEMENT.

The following from the Manitoba Free Press applies, with a little change as to details, so well to the Ontario government's failure to inaugurate and apply, an energetic policy of attracting settlers to our new regions, as well as to the more cultivated portions, that it will be read with interest:

"The failure of the Provincial Government to devise by an efficient publicity and immigration policy, a share of the incoming flood of settlers for this Province, was the subject of considerable unfavourable comment at the recent meeting of the Board of Trade. The Government's dereliction of duty in this important regard has been nothing short of scandalous. During the last ten years hundreds of thousands of immigrants have passed through this Province without the slightest effort being made by the Manitoba Government to induce any of them to make their homes here.

To the immigrants looking for a free homestead, Manitoba has little to offer in comparison with the western Provinces, but a considerable percentage of the settlers, especially those from the South, were men with capital, who came to this country, not to undergo the privations of homesteading, but to purchase land, improved or unimproved, in a good locality already served by railways and furnished with the conveniences of life. Had they known the opportunities available in Manitoba, a great many of these settlers would have purchased farms and made their homes here. They would have taken the place of the many residents of this Province who were attracted to Saskatchewan and Alberta by the opening of new areas of free grant land. The exodus of the West, unreplaced by any compensating immigration, has had consequences in some parts of the Province which are not creditable to a new country. It is to be feared that the census will show an actual decrease in population in some of the finest agricultural portions of this Province.

The Government's inactivity in this important duty has long been the subject of criticism. The Liberals of the Province, in Convention in 1908, adopted a resolution declaring "that the prosperity of the "Province could be greatly enhanced "by a vigorous publicity, immigra-"tion and colonization policy by "which settlers would be secured for "Manitoba;" and in the campaign which ensued the need of an energetic, forward settlement policy, was strongly urged upon the people of the Province by the Liberal leaders. This criticism was denounced at that time as a matter of mere partisan politics. It was not, of course, nearly so much a matter of politics as of business; and the Province acted unwisely in not, at that time, placing in office a party which was specifically pledged to institute an active immigration and settlement campaign. If the people of Manitoba had placed Edward Brown in the office of Prime Minister at the general elections of 1907, there would have been 100,000 more people in this Province to-day.

It is not probable that the protests of the Winnipeg and other Boards of Trade against the slackness of the Government's policy in this matter of immigration will have any effect. In some respects the Manitoba Government is a very live Government indeed. When any advantage, political or otherwise, is to be obtained, it acts promptly and decisively; but as a business government, dealing in a competent way with such problems as this of immigration, it leaves very much indeed to be desired.

The province of Ontario owns its own lands and derives the full benefit from their exploitation. The Dominion has control of the lands of the west and that is was wise in retaining this control instead of turning lands over to the new provinces, is shown by the splendid measures it has adopted for filling up and putting under the plough, the broad acres of the west. We have in the northern part of Ontario a fertile belt of clay lands, some fifteen or sixteen million acres in area, eminently suitable for farming and the making of prosperous, happy homes. These lands have been rendered accessible and available for settlement by the construction of railways. The Provincial railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern serve the clay belt and there is no earthly reason why these lands are not overflowing with settlers. Has the Provincial government taken the necessary means to make known the agricultural facilities and attractions of this region? Has a sufficiently energetic publicity propaganda been carried forward? The Provincial government doubly owes to Ontario, the filling up and settling of, New Ontario, especially. No province in the Dominion has been drawn upon like Ontario, in the way of the cream of our farming population, and the best and most enterprising elements of our young manhood, in the way of filling the west. These should be replaced, and this can be done in a compensating way by the opening up and settling of, our New Ontario. Let the Whitney Government take a leaf out of the book of the Dominion Department of the Interior, which has met with such great success in peopling the lands of the west. This was not done by hall measures nor perfunctory advertising; it was done by the application of modern business principles to the making of a new nation.

How British Capital Has Aided Work of Canadian Development

Mr. Fred W. Field, in the Monetary Times, contributes some interesting information in regard to the double debt Canada owes to the British capitalist in the way of owing the actual money and also the help it has been in our development:

In a little more than six years, January, 1905, to April, 1911, Great Britain has loaned Canada at least $600,000,000. These figures are the best possible reply to the complaint sometimes heard that Great Britain is not taking sufficient financial interest in Canada. Its entire railway system, for instance, has been financed practically from first to last by the British investor. The following table gives the approximate division of the past six years' investments:

Canadian bank shares, individual shareholders	$ 1,125,000
Investments, loan and mortgage companies	8,725,000
Canadian Bank shares purchased by a London house, (public flotation of £100,000 omitted)	500,000
British insurance companies' investments	9,854,000
Municipal bonds sold privately	12,000,000
Industrial investments	26,575,000
Land and lumber purchases	34,000,000
Purchases of town and city property	8,925,000
Canadian public flotations in London (January, 1905, to April, 1911)	729,096,126
Total	$850,895,126

Mr. George Paish, the eminent London financial statistician, states that British capital has been invested in Canada to the extent of 1,650 millions of dollars. It is practically impossible to check this sum, but it is safe to accept the estimate of Mr. Paish, who not long since lectured on the advantage to borrowing countries of importing capital. The young country, he says, requires to do all those things which in older countries have been gradually performed through the centuries, and it desires to do those things quickly. The rapidity with which things move in a young country is so astonishing to those accustomed to the slower progress of the older countries that it is difficult for the two kinds of countries to understand each other. Persons living in the older countries cannot, and do not, believe that the growth in the young countries is as rapid as it is to be.

Young Country Needs its Savings.

In view of the rapidity of its progress a young country needs all its savings for the construction of houses, for the breaking up of virgin land, the building of roads, the building of factories, etc., and has not the means of constructing the more expensive works required to develop its resources.

Hence the opportunity, continues Mr. Paish, given to the older countries to provide a portion—indeed, often the larger portion — of the capital needed for the construction of expensive works, such as railways, drainage systems, waterworks, gas and electrical institutions, street railways, and similar undertakings, which offer special attractions to foreign capital is willing to invest at a lower rate of interest and dividend than can be earned by native capital employed in trade, industry and house construction.

The importation of this foreign capital, he concludes, sets free the growing savings of the young countries for the rapid extension of their industries. Further, the young countries attract large numbers of immigrants who possess no capital, and in order to render this additional labour productive the new countries need a much larger quantity of capital than they themselves possess. In brief, the importation of capital by the young countries enables them to construct those great works of public utility, without which their natural resources could not be developed, to secure and to employ profitably a great amount of cheap labour from the older lands, to use their own capital in industries where the return is high, and to employ their own labour in the most profitable manner.

Must Maintain Credit in London

The figures relating to Canada, showing what we have borrowed from Great Britain in six years, from January, 1905, to April, 1911, inclusive, are an excellent argument for the continuance of strenuous efforts to maintain Canadian credit in London. As Mr. K. D. Freiburg, a German economist, has stated, two points should always be particularly regarded by the investor—the occasion of the issue and the country in which it is made. At a period when the money market is tight it is no use making the position worse with foreign issues. Again, the securities of any country which do not offer an absolute guarantee that it will fulfil its obligations should be avoided.

Year	Amount
1905	£13,530,267
1906	6,677,500
1907	11,203,711
1908	20,354,731
1909	37,411,723
1910	38,453,803
*1911	13,945,907
	£150,377,742

*Four months.

Canada is an Attractive Investment Field.

In addition to British corporations and individuals with large sums of money to place, the man desiring to invest the proverbial nest-egg—not properly nested—should be interested in Canadian offerings. The railways of Canada have as shareholders individual investors on many continents. The shares of the Canadian Pacific are very widely held. Canada's financial institutions have interested large sums of capital. Several companies in course of formation have brought in English money to help the initial stages of promising promotions. In some cases the proposed company has been sufficiently attractive to induce British capital to buy outright.

No doubt is there that Canada as an investment field is one of the most attractive of the present time. It is a new country, with all before it. The personality of most of those who are guiding its destinies is marked with energy and confidence in their own country's future. This spirit is the birthright of those whose cradles are rocked in Canada. It is a gift to others who have adopted Canada as foster mother. Progress has been enough in Canada to allow capital to feel comparatively safe here. Enough has been done to banish grave capital risks that exist in many other countries. The building which remains to be done will assure an adequate return.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Some Conservative journals are misleading the people with the idea of getting a knock at the Liberal Government as the only excuse for their dishonesty. They are asserting that the Government propses to 'loan' thirty-five millions to the Canadian Northern Railway. Does a man who "backs' 'a perfectly solvent neighbour's note, and well secured, lend him the amount of the note. The guarantee of the Company's bonds does not imply the passing of a dollar; it will not cost Canada a cent. The Ross Government of Ontario guaranteed a loan to put the "Soo Industries" on their feet, and the Province didn't lose a cent, but the country gained one of the greatest and most prosperous industrial concerns in Canada. Telling the truth, even of political opponents, is a good way.

THE MERGER MOVEMENT.

(London Advertiser.)

The tendency toward combination in the field of industry has been very pronounced in Canada in the past few years. Mr. Monk recently gave statistics to show the enormous growth of highly capitalized concerns in this country. Twelve of these have an authorized capital of $214,750,000, as follows:

Amalgamated Asbestos Corporation	$25,000,000
Belmina Consolidate Asbestos Company	2,000,000
Black Lake Asbestos Co.	5,500,000
Canada Cement Co.	38,000,000
Canadian Coloured Cotton Mills Co.	7,000,000
Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co.	7,500,000
Dominion Iron and Steel Co.	55,000,000
Dominion Textile Co.	10,000,000
Ogilvie Flour Mills Co.	5,250,000
Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co.	28,500,000
Quebec Railway, Light Heat and Power Co.	20,000,000
Quebec Railway Light and Power Co.	6,000,000
Total	$214,750,000

Of this amount over $100,000,000 has been actually issued. These figures were compiled a year ago, and Mr. Monk said he had no doubt he could extend the list to bring up the capitalization of special companies to about $300,000,000.

The merger movement in Canada follows an apparently irresistible and world-wide tendency. It would be useless to try to check the movement, and it is not at all certain that it would be wise to stop it, even if this were possible. In many cases here and elsewhere the results have been beneficial to producers and consumers alike. In other cases, combination has been merely a means of raising prices to the disadvantage of consumers, or of issuing watered stock for the benefit of promoters. Mr. Monk put his finger on a real evil when he suggested that an industrial concern might endeavour to keep the tariff so high on its products as to insure dividends on highly watered stock. If there are abuses of this kind the public should know it. The anti-combines act, which is about to receive its first test, is a step forward, but it is probable that the Government, will have to go still further to prevent the tariff being used for the purpose indicated by Mr. Monk. There are reasons for the stricter regulation of the capitalization of joint stock companies, and the creation of a tariff board of inquiry to elicit information which few corporations will furnish voluntarily.

PUT IT UP TO LORDS.

Asquith May Let Women's Suffrage Bill Pass.

London, May 15.—It is by no means certain that the necessary facilities for the further progress of the woman's suffrage bill during the present session of Parliament will be refused by the Government.

It is reported that, in view of the impressively large majority by which the second reading was carried, Mr. Lloyd-George and other members of the Cabinet who favor this measure are of the opinion that the two or three days necessary for the completion of its remaining stages in the House of Commons ought not to be denied, and they will, it is expected, press this view upon the Prime Minister, who is the most formidable opponent of the bill in the ranks of the Government.

Although Mr. Asquith is naturally reluctant to do anything toward facilitating the progress of the bill, it is thought that he may recognize the tactical advantage of passing it on to the House of Lords, where it would, in all probability, be rejected. By that means the active hostility of the militant suffragists in the constituencies would be deflected from the Government and turned upon the Lords. The obvious advantages of such a transfer of antagonism, from the Ministerial point of view, may quite conceivably tempt Mr. Asquith to grant the necessary facilities and allow the bill to be sent to the Upper House in time for it to be dealt with there before the present session closes.

May Continue Competitions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Although nothing definite has been arranged, there is every probability that the next competition for the Earl Grey musical and dramatic trophies will be held in Ottawa under the active patronage of his royal highness the Duke of Connaught.

The duke has already evinced great interest in the annual competition started by Earl Grey five years ago. He, like Earl Grey, has done something in amateur theatricals himself and it is said that on at least one occasion the two of them years ago had speaking parts in the same play.

It is the intention of the duke to have the competitions continued when he becomes Governor-General. The first two competitions were held in Ottawa and then they went to Montreal, Toronto, and Winnipeg. The choice for the next lies between Ottawa, Halifax and Vancouver.

Kingston's Labor Trouble.

Kingston, May 15.—Mr. Imard, vice-president of the International Federation of Labor, has been asked to come and settle the labor dispute here. The masons will be bound by this ruling, but it will not affect the stonecutters. Saturday, the contractors on the House of Providence hired non-union men to take the place of the striking helpers. Just as soon as they started, the carpenters dropped their tools and refused to work.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I LOVE little children, and it is no small thing when they who are fresh from God love us.—Dickens.

Almost everybody in the car was smiling at the Little Boy.

You see, he was such an enthusiastic, happy, off-for-a-lark little boy. Where we—the luckless grown-ups about him — could see outside the car windows nothing but a perfectly ordinary street—he—what wonders he saw.

Now it was "Oh, muvver, see the man right on top of the horse," and again, "Muvver, see the little bit of a tiny white dog, quick, muvver," and again, "Oh, muvver, look at the man with the hat just like papa's."

The car to him was a triumphant chariot. The street he saw through the all transforming viewpoint of the car windows, a land enchanted, and the shopping tour on which Little Boy and "muvver" were apparently bound, a wonderful pilgrimage fraught with infinite possibilities of delight. "Muvver, I shall have a soda down town, shan't I?"

What wonder, then, that everybody in the car smiled at the Little Boy and inwardly thanked him for reminding them of the time when they were Little Boys —or Little Boys' little sisters — and could see magic landscapes out of street car windows and magic possibilities in shopping tours?

But there, I di dn't mean to say everybody!. That's just the point of my tale.

You'll note that in the first line I said "almost everybody."

And that's just what I meant. The person who is responsible for the "almost" intruding on that sentence sat next to Little Boy. She was a lady evidently with a capital L in her own estimation, and a dubious right to the title at all if you make "lady" really mean a gracious and courteous person of the feminine persuasion.

She had on a blue broadcloth suit and she was so afraid the Little Boy might in his enthusiasm rub the tip of the little snub nosed brown shod toes against that dress that she just sat and glared at him.

Not that he did offend that way—no, not once—although he was kneeling on the car seat in that highly convenient observation attitude that we all used to take in the very long ago.

But of course there was a bare chance that he might.

And so the lady sat and glared.

That's the kind of lady I should hate to have to live in the same house with.

I do.

In one of Inez Gillmore's Phoebe stories she makes Phoebe's mother say of the man who is paying court to her daughter, that she mistrusts him, because "she had seen for a long time that he hated children, although he did his best to conceal it."

I certainly sympathize with that mother. I'd feel just the way she did if Phoebe were my daughter. Or if I had a son and I observed the same thing of the girl that he brought home to show me.

The girl who makes a fuss over every baby or little child on the street or cars, is a bore. One always suspects her of being affected.

But I am inclined to think that the other extreme is much worse.

Depend upon it, the person who can glare at a child or look cross at a little baby on the street car, is a person to most sedulously avoid.

FRANTIC WITH NEURALGIA

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL ALWAYS CURE THIS TROUBLE

Neuralgia is really blood poisoning. To treat it with opium, morphine, cocaine, "headache powders" and other "pain-killers" is a crime.

This is the way "Fruit-a-tives" cures Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid—keeps the whole system strong and active—and will always cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism and Headaches due to poisoned blood.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

COWAN'S PERFECTION COCOA

Cowan's seems to hit the right spot. It is a great food for husky young athletes: satisfies the appetite: easy to digest: and delicious

Last Saturday the town passed three by-laws, granting loans to factories to the tune of $60,000. And Peterborough is about double the size of Owen Sound.

The Prisoner's Vow. (Dedicated to the Chief.

No more from the pathway of virtue I'll stray—
Since spending a night in your cell.
With feelings of dread, I can truthfully say
You have given me a foretaste of hell.

Stratford is in much the same plight as Peterborough. Ottawa there are asking for the removal of dump heaps from the centre of the city before talking of Horticultural Societies.

Bon voyage, Sir Wilfrid!

FOR SKIN DISEASES

A Treatment that Cures Itching Unless It Provides Satisfactory Relief.

We have a grayish-white ointment with a pleasant odour that is clean to use, which we believe is the best known remedy for the relief of skin diseases. It is especially efficacious for overcoming eczema in all its various forms, ringworm, acne, pimples, blotches, insect bites, tetter, certain forms of ulcers, sores and wounds. It is strongly antiseptic, cleansing, soothing and healing. It stops all itching and burning caused by skin eruptions.

We are so positive this ointment is unequalled that we offer it with the distinct understanding that if after having given it a reasonable trial, you are not satisfied with the results, you have only got to tell us and we will, without quibbling, return every cent paid us for it. We exact no promises or obligations whatever.

We want you to try Rexall Eczema Ointment. The first application gives a refreshing sense of relief, and because of its germ destroying power, it eradicates the germ or parasite which causes eczema and many other eruptions. It quickly allays the inflammation, gives protection to the inflamed surfaces, and helps restore healthy tissue. It is particularly active in relieving skin ailments peculiar to children. You certainly cannot lose anything by trying it. We would not dare make this offer unless we are positive Rexall Eczema Ointment will satisfactorily benefit you. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. "THE BLACK CROSS"

By OLIVE M. BRIGGS

It was the Lehmann come back! Ah, no—it was more than the Lehmann! Ritter gazed and listened and his heart gave a leap. It was Brunhilde herself, the goddess come to life; and the stage was no longer there: it was night on the mountain-top; they were surrounded by fires crackling and leaping; the flash of flames curling, and light and smoke. The violins were playing.

Instinctively his fingers clutched the air as if grasping the baton. "Siegfried?"

The cry came big and passionate as from the throat of a Walkure, without limit or strain. The Kapellmeister staggered and covered his eyes.

"Gott!" he cried, "am I dreaming? Where am I? Madame—stop! Are you the Schultz, or are you—? I thought you were mad, stark mad; but it is I—I! When I looked at you now, — you were Brunnhilde alive—your voice is the voice of the goddess herself!"

He sank down on the couch and covered his face with his hands. The blood rushed to his ears and seethed there, and the music beat against his brain. Then the faintness passed, and he looked up.

Brunnhilde stood a little apart, still grasping the spear. The light fell on her helmet and it shone; her lips were arched as if the tones were still in her throat, dying away. She was gazing at him and her breast was panting. The light fell full on her face.

"Ach—mein Gott!" he cried, "It is Kaya!"

CHAPTER XIX.

"Yes, it is I," said Kaya.

She put up both hands, lifting the helmet from her head, and the red-blonde hair fell back from her short, gold curls. The spear dropped with a clang to the stage and lay extended between them, glittering.

"My voice was there," she said softly, "in my throat, leaping and bounding, and the gate was unbarred." She seemed half afraid, and drew back in the shadow.

Ritter still sat on the edge of the couch, where Brunnhilde had lain, and where Siegfried had kissed her. His face had a dazed look, and he passed his hand over his eyes several times, as if the dusk were too dim for his sight.

"I thought you were the Schultz gone mad!" he murmured, "Gott! What an actress you are!"

A laugh came to him out of the darkness.

"You are no bird," said Ritter, "you are a Walkure born. Take the helmet again and the spear. As you stood in the shadow, gazing downward, you were like a young warrior watching his shield." He sprang to his feet and came toward her, placing the spear in her hand, the helmet again on her head.

"Sing," he said, "let me hear it again. Your voice is a marvel! The timbre is silver and the tones are of bronze. Let me look at your throat! Gott—but the roof of your mouth is arched like a dome and the passage is as the nave of a cathedral, wide and deep!"

His hand grasped her shoulder, trembling: "Did Helmanoff know you had a voice like that?" he cried. "tell me, child, did he train you? The part is most difficult to act and to sing. Tell me—or am I dreaming still?"

Kaya fingered the spear dreamily: "My voice is bigger and fuller," she said: "it came so all of a sudden, but he taught me the part, and he told me, some day, if I were not a Countess, I could become the Brunhilde." Her form stiffened suddenly and she threw off his grasp, springing forward and crouching:

"You are Wotan and you are angry," she whispered, "the Brunnhilde is your child and she has sinned. You have threatened her, and now she is pleading: "Wotan — Father!" Her voice rose, and her form shook as though with sobs. She crept closer, still crouching, and lay at his feet, and her voice was like something crying and wrestling:

"Hier bin ich Vater: Gebiete die Strafe. . .

Du verstoesest mich? Versteh' ich den Sinn?
Nimmst du mir alles was einst du gabust?"

Her voice sobbed, dying away into a tone pure, soft, heart-breaking, like a breat; yet it penetrated and filled the stage, he wings, and came echoing back.

"Hier bin ich Vater: Gebiete die Strafe . . .

For a moment she lay as if exhausted; then she covered her head with her hands as if fearing and trembling: "Now curse me," she whispered, "curse me! I hear the flames now beginning to crackle!"

The Kapellmeister put out his hand and took hers, and lifted her: "If the House were full," he said, "and you acted like that, they would go stark mad; they would shower bouquets at your feet and carry you on their shoulders. The Lehmann was the great Brunnhilde, but you are greater Kaya. Your voice has the gift of tears. When you let it out, one is thrilled and shaken, and there is no end to the glory and power; it encircles one as with a wreath of tones. But when you lower it suddenly and breathe out the sound—child—little one, what have you suffered to sing like that? You are young. What must you have suffered?"

He clasped her hands tenderly between his own, and stared down into her eyes.

"Don't touch me," she said brokenly, "I told you—there is blood on them! I am cursed like Brunnhilde. The curse is in my voice and you hear it, and it is that that makes you tremble and shudder—just as I tremble and shudder—at night when I dream, and I see the body beside me on the floor—and the red pool—widening. Helmanoff used to tell me my voice was cold and pure like snow—there was no feeling, no warmth, no abandon. You see—if I have learned it, it is not Helmanoff who has taught me — but suffering."

Her eyes were like two fires burning, and she put her hand to her throat. "To have the gift of tears you must have shed them," she whispered looking at him strangely: "You must have—shed them."

"Is it the curse alone," said the Kapellmeister, "that keeps you and Velasco apart, little one? Forgive me!" Don't start like that! Don't—don't tremble."

Kaya backed away from him, snatching away her hands. Her lips were quivering and her eyes half closed. "Ah—" she breathed, "You are cruel. Take the spear and strike me, but don't prod a wound that is open and will not—heal! Have you no wound of your own hidden that you must needs bare mine?"

"It is love that has taught you," said the Kapellmeister, "you love him—Velasco!"

The Kapellmeister stared at her for a moment. The stage was dark and only a suit of light, here and there, gleamed in the distance. Below, the watchman was pacing the corridor, waiting, and the smell of his pipe came up through the wings. The scenery looked grim and ghostly; the couch of Brunnhilde lay bare. Above were ropes and machinery dangling, and darkness.

He clinched his teeth suddenly, and a sound escaped him, half a cry, half a groan; but smothered, as though seized and choked back. "Come," he said. He went to her roughly, and took the helmet from her head, and the shield, and the spear; she standing there headless with her arms across her face. They fell to the floor with a crash, first one, then the other, and the sound was like a blow, repeating itself in loud echoes.

"Go and take off your things," he said, hurriedly, "it is midnight—past and the watchman is waiting to lock the stage door. Rouse yourself—go! I will wait for you here."

He heard the sound of her footsteps crossing the stage, ascending the stair case; and he walked backwards, in and out among the rocks and the trees. His forehead was scarred with lines, and his shoulders were bent. The look of the victorious General about him had changed into the look of one who has met the enemy face to face, and has fought with his strength and his might, and been beaten, with his forces slain and a bullet in his breast.

His eyes were fierce and his face set, his feet stumbled; he was white as death and weary. He heard her coming back and he walked on, backwards and forwards, without looking or heeding.

"Have you your cloak?"

"Yes."

"An umbrella?"

"No."

"It is raining. Don't you hear it, and the thunder in the distance? The storm has broken. Come, we will take a cab." He strode across the stage and down the staircase; she following. He nodded to the watchman:

"Still rehearsing," he said shortly. "Sorry to keep you up. Whistle, will you, for a Droschke? Gott! The rain is terrific; hear it! Come."

There was the sound of wheels, of horses' hoofs.

He went forward and opened the door of the Droschke, and Kaya crept in.

She was no longer the Brunnhilde; she was a little figure, slight and pale, and wrapped in a cloak; and she sat in the corner against the cushions, staring out at the rain, quivering at the thunder crashes.

Ritter stepped in behind her and closed the door. "Nonnen-Mahle!" he cried, "and drive fast. We are chilled to the bone! The storm grows worse; it is devilish late!" He flung himself back in the opposite corner and the Droschke rolled on:

It was still in the carriage. From outside came the sound of the rain falling, and the hoofs of the horses trotting. Kaya shut her eyes. The rhythmical sound caught her senses. She was in St. Petersburg again, and driving in the darkness through the night and the storm; and Velasco was beside her—Velasco! They were driving to the church to be—married.

"Don't do that again," cried the Kapellmeister fiercely, "I can't bear it."

"W—what?"

"You moaned."

Kaya crept closer into the corner, and clasped the cloak to her breast and throat.

"It is like seeing a bird with a shot in its breast—in torture," he said, "and when you sing, it is like a swan song. Your soul is on your lips crying out, imploring.—Kaya!"

He bent over the shrinking form in the corner: "I was brutal to you—my heart was sore, seeing you suffer. The words came out like a lash; they cut you. I saw how they hurt you. Little one—if I bare the wound to the air again, forgive me — forgive me! No—don't shrink away. If you love him like that, my God—I know him! He comes to my house! Only a few weeks ago he was there, and he's coming again, soon. I tell you, soon, I swear I will bring him to you! If he won't come, I will force him; with my hands I will drag him if he refuses."

The girl gave a cry: "Drag him!" she cried, "force him! Ah, he'd fly at a word—he'd fly to me!" She caught her breath: "Bonne moi!" she said suddenly, and laughed: "What are you talking about, dear master? Velasco—he's nothing to me! A musician, you said—a violinist! You forget I am Brunhilde to-night. We talked of a curse—not love. Siegfried is still behind the flames and cannot get past."

She laughed again, a sound like a trill: "You forget, don't you?" she said, "I was acting a part. It wasn't real; I was only playing—pretending. How the Schultz cheated you! Ah, dear Master—you thought she had lost her wits and her skill all at once. You never noticed how she had shrunken; and that was because I stood on tip-toe, and held myself straight with the helmet. If the light hadn't fallen full on my face, you would never have guessed! I laughed to myself; how I laughed! I —laughed!"

Are You Anaemic or Bloodless?

If So, the Spring is a Most Trying Time for You.

Your Hope Rests in Getting the Blood Rich and Red by Using

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Shortness of breath and fatigue with slight exertion, failure of the vital organs to properly perform their functions, and pallor of the gums and eyelids, are among the indications of anaemia or bloodlessness.

The blood is thinner and more watery in the spring than at any other season, and for this reason the person who is subject to anaemia, or lack of blood, suffers the most.

You must increase the number of red corpuscles in the blood, and this can best be done by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great restorative treatment does not merely stimulate the organs to renewed activity, but cures by building up the system. For this reason its benefits are both natural and lasting.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, neuralgic and sciatic pains and weakness and irregularities of the vital organs become a thing of the past when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

It is only natural that you should get strong and well when this building-up treatment is used, for it supplies to the blood in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements which go to form new, rich blood.

Your digestive system has failed to extract sufficient nutrition from the food you eat, and hence the necessity of such direct nourishment as is supplied to the blood by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE.

COULD NOT CROSS THE FLOOR PAIN WAS SO GREAT.

Miss Hazel Hess, Winchester Springs, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad, at times, I could not cross the floor for the pain. The doctor could not do me any good and a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought six boxes and now I have been cured for over four years. I will recommend them to every sufferer."

No woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well. When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage be not clogged up.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a purely vegetable medicine, realizing quick, permanent relief, without any after ill effects. A medicine that will absolutely cure backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

LAID UP FIVE YEARS

Until Half a Bottle of Father Morrisey's Liniment Cured His Shoulder.

Mr. Jos. J. Roy, a prominent tinsmith of Bathurst, N.B., July 16, 1909:

"I cannot let this opportunity pass without letting you know what benefit I received from your Liniment. For five years I had a sore shoulder, which prevented me from working or from sleeping at night. I had tried everything possible and still could find no relief until I was advised to try a bottle of your Liniment, which I purchased without delay. I only used one half of this bottle when I was completely cured, and now I feel as if I never had a sore shoulder. I would advise anyone suffering from Rheumatic pains to give your Liniment a trial, for I cannot praise it too highly."

A Liniment that will do that is the Liniment you want. It is equally good for sore throat or chest, backache, toothache, ear ache, sprains, sore muscles, cuts, bruises, burns, frost-bites, chapped hands or chilblains. Rub it in, and the pain comes out. - 25c per bottle at your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., L'td, Montreal, Que.

They fell to the floor with a crash, first one, then the other, and the sound was like a blow, repeating itself in loud echoes.

"Go and take off your things," he said, hurriedly, "it is midnight—past and the watchman is waiting to lock the stage door. Rouse yourself—go! I will wait for you here."

He heard the sound of her footsteps crossing the stage, ascending the stair case; and he walked backwards, in and out among the rocks and the trees. His forehead was scarred with lines, and his shoulders were bent. The look of the victorious General about him had changed into the look of one who has met the enemy face to face, and has fought with his strength and his might, and been beaten, with his forces slain and a bullet in his breast.

His eyes were fierce and his face set, his feet stumbled; he was white as death and weary. He heard her coming back and he walked on, backwards and forwards, without looking or heeding.

"Have you your cloak?"

"Yes."

"An umbrella?"

"No."

"It is raining. Don't you hear it, and the thunder in the distance? The storm has broken. Come, we will take a cab." He strode across the stage and down the staircase; she following. He nodded to the watchman:

"Still rehearsing," he said shortly. "Sorry to keep you up. Whistle, will you, for a Droschke? Gott! The rain is terrific; hear it! Come."

There was the sound of wheels, of horses' hoofs.

He went forward and opened the door of the Droschke, and Kaya crept in.

She was no longer the Brunnhilde; she was a little figure, slight and pale, and wrapped in a cloak; and she sat in the corner against the cushions, staring out at the rain, quivering at the thunder crashes.

Ritter stepped in behind her and closed the door. "Nonnen-Muhle!" he cried, "and drive fast. We are chilled to the bone! The storm grows worse; it is devilish late!" He flung himself back in the opposite corner and the Droschke rolled on.

It was still in the carriage. From outside came the sound of the rain falling, and the hoofs of the horses trotting. Kaya shut her eyes. The rhythmical sound caught her senses. She was in St. Petersburg again, and driving in the darkness through the night and the storm; and Velasco was beside her—Velasco! They were driving to the church to be—married.

"W—what?"

"You moaned."

Kaya crept closer into the corner, and clasped the cloak to her breast and throat.

"It is like seeing a bird with a shot in its breast—in torture," he said, "and when you sing, it is like a swan song. Your soul is on your lips crying out, imploring.—Kaya!"

He bent over the shrinking form in the corner: "I was brutal to you: my heart was sore, seeing you suffer. The words came out like a lash; they cut you. I saw how they hurt you. Little one—if I bare the wound to the air again, forgive me — forgive me! No—don't shrink away. If you love him like that, my God—I know him! He comes to my house! Only a few weeks ago he was there, and he's coming again, soon. I tell you, soon. I swear I will bring him to you! If he won't come, I will force him; with my hands I will drag him if he refuses."

The girl gave a cry: "Drag him!" she cried, "force him! Ah, he'd fly at a word—he'd fly to me!" She caught her breath: "Bosha mol!" she said suddenly, and laughed: "What are you talking about, dear master? Velasco—he's nothing to me! A musician, you said—a violinist! You forget I am Brunhilde to-night. We talked of a curse—not love. Siegfried is still behind the flames and cannot get past."

She laughed again, a sound like a trill: "You forget, don't you?" she said, "I was acting a part? It wasn't real; I was only playing—pretending. How the Schultz cheated you! Ah, dear Master—you thought she had lost her wits and her self-control at once. You never noticed how she had shrunken; and that was because I stood on tip-toe, and held myself straight with the helmet. If the light hadn't fallen full on my face, you would never have guessed! I laughed to myself; how I laughed! I —laughed!"

Are You Anaemic or Bloodless?

If So, the Spring is a Most Trying Time for You.

Your Hope Rests in Getting the Blood Rich and Red by Using

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Shortness of breath and fatigue with slight exertion, failure of the vital organs to properly perform their functions, and pallor of the gums and eyelids, are among the indications of anaemia or bloodlessness.

The blood is thinner and more watery in the spring than at any other season, and for this reason the person who is subject to anaemia, or lack of blood, suffers the most.

You must increase the number of red corpuscles in the blood, and this can best be done by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great restorative treatment does not merely stimulate the organs to renewed activity, but cures by building up the system. For this reason its benefits are both natural and lasting.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, neuralgic and sciatic pains and weakness and irregularities of the vital organs become a thing of the past when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

It is only natural that you should get strong and well when this building-up treatment is used, for it supplies to the blood in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements which go to form new, rich blood.

Your digestive system has failed to extract sufficient nutrition from the food you eat, and hence the necessity of such direct nourishment as is supplied to the blood by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE.

COULD NOT CROSS THE FLOOR PAIN WAS SO GREAT.

Miss Hazel Hess, Winchester Springs, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad, at times, I could not cross the floor for the pain. The doctor could not do me any good and a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought six boxes and now I have been cured for over four years. I will recommend them to every sufferer."

No woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well. When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage is not clogged up.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a purely vegetable medicine, realising quick, permanent relief, without any after ill effects. A medicine that will absolutely cure backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

LAID UP FIVE YEARS

Until Half a Bottle of Father Morrissey's Liniment Cured His Shoulder.

Mr. Jos. J. Roy, a prominent timberlit of Bathurst, N.B., July 16, 1909:

"I cannot let this opportunity pass without letting you know what benefit I received from your Liniment. For five years I had a sore shoulder, which prevented me from working or from sleeping at night. I had tried everything possible and still could find no relief, until I was advised to try a bottle of your liniment, which I purchased without delay. I only used one half of the bottle when I was completely cured, and now I feel as if I never had a sore shoulder. I would advise anyone suffering from Rheumatic pains to give your Liniment a trial, for I cannot prize it too highly."

A Liniment that will do that is the Liniment you want. It is equally good for sore throat or chest, backache, toothache, ear ache, sprains, sore muscles, cuts, bruises, burns, frost-bites, chapped hands or chilblains. Rub it in, and the pain comes out. - 25c per bottle at your dealer's, or from Father Morrissey Medicine Co., L'td, Montreal, Que.

Sold and guaranteed in Peterborough by McDermid and Jury.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I LOVE little children, and it is no small thing when they who are fresh from God love us.—Dickens.

Almost everybody in the car was smiling at the Little Boy.

You see, he was such an enthusiastic, happy, off-for-a-lark little boy. Where we—the luckless grown-ups about him — could see outside the car windows nothing but a perfectly ordinary street—he—what wonders he saw.

Now it was "Oh, muvver, see the man right on top of the house," and again, "Muvver, see the little bit of a tiny white dog, quick, muvver," and again, "Oh, muvver, look at the man with the hat just like papa's."

The car to him was a triumphant chariot. The street he saw through the all transforming viewpoint of the car windows, a land enchanted, and the shopping tour on which Little Boy and "muvver" were apparently bound, a wonderful pilgrimage fraught with infinite possibilities of delight. "Muvver, I shall have a soda down town, shall I?"

What wonder, then, that everybody in the car smiled at the Little Boy and inwardly thanked him for reminding them of the time when they were Little Boys—or Little Boys' little sisters — and could see magic landscapes out of street car windows and magic possibilities in shopping tours?

But there, I di dn't mean to say everybody!. That's just the point of my tale.

You'll note that in the first line I said "almost everybody."

And that's just what I meant. The person who is responsible for the "almost" intruding on that sentence sat next to Little Boy. She was a lady evidently with a capital L in her own estimation, and a dubious right to the title at all if you make "lady" really mean a gracious and courteous person of the feminine persuasion.

She had on a blue broadcloth suit and she was so afraid the Little Boy might in his enthusiasm rub the tip of the little snub nosed brown shod toes against that dress that she just sat and glared at him.

Not that he did offend that way—no, not once—although he was kneeling on the car seat in that highly convenient observation attitude that we all used to take in the very long ago.

But of course there was a bare chance that he might.

And so the lady sat and glared.

That's the kind of lady I should hate to have to live in the same house with.

Don't you mistrust anybody that looks cross at your children?

I do.

In one of Ines Gilmore's Phoebe stories she makes Phoebe's mother say of the man who is paying court to her daughter, that she mistrusts him, because "she had seen for a long time that he hated children, although he did his best to conceal it."

I certainly sympathize with that mother. I'd feel just the way she did if Phoebe were my daughter. Or if I had a son and I observed the same thing of the girl that he brought home to show me.

The girl who makes a fuss over every baby or little child on the street or cars, is a bore. One always suspects her of being affected.

But I am inclined to think that the other extreme is much worse.

Depend upon it, the person who can glare at a child or look cross at a little baby on the street car, is a person to most sedulously avoid.

FRANTIC WITH NEURALGIA

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL ALWAYS CURE THIS TROUBLE

Neuralgia is mainly blood poisoning. To treat it with opium, morphine, cocaine, "headache powders" and other "pain-killers" is a crime.

This is the way "Fruit-a-tives" cures Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" prevents the formation of Uric Acid—keeps the whole system strong and active—and will always cure Neuralgia, Rheumatism and Headaches due to poisoned blood.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

COWAN'S PERFECTION COCOA

Cowan's seems to hit the right spot. It is a great food for husky young athletes: satisfies the appetite: easy to digest: and delicious

Last Saturday the town passed three by-laws, granting loans to factories to the tune of $65,000. And Peterborough is about double the size of Owen Sound.

Chief Thompson's account of the conditions in the police cells reads like a chapter from some of Zola's books.

The Prisoner's Vow. (Dedicated to the Chief.

No more from the paths of virtue I'll stray—
Since spending a night in your cell,
With feelings of dread, I can truthfully say
You have given me a foretaste of hell.

Stratford is in much the same plight as Peterborough. Citizens there are asking for the removal of dump heaps from the centre of the city before talking of Horticultural Societies.

Bon voyage, Sir Wilfrid!

FOR SKIN DISEASES

A Treatment that Costs Nothing Unless It Provides Satisfactory Relief.

We have a grayish-white ointment with a pleasant odour that is clean to use, which we believe is the best known remedy for the relief of skin diseases. It is especially efficacious for overcoming eczema in all its various forms, ringworm, acne, pimples, blotches, insect bites, tetter, certain forms of ulcers, sores and wounds. It is strongly antiseptic, cleansing, soothing and healing. It stops all itching and burning caused by skin eruptions.

We are so positive this ointment is unequalled that we offer it with the distinct understanding that if after having given it a reasonable trial, you are not satisfied with the results, you have only got to tell us and we will, without quibbling, return every cent paid us for it. We exact no promises or obligations whatever.

We want you to try Rexall Eczema Ointment. The first application gives a refreshing sense of relief, and because of its germ destroying power, it eradicates the germ or parasite which causes eczema and many other eruptions. It quickly allays the inflammation, gives protection to the inflamed surfaces, and helps restore healthy tissue. It is particularly active in relieving skin ailments peculiar to children. You certainly cannot lose anything by trying it. We would not dare make this same request if we are positive Rexall Eczema Ointment will satisfactorily benefit you. Two sizes, 25c. and $1.00. Remember, you can only obtain it at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

GEO. J. REILLY'S SOUTH-END DRUG STORE IMPROVEMENTS

Mr. George J. Reilly, the enterprising proprietor of the South End drug store, corner of Bethune and King streets, has been engaged during the past few weeks in brightening up and refitting his premises for the summer trade. He has also invested in a speedy automobile for the delivery of Neilson's celebrated ice cream, for which he has worked up a large patronage in Peterborough. Watch for it—you can't mistake it. The bells will let you know when it is coming; stop it and buy an Ice Cream Brick—all flavours, made by Neilson of Toronto, and sold only by Mr. Reilly, the up-to-date druggist, at 25c each, any flavour. If the auto does not call on you let Mr. Reilly know, or call him up by 'phone, 440, and he will see that it does. Bricks will be sent to any part of the city within fifteen minutes after order. The auto will be out selling ice cream bricks all day and night. It will carry a good supply all the time.

But that is not all. Just call down to Mr. Reilly's ice cream pavilion and enjoy an ice-cream soda, and see what a nice cool spot it is.

The ice cream business will be in full blast on Monday.

The drug store has also been handsomely refitted with modern fixtures by the Peterborough Show Case Co., the work having been done personally, by Mr. Theobald. These improvements give Mr. Reilly one of the best arranged and up-to-date drug stores in Canada. A new electric sign will also be installed in a few days, which will prove an added attraction.

Mr. Reilly has also secured the privilege of selling ice cream cones at the Rex Vaudeville Theatre, which will be handed round through the audience during the performance, for only 5c each. These cones will contain the same delicious ice cream as is sold in Mr. Reilly's store.

Saw And Shingle Mill Is Totally Destroyed Village Is Threatened

LINDSAY, MAY 13.—The village of Haliburton was the scene of a bad fire last night, when Austin's saw and shingle mill was completely destroyed. For a time it was feared that a large section of the village would be wiped out by the fire, but fortunately the heroic work performed by the villagers prevented the fire from spreading beyond the mill yard limits.

It is not known how the fire originated, but it is thought that an escaping spark ignited the dry lumber. The mill, being a frame building, it was soon enveloped in flames, and the fire rapidly spread to the adjoining piles of lumber, shingles and other mill supplies.

The citizens turned out in large numbers to save their property and organized bucket brigades which did yeoman service in extinguishing the flames. The citizens climbed up on the roofs of the nearby houses and flying sparks and small fires which they started were quickly quenched.

The fire, which started about ten o'clock last night, burned briskly all night and lit up the country for miles around. It was still burning this morning when Conductor George Bowhey, of Lindsay, passed through with the Haliburton train. The mill is situated about a quarter of a mile from the railway station, and alongside the railway track. A large number of men were employed and a large number of logs were on hand ready for the season's cut. The loss will be a heavy one, probably amounting to about $4,000.

All new goods are unpacked and ready to sacrifice to turn into cash regardless of cost. Hand-embroidered silk screens, art cabinet, cloisonnes royal antique Satsuma vases will be sold to the highest bidder to-night, if requested, as well as tea sets, berry sets, chocolate sets, cups and saucers, plates, flower vases and all kinds of very artistic, ornamental and useful real hand-painted Japanese china in Royal Satsuma, Tokyo, Nippon, Kaga, Eiraku, Idzumo wares. They claim all the articles are going much below cost on account of lack of competitions. However, they are willing to sell to avoid the trouble of repacking them. Hand drawn linens, silk kimonoes are also on sale. The people who have not visited the China Hall auction sale, are missing the best bargain opportunity of their lifetime.

"Rollie" The Ball Players' Canine Friend Is Dead

Local ball players from the tug league down to the kid who plays with a string ball on the side street will learn with sincere regret that 'Rollie' the eight year old cocker spaniel belonging to Master Austin O'Brien, Gilmour street, is no more. He died some time last night, the cause of his unexpected death being unknown.

Probably no canine in the city enjoyed a greater share of popularity and respect than the lately deceased. His ability to recover a lost ball was something to be marvelled at, and whether the sphere was in the long grass in deep centre or floating down stream in mid-Otonabee, the result was just the same—the owner got it back. Only on Saturday last Manager Quinlan of the local club, hit the ball over the fence into the old raceway and a score of kids searched for the ball without success. Rollie being detailed to hunt up the missing ball, stuck to his job until he found it.

It is a sure thing that the local sporting goods stores will profit by the death of this faithful creature, but the baseball crowd will miss him.

PORCUPINE EXTENSION DOMES

Usually it is not a good policy to buy a low priced mining stock, merely because the property it represents neighbours a proved property which commands a very much higher price. In buying mining securities the better rule is to require each stock to stand or fall by its own merits. In the case of Dome Extension, however, the stock is to be regarded as a most attractive purchase, because of the merit of the property itself, as well as because of the fact that it neighbours on the north-east, the famous Dome property, which is declared by Prof. Merrill, metallurgist of the Home Stake Mine of South Dakota, to have the makings of the greatest gold mine in the world. The south-west 40 acres of the 200 acres owned by Dome Extension adjoins the north-east 40 acres owned by Dome Mines Ltd., and since the great Domeformation on the latter property has a north-easterly and south-westerly strike, it is practically certain that into Dome Extension numerous veins off-shoot to the north-east and east from this Dome formation.

As a matter of fact, several of these veins have been opened either by trenching or shaft-sinking, and the values disclosed in the shafts at a depth of 50 feet or better are of a very high grade character. In his report on the property, James H. Miller, an English engineer, gives the details of one vein which has been traced for 600 feet, which shows a width of 17 feet, and which he declares is of sufficient importance, if proved to depth, to have values of no more than $7 or $8 per ton to warrant the erection of a mill of not less than 200 stamps.

The Dome Extension property is controlled by practically the same interests that control the famous Dome Mines, W. S. Edwards being president of both companies, and one of the largest stockholders in Dome Extension.

The theory of this ownership doubtless is that, while these interests which control both properties have no plans whatsoever for allowing the public to participate in Dome Mines, they are willing that the public should share with them in good fortunes which may result from the ownership of Dome Extension.

The company is capitalized at 2,000,000 shares, of which 1,500,000 shares have been issued, 500,000 shares being retained in the treasury. The incorporation is under Ontario laws. There is no indebtedness on account of the purchase price of the property which was originally included in the Dome staking, and having developed the Dome Mine to its present state of greatness, Captain H. C. Anchor has been detached from the Dome, and is now in charge of the development of Dome Extension.

In this development it is planned to sink the main operating shaft to a depth of not less than 500 feet, cross cutting on the way down, and with this object in view a steam hoisting plant, a compresser plant, shot drills, pumps, laboratory and an assay office, together with a camp for a full working force of miners and operatives, have been provided on the ground. The Dome Extension is the scene of as vigorous mining activity as is being carried on any place in the Porcupine district, with the exception of the Hollinger and Dome properties. It is our judgment that Dome Extension, purchaseable at around prevailing quotations, is a stock which should score an advance of several hundred per cent., coincidentally with the development of the greater Porcupine boom which is just now getting under way.

ANOTHER BUBBLE

Harriston is Visited by a Promoter of the Thomas Type.

The promoter of the new Harriston shoe factory has departed for parts unknown. It is said the total belongings of the institution is a horse and typewriter. The party came to Harriston about a year ago and induced the town to give him the use of a factory building to operate in. There was a great flourish, joy riding in an automobile, feasting, etc. A leading citizen advanced $1,000, and "the ham" was sure to come to Harriston. The automobile was burned while out on a trip last summer, how or why is merely conjecture. Now the bird has flown, and the bailiff is in possession of what little assets are left.—Guelph Mercury.

Where We Get Our Names

By the KHAN

The impulse to give men and things nicknames is quite natural. That's the way we got our names. You are sure, sooner or later, to fix a name to a man or thing which fits him or it. I notice that in the Herd Book for Rideau Farm the names of the polish cows in the byre are Buttercup, Daffodil, Graceful, Victoria, Queenie, Fern, Lady Bug, and Sassafras. But they never get these names. It's Stumpytail, the Kicker, Slub, the Big Holstein, the Little Holstein, Old Hard Times, and so on.

They have organized a baseball club for the village among the kids, and they have made me honourary president. That means that I will have to furnish half a dozen new bats, a couple or more real league balls, a bunch of mitts, and a mask. That's why I was unanimously elected honourary president. It costs money to be somebody in this country. If one of them breaks a window playing "ketch," its me will have to dig down in my harem skirt for the price.

I was handed a list of officers, and there was not a familiar name in it. John Augustus MacPherson—now who on earth is John Augustus MacPherson?

"Why, dat's Punch Mickvurson—you know Punch all right," I am informed.

I certainly do—and so his front name is John Augustus. And who, pray, is Eric Magee?

"Dat's Freckles Magee—you know Freckles. He's going to play third," I am enlightened.

And so it went on all down the line.

I have often thought that if I were a girl and going to get married, that I would consider it hard to give up my name. I have often wondered if the women ever balk at it. Of course, they can't help themselves; but really it looks like a hardship sometimes. When you come to look at it, a man has gall who asks a girl to practically obliterate herself for his sake. She can't even cling to Jennie, or Kate or Marjorie, or whatever her front name may be—she is forever after Missus Smith or Missus Jones. The women are always being asked to make some sacrifice. I wonder will the Suffragettes make any difference.

Fortunately, there are plenty of men who are proud to be the husbands of their wives. Ambassador Choate paid his wife a beautiful compliment at a dinner party once. He was asked what he would like to be after he died. He said he would like to come to life again and be Mrs. Choate's second husband.

Buying Clothes for Children

The trouble with the average boy's suit, as you know, madam, is that it is more often apt to look like a man's suit in a smaller size.

To impart to the youngster's clothes that natural, boyish look which you desire, requires special designing

This, the average manufacturer, lacking the proper facilities, finds himself unable to give. Then, usually, his trade in that particular line is not large enough to warrant the installation of the necessary equipment. But in building our business in this line we have had faith in the discrimination of the Canadian mother and in the future of the country; and this faith and confidence have been abundantly justified by a steadily increasing trade in our children's department.

Now is the best time to go to the leading clothiers or dry goods store in your locality and pick out one of the newest spring and summer styles. Sizes are complete and you'll find both the fashions and patterns more tempting than ever

ANNIVERSARY OF PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Sowerby of Toronto Preached Two Instructive and Profitable Sermons Yesterday

LARGE CONGREGATIONS

The 16th anniversary of the Park street Baptist church was celebrated yesterday by a very large congregation. Rev. Dr .A. T. Sowerby, of College street Baptist church, Toronto, officiated at both morning and evening services. Both sermons were very much enjoyed and were of a most interesting character. Dr. Sowerby stated that it gave him great pleasure to be present and celebrate their anniversary. He said that he felt that he was the ambassador of Jesus Christ.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers appropriate for the occasion and considerable enthusiasm was displayed by those present through all the celebration services.

Dr. Sowerby chose as his text: "And the angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them, and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face and stood behind them." — Exodus, 14th chap., 19th verse.

"Most of you" are familiar with the history of the people of Egypt, especially during the time of the fifteen or sixteen generations of slavery," said Rev. Dr. Sowerby. "These people were utterly prostrated. This was after they had been saved from annihilation, by Josiah, who was under the leadership of God. This terrible period lasted about 430 years. Moses was taken into the Royal Palace of Pharoah to be educated, after the latter had said that Moses should die, but God said that he should not die, and it came to pass that he did not die, but lived and ruled this people and performed the work of God. At the age of forty he had to flee from Egypt, and some time later he returned, demanded the liberation of those suppressed people and succeeded in gaining it. When God gave His son that the world might be saved, and the blood was spilled so that the Angel of Death might pass over, you will remember how the first born of the Egyptians were all slain, and the people of God were delivered. And how Moses escaped with about one million of his people. In this miracle, the strange thing was how Moses led the people. They started out and could have gotten away from their enemies, but when they turned south and walked right into a trap, a course which no man of ordinary common sense would have taken, in fact, he would not have thought of such a thing. Despite all this, he walked right into the trap, and we cannot see the sense in it, until we see the succeeding event. This was not the leading of Moses, but the leading of God. We discover that this course was taken for a double reason—1st to give His own people a miracle lesson of deliverance. 2nd, He was trying to bring them to a place, where there would be an utter destruction of the Egyptian army, which was coming right behind them. Israel was in the low land and the host of the Egyptian army was upon the mountain above, ready to sweep down upon them, and they cried to Moses for deliverance, and he in turn called upon God. The Angel of the Lord, which went before them, removed and went behind them and the dark cloud which was before them, changed and went behind them. Why did God go behind them? Simply to get between them and the coming destruction. That great army of 600 war chariots and millions of men at arms was to compete with the Israel army, which was simply a few unarmed slaves, unfit and unqualified to fight at all, and there was no way to get out. Moses led them into this terrible trap. The Egyptian army was so sure of victory that they did not hurry, but this is an illustration of the fact that God always comes to us in the right time and in the right way. The act of the angel passing behind was God interposing, so that we discover that the thick darkness was before the hosts of Egypt, and as they were superstitious, they would not plunge into it; besides, they would have to brush the Almighty aside before they could take them. When you see God behind you, you can be sure that there is a danger threatening you.

The great cloud on the side of the Israelites was light as day, and that next the Egyptians was utter darkness and the cloud kept moving up as the army of Israel moved on to the seashore. In the morning the army of Israel went on and crossed the sea, the waters of which were parted by the staff of Moses. And God was behind them, and when they passed the water closed behind them and they were saved from the Egyptians. It is always safe for a man to trust God, and there is nothing like troubles and trials to make a good Christian.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MR. WOOD

The funeral of the late Mr. John Wood, which took place from the family residence, 404 Belmont avenue, on Saturday afternoon, was a striking evidence of the universal and high character of the esteem he earned during his three score and five years of residence in Peterborough and vicinity. There was a very large concourse of the people of the city and country, including several from Toronto and other outside places. All of the five sons of the family, though living in widely separated homes, were present on the occasion, namely, Mr. George A. Wood, Newport, Rhode Island; Mr. E. R. Wood, Toronto; R. W. Wood, Fernie, B.C.; Mr. F. P. Wood and Mr. W. B. Wood, Toronto. The religious services at the residence were conducted by Rev. I. Couch, pastor of the George street Methodist church, of which Mr. Wood was a member, assisted by Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church and a long cortege of carriages conveyed the remains to their last resting place in Little Lake cemetery.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The swimming campaign at the Y. M.C.A. has developed beyond all expectations, no less than 78 boys being out for their swimming lessons Friday. Owing to the large number that are already enrolled it has been found necessary to close the list of candidates for the time being, and only those who have their names already on the list will be taken in during the next week.

The Intermediate Leaders held their first annual banquet Friday night, and a most enjoyable time was spent. Mr. H. M. Gilchrist gave the members a most interesting and helpful address on "Leadership" after which he presented Mr. "Bill" Hastie with a locket from the other members of the Intermediate Leaders Corps in recognition of the faithful and unselfish service rendered since the organization of the Corps. "Bill" replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the members of the Corps for their kindness.

The athletic events for the boys' contest for Thursday will be the 100 yds. run and the standing broad jump.

RECEIVED FIRST COMMUNION

Sixty-seven boys from St. Peter's Cathedral and sixty-seven of the St. Mary's Girls celebrated their first communion yesterday, after being examined in their Christian doctrine last week by Rev. Fr. McColl, Rector of St. Peter's.

The boys assembled in the morning at St. Peter's school and marched in procession to the Cathedral.

The banner of the Sacred Heart was carried by Stanley Rogue, assisted by Arthur Donohue, Willie Bagley Harold Henry and John McLaurier. When mass was celebrated by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor at 8.15. Holy Communion was then celebrated by his Lordship, assisted by Rev. Fr. McColl.

After the services his Lordship addressed the children, and explained to them the importance of the celebration that had taken place.

At 3.30 the children assembled and marched to the Cathedral, renewed their baptismal vow, and were enrolled in the Scapular of the Blessed Virgin, after which his Lordship gave the children some good words of advice.

The act of consecration to the Sacred Heart was read by Willie Beglie, assisted by Fred Hayes and George Rutherford, and by Miss. Marion Hayes.

The children showed the effects of an excellent training by the manner in which they conducted themselves throughout the various services.

Peterboro Successes On Last Day Of The Big Montreal Horse Show

MONTREAL, MAY 13.— The most successful horse show in the history of the metropolitan city of the Dominion, came to a conclusion on this (Saturday) evening. The great pavilion was crowded both afternoon and evening.

Class 40—At 9.40 p.m. Saturday evening 12 runabout horses were shown. Mr. Stratton's mare 'Midget' caught the crowd and the judges by her great speed and style and in a very short time the decision of the judges as to the blue ribbon could be seen. "Midget" was called to the centre of the arena and the crowd loudly applauded the award. This runabout mare has been all every condition she has been exhibited this season.

Class 31—Six harness tandems, lady to drive, "My Pride" and "Premier" could not act well under feminine hands. "My Pride" being too spirited an animal to be controlled by other than a strong arm, with the result that the team were not driven to advantage and were not awarded the usual position in front, having to be satisfied with third place.

Class 43—Gentlemen's pair, driven by Dr. Greenwood, of Guelph, Mr. Stratton's pair "My Pride" and "Premier" defeated the pair exhibited by Mr. John Stewart of Westmount, which carried off the first price at the opening of the Exhibition on Tuesday evening. Mr. Stratton's horses were splendidly handled by the genial doctor in this amateur class and their defeat of the supposedly crack pair of the Exhibition was recognized by the audience as a complete defeat for Montreal's crack pair. The driving that Mr. Stratton's pair has received during the past three weeks while attending the Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal shows has improved them very much in their going.

The Strathcormond Stables horses arrived home from Montreal this Monday morning, having completed the tour of the three greatest exhibitions of the year.

Captain George Frewer, well known to the public, will command the Steamer Lintonia, which which will run from Bobcaygeon to South Beach. Kaiser In England

Emperor Making a State Visit to King George to see a Statue Unveiled—Great Event To-morrow

SCORES OF ROYALTY

London, May 15.—The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor and Empress and Princess Victoria Louise aboard, arrived at Sheerness last evening. The German cruisers escorting the yacht exchanged salutes with the British warships. The latter were gaily decorated and the crews gave a cheering welcome to the visiting sovereigns. Their majesties remained aboard the yacht during the night.

Emperor Wilhelm and the Empress are making the first state visit by foreign monarchs to England since the death of Edward VII. They have come for the unveiling by King George of the statue in front of Buckingham Palace, which completes a great national memorial to Queen Victoria. This, however, will only be an incident of their visit, which extends over a week, during which the English court, now out of mourning, will entertain their distinguished guests at state banquets, a state ball and a gala performance at Drury Lane Theatre.

To-day the Emperor and Empress landed at Port Victoria, and proceeded to London, where they were greeted by King George and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family and escorted in open carriages to Buckingham Palace, where they will be the guests of the King and Queen. This evening there will be a family dinner at the palace.

The unveiling of the statue will take place to-morrow morning. The ceremony will not only be a picturesque military parade, but a religious service in which the choirs of Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Chapels Royal will have a share. On the stand with the King and Queen and the Emperor and Empress and Queen Alexandra will be many members of royal families, all, however, related to the royal family of England or representing relatives. Among them will be the King and Queen of Norway, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden; the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Prince Arthur of Connaught; Princess Henry of Battenburg and her sons; Prince and Princess Christian; Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, the Duchess of Albany, the Duke and Duchess Saxe-Coburg Gotha, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, and all the other members of the royal family. The Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch will represent the Czar and Czarina. All the dominion Premiers who have arrived for the Imperial Conference will also be present.

The national memorial, which the statue crowns and completes, is surrounded by a circular space, it stands directly in front of the palace, the Queen facing down the Mall. Around this space are piers surmounted with emblematical figures representing the chief possessions of the Empire. In the centre is the memorial proper, a stately monument of marble and bronze, which it has taken nine years to complete, at a cost of upwards of $1,000,000. On two sides are great fountains. Pedestals flank the broad flight of steps, surmounted by lions and bronze groups representing peace, progress, manufactures and agriculture. Over the fountains are colossal figures representing bravery and intelligence. From the centre of the granite platform rises a huge column around which the chief statues and groups are placed. At the base are seen four ships prows—two bearing trophies of the army and navy, and two fruit and flowers, emblematic of commerce and prosperity.

Some significance may be attached to the state banquet to be given in honor of the German Emperor next Thursday evening. Besides the members of the royal family, Sir Edward Grey, the German ambassador and possibly other diplomats will be present. The next day there will be a reception at the German embassy, and in the evening there will be the gala performance of "Money" at Drury Lane Theatre.

On May 18, the Emperor and Empress will go to Windsor to lay wreaths on the graves of Queen Victoria at Frogmore, and King Edward in St. George's Chapel. The state ball on Friday night will be one of the most brilliant gatherings of the year. The next day the royal visitors depart from England.

Taking Typhoid Precautions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Militia orders this year aim at the man who conveys typhoid around with him, though himself apparently well. They state that "no officer, non-commissioned officer or man of the militia, permanent or active, who has suffered from typhoid fever, within twelve months" will be allowed to proceed to Petawawa camp unless it has been satisfactorily proved that he is not a "carrier."

Acapulco Captured

Mexican Seaport is now in the Hands of Insurgentes—Madero Has Discussion in His Ranks

DIAZ HANGS TO JOB

Mexico City, May 15.—From Acapulco the Government Saturday received news of the capture of that port on May 8, despite the efforts of the garrison, supported by the guns of the cruiser Democrata.

The Government reports the burning of a textile factory by federals. Acapulco is in the state of Guerrero, one of the states controlled by the Figueroa Brothers. Its capture does not mean necessarily, that the condition of affairs has changed with the Figueroas in Mexico, as the place fell prior to the departure of Francisco Figueroa from the capital, to carry the terms to his brothers.

Occupied Cananea.

Sonora, Mexico, May 15.—All Cananea is celebrating the occupation by the insurrecto army and cries of "Viva Cabral," and "Viva Madero" fill the air.

Cabral's men having eaten their fill at eleven out at every restaurant in the [illegible] fraternized [illegible] possession of the town was gained [illegible] insurgent force without loss [illegible] to either side.

The federal garrison under Col. Chiapas, having surrendered with all [illegible] triumphant insurrectos, marched into the town at 3.30 Saturday afternoon. Mayor Arnold and all other local as well as federal officials accompanied the federal troops, who, as the agreement allowed, took their arms and ammunition. They are once entrained for Nogales. The insurrectos hated to hit Col. Chiapas go, as he is blamed for the execution of Prefect Talamentes and his sons. Senora Talamentes is in command of a body of troops. Juan Cabral is a native of Cananea, and when marching into the city he was almost pulled off his horse by enthusiastic admirers. Juan is only 25 years old and his revolutionary sentiments at the start of the rebellion made it unhealthy for him to remain here. He has called for the surrender of Nogales.

Juarez, Mexico, May 15.—Rebellion within the ranks of the Maderoist army Saturday morning resulted in the declaring under arrest of Francisco Madero, jr., Provisional President, the demand that the Maderos Cabinet resign, and for two hours threatened the destruction of the Juarez army as a concrete fighting force. The incipient rebellion arose in the ranks of the forces under Gen. Pascual Orozco, one of the fighting leaders of the Madero army, and was headed by Orozco himself.

A demand was made upon Provisional President Madero for food and money for his ragged and hungry soldiers. Madero was unable to satisfy these demands at the time, but his explanations were peremptorily thrown aside by the belligerent leader, Orozco, and his soldiers, and Madero was declared under arrest.

Finally the matter was settled by Gen. Madero promising that the immediate needs of the soldiers would be attended to, and the insurrectos, who had gathered in bands about the Madero home, left.

Diaz Still In Power.

Mexico City, May 15.—Gen. Diaz will not leave the Presidency while the country is in its present state of unrest, it is asserted by Finance Minister Jose Yves Limatour. He also said that Diaz stood ready to state in more explicit terms than those contained in his recent manifesto if necessary, his attitude with reference to his retirement.

The President, he said, had demanded to know from his opponents the terms in which they expect him to announce his willingness to resign, and is waiting a reply from them.

Judge Carbajal will wait a couple of days in El Paso to get Madero's reply.

Military Fatality.

Antwerp, Belgium, May 15.—A news despatch reports the capsizing of two barges laden with Belgian soldiers, during a storm, on the Lualaba River, one of the head streams of the Congo River, near Lokandu, Belgian Congo. Thirty lives were lost.

Forest Fires Extinguished.

Perth, May 15.—Bush fires which have been raging near Perth, are reported to have been practically extinguished, no further danger existing.

Fire in the Village of Lanark Saturday morning destroyed the hardware store of Taylor Bros., with loss of $5,000. Cause unknown.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Bluum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicine. If anyone had offered me fourteen for the empty bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR,
Bluum, Tex.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Youth and Girl Sought to Avoid Trial For Theft.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Avery McClain and Miss Bessie Smith, who were arrested in Toronto last Thursday, yesterday endeavored to commit suicide as the train upon which they were passengers in custody of detectives pulled into the outskirts of Philadelphia, where they were being brought to answer charges of stealing $2,500 worth of jewelry.

Although the young woman was supposed to have been thoroughly searched, she had succeeded in secreting a package of cyanide of potassium in her hair. Prior to reaching for the cyanide Miss Smith had been eating candy. She was just about to empty the box of cyanide into her mouth when Detective Ulrich, who had the couple in charge, noticed the poison label upon the box. He made a hasty grab for it and the woman struggled. She scratched and bit at the detective and he endeavored to pinion her arms without hurting her. In the melee the box containing the cyanide dropped, and she yelled to McClain: "Swallow it, Av, swallow it. End your troubles now. Don't let them send you to prison."

McClain made a movement as if to follow her instructions, and Ulrich transferred the attack from the girl to the man. Eventually both were subdued, and they were taken to Philadelphia without further trouble.

ON THE WAR PATH.

Nationalists Are Starting Out to Stump Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—It is announced that the Nationalists, headed by F. D. Monk, M.P., and Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., aided by other younger men, will begin a political campaign in this province, these demonstrations taking place between seed time and harvest. The dates will be announced later on, and it is quite likely that those gentlemen will then state their attitude on the reciprocity question. Although Mr. Bourassa published some time since a series of articles in Le Devoir favoring, if anything, the measure, he has since seen new light and will now take the field against the ratification of the pact.

It is also announced from Ottawa that Mr. Monk and his followers, who were elected as Conservatives, but who have declined to attend the party caucus, will throw in their lot with Mr. Borden against reciprocity when Parliament reassembles, and when the final vote will be taken on the measure, previous to dissolution.

Will Fight Payment.

Toronto, May 15.—Some, at least, of the shareholders of the ill-starred Farmers' Bank are preparing to fight rather than submit to the double liability call issued a few days ago by G. T. Clarkson, liquidator.

An initial step has been taken in the securing of an opinion from Sir Robert Bannatyne Finlay, eminent in the legal profession of Great Britain, as to whether the call might be successfully resisted. William Laidlaw, K.C., who has been prominent as a representative of the shareholders in Halton County, will present that opinion when the case comes up in the courts.

It is claimed that the bank was never from the beginning established on a legitimate basis as deceitful prospectuses were issued at the outset, the Minister of Finance was deceived when a charter was secured, false and lying affidavits were issued, and thus funds were recklessly dissipated in wild speculation.

Redistribution In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—Local politicians on both sides of the party fence, are giving a good deal of attention just now to the redistribution bill, which Sir Lomer Gouin has promised to bring down at the fall session of the Quebec Legislature.

It is generally understood that the new measure, which will be brought down by the Government at the next and last session of the present Legislature will give at least fourteen and very likely fifteen members to the Island of Montreal, including one for Jacques Cartier.

New Labor Party.

Montreal, May 15.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Montreal National Trades and Labor Council Saturday, it was decided to organize a political labor party in connection with the council, and to place labor candidates in several constituencies throughout Canada.

The new labor party will be conducted on lines similar to that of the British Labor party.

After The Smugglers

Montreal Police Lay Bare Big Traffic in Opium—Messenger is Arrested—Montreal a Depot

SMUGGLING DRUGS

Montreal, May 15.—Following the arrest of an express messenger in Plattsburg, N.Y., the story of the smuggling of large quantities of opium from China to Canada and thence into the United States has been laid bare. Working on information received from New York and Boston, the authorities here instituted search proceedings and discovered small quantities of the drug on the premises of twelve people here, two of whom are whites and ten Celestials. Letters and cheques of an incriminating character were also found. The authorities state that they have a clear case against the twelve persons, but refuse to divulge their names. They are now awaiting developments from the arrest of the messenger, at Plattsburg to secure information, which will incriminate a large number of people here and lead to the location of large quantities of opium which are known to be hidden here.

The discovery of the plot came through the great increase noticed in the traffic in the drug in New York, which lead to an investigation, as the result of which it was ascertained that the dealers were endeavoring to make out cheques for considerable amounts payable to persons, both Chinese and whites, in Montreal. The cheques were traced here and the men engaged in the business in this city located.

Conductors and express messengers on the various trains running between Canadian and American cities were the agents to carry the goods across the border.

The business has proved a lucrative one, as while the drug is purchasable here at $12 per pound, in New York, so great is the demand and so stringent the laws that $90 a pound is obtained for it.

While no exact estimate of the amount of the drug smuggled is obtainable, the authorities place it at not less than $100,000.

No Anti-Chinese Policy.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The Novoe Vremya in its editorial of yesterday denies the rumors published here that negotiations have been going on between Russia and Japan for a common anti-Chinese policy. The paper will say, however, that the Japanese and Russian Governments are negotiating for two conventions, one for the mutual extradition of criminals and the other for the mutual registration of patents.

The Winners In The Church League Games Three Fine Contests

An interesting football match was played on Saturday afternoon in connection with the Church League, on Park Street ground, between Park St. and St. John's. The teams lined up by Referee B. Retton, were as follows:

Park Street—Webb, Collett, Marsh, Pitcher, Marks, Biddle, Brisco, Thome, Tooly, Smith, Kennedy.

St. John's—Doddy, Renham, Hancox, Smith, Sinnorite, Brown, Mathers, Copson, Stewart, Gaskell, Shannan.

The home team won the toss and elected to kick with the wind, of which it was not much advantage, as it blew across the field. About three minutes after the start St. John's made tracks for the Park Street goal, and tested Webb with a good shot, but he saved, brilliantly. After the game had been in progress for 15 minutes, Park Street made a dash for St. John's goal; Kennedy gave Doddy a hot shot and he was forced to carry. This gave Park Street a free kick. The game was very close after that, both teams trying hard to procure a goal. But the backs were on the alert to avoid the goal. After 25 minutes' play a corner was given in favour of St. John's, which was placed very nicely by Smith. But there was no scoring. Then Park Street raced down the field and would have scored if Hancox had not tripped Kennedy and a free kick was given, of which Tooley shot just over the bar.

At this stage of the game St. John's had a look in and made a rush on the Park Street goal. The forwards played a good passing game, of which they made good use and G. Smith scored the first goal of the match. There was very little time left in which to play and Park St. seemed to go to pieces and St. John's had much the best of the play and Gaskinell made a good shot from outside right and scored goal No. 2 for St. John's. Webb had no chance to save. The time was getting short for the first half, but St. John's kept on pegging at the Park Street goal, but the backs and goal keeper were on the spot. Park Street was having a good run down towards the St. John's goal and Tooley made a good shot, but St. John's goal tender saved. Just then the referee blew his whistle for half time. Score, St. John's 2, Park St., 0.

Second Half.

Park Street started the ball and after two minutes' play Gaskell gave Webb a good shot to stop, which he did with good form. After fifteen minutes' play, the Park Street was having a little more of the game than St. John's and they gave St. John's back and goal keeper a warm time, but could not get through. The backs played with good judgment and kicked well. St. John's goal keeper played well. After 25 minutes' play St. John's came with a rush towards Park Street goal, and one of the Park Street backs gave St. John's a corner. The ball was well placed by Gimmills and Shannan scored No. 3 for St. John's.

Then Park Street woke up and made up their minds to do something for their supporters, but lucky for the home team several supporters came on the ground from St. James' match, and they began to put things right, and made Park Street play with determined pluck, and after a little time scored a goal for Park Street. The forwards worked well, and the outside left passed over to Tooley the inside right from which he scored a goal.

After five minutes' play from the kick-off Park Street went ahead and scored No. 2. Marsh, the St. John's goal tender, had no chance.

There was only 12 minutes left to play and during that time an unfortunate accident occurred to Mathers, the inside right of St. John's, who received a kick on the instep and could not take any more part in the game. Park Street took the advantage and kept up the pressure; but the backs and half-backs of St. John's played well and kicked and tackled with good judgment. St. John's broke away just towards the finish, and tested Park St. goal, but could not score. Then the whistle blew for time, the final score being St. John's 3, Park Street 2.

Both teams are strong and well balanced, and if the teams play the same men and keep their places, St. James will have to look out.

On Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park, the Y.M.C.A. football club entertained the fast St. James' eleven, and were beaten by the narrow margin of one goal to nil. Hodson was unable to take his usual place with the Saints, and his place was filled by Keith Sparrow, otherwise the Saints played the same team that beat St. John's on the previous Saturday. The "Y" spared no pains to put their best men in the field, even going to the extent of postponing the kick-off for half an hour, owing to the absence of the referee, and the celebrated "Doc." McPherson. As there were no signs of the referee Mr. Lingard officiated. The opening exchanges were fairly even, McPherson showing to advantage. Gash and Newton of the Saints sent in good shots, which tested the capabilities of the "Y" goal keeper. "Doc" gave a pretty pass to Miller, who swung out to Canniff, but Braun relieved. Hotson tried another shot at Fleming, who saved well. The Saints still pressed and a fruitless corner was forced. Percy Fitzgerald cleared in fine style. Hotson wouldn't be denied and opened the scoring by beating Fleming with a fine shot from the wing. The Saints' forwards showed a bit of last Saturday's form in a fine bit of passing, which was no use, as Gash shot right at Fleming, who cleared well. The "Y" attacked but their forwards shot wretchedly, Miller missing a good chance. Gribb and "Doc." had a passage at arms which finished by "Doc" kicking into touch. St. James' attacked again, and missed a lovely chance. From the goal kick the "Y" raced up, but finished weakly, the left half and inside left shooting yards wide. Play swung to the other end and Newton headed just over the bar. The Referee, at last saw that Canniff was offside, and from the free kick the Saints attacked, but Newton got his foot too far under, the ball going over the bar. Turner got a nasty kick on the jaw from Fleming, as he tried to get his head to one of Hotston's centres. Half-time arrived with the Saints attacking.

After the interval the "Y" attacked very strongly, Gribb clearing well; his strong kicking helping the Saints considerably. Leader the Saints' goal keeper, stopped two hot shots, and the "Y" nearly scored in an exciting scrimmage, near the Saints' goal. Tarte played a fine game, most of the "Y" attacking coming from his wing, but Gribb held him well. Turner and Gash both had good chances of scoring but they shot wide. After the second half had been in progress fifteen minutes, the game was stopped as the ground was wanted for baseball, so St. James were awarded the victory. Leader, for the Saints, kept a fine goal. He wasn't troubled much, but what he had to do was done in a clean style. Gribb and Braun had a harder task than they have had this season, but they were equal to the occasion, rarely missing their kicks, and tackling in a clean style that was a contrast to their opponents' bustling methods. Sandiford and Yates played well and Sparrow justified his inclusion in the team.

The forwards played well in midfield, but were weak in shooting, all the inside men being sinners in this respect.

St. James' forwards are unanimous in their decision that Percy Fitzgerald was the best man in the "Y" crowd. He played a fine game, the more awkward the kick, the easier he cleared; and his confrere was very little behind him. "Doc" was the pick of the halves, his judgment being first rate, and his head work fine. The wing halves played a nice game but they had a fast lot of forwards to deal with, their methods being a little robust. Tarte was the best of the forwards, and Miller a good second, but the rest were poor, one in particular played a very dirty game. The abrupt finish of the game was unsatisfactory, but that was the fault of the "Y" who seem to have their own ideas of punctuality.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my house and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

FOOTBALL

All players of Park street Football Club are requested to practise on Tuesday evening at 6.45, and all players and those interested in Park street, are asked to be at the meeting at the church parlours at 8.30. Jas. Theobald, secretary.

The Canadian General Football team, champions of the Midland League, won their second Midland League game of the season on Saturday afternoon, when they entertained the Bethany Club at the Exhibition grounds, and defeated the visitors by 1 goal to 0. McNamees scored the only goal of the game in the first half. Bethany put up a surprisingly good game and the match was close, hard fought and interesting. W. Patterson refereed satisfactorily. The teams were:

C.G.E.—Jones, Hull, McNamee, Milburn, Pagett, Masoff, Collins, Bridge, Davidson, French, Miller.

Bethany—Hannah, Price, Morton, Bigelow, Brereton, Staples, Bisson, Boggs, Dabney, Sheria, Kennedy.

BASEBALL

strong, well-balanced team in the Midland League this season was evident to any of the fans who attended the snappy practise at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, when over twenty players were out in uniform. There is an abundance of material; in fact there is keen, but friendly competition for almost every place in the infield and outfield, and it will not be the easiest matter in the world to make the selections so well are the players showing up in practise. The Club is fortunate in having a strong pitching staff, with Manager Quinlan and Rahmel, two clever right-handers, and Cresswell, a most promising south-paw; and no difficulty will be experienced in supporting the twirlers with a team strong in every department.

The squad was divided into two teams Saturday and a gingery seven innings' game was played with Silk O'Laughlin Dorris handling the indicator. The players showed up well in the field, and at the bat, and the practise was the best of the season. The teams lined up as follows:

The team will practise to-morrow night at Riverside Park and every player is asked to be on hand as close to 6 o'clock as possible. The dressing rooms at Riverside Park will be available from now on, and players may leave their uniforms there.

IT GOES TO LORDS

Parliament Bill Passes Last Stage in Commons—The Compromise is Unpopular—Lord Lansdowne's Bill

TORIES WILL FIGHT

London, May 16.—The fight in the House of Commons over the Parliament bill, also designated as the veto bill, for the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords, ended last night. An amendment moving the rejection of the whole bill was defeated by a vote of 368 to 243, and a motion for the adoption of the bill on its third reading was carried 362 to 241.

It is expected that the bill will go to the House of Lords at an early date.

The debate in the House of Lords yesterday, on the second reading of the Lord Lansdowne bill for the reconstruction of the Upper Chamber, indicated that the leader's orders will fail to coerce many of the Unionist peers into voting for a measure involving their own political extinction.

Baron Willoughby de Broke declared that the House as at present constituted, was the best the country could get, and if he were going to perish he would prefer to receive his quietus at the hands of the electors rather than at the hand of their lordships.

Lord Morley of Blackburn, spokesman for the Government, insisted that the passage of the veto bill must precede any settlement or compromise with respect to the Upper Chamber. He threw out the significant suggestion that in any reconstruction of the Lords the number would be restricted to 100. This is regarded as foreshadowing the purpose of the Government when the reform of the House of Lords comes before it for consideration.

GOING TO COUNTRY.

Nova Scotia Elections Will Be Held on June 14.

Halifax, May 16.—The Legislature of Nova Scotia is dissolved and the date of the elections has been fixed for Wednesday, June 14. The Legislature has run its full five years. The Liberals have held power in Provincial affairs in Nova Scotia for twenty-nine years, under two Premiers, with W. S. Fielding and George Murray, the latter for fifteen years and the former for fourteen. In the House of Assembly that has now been dissolved there are four Conservatives in the Opposition, with one Independent Liberal, and in the Legislative Council or Upper Chamber, where the members are appointed for life, there are only two who belong to the Conservative, or Opposition, party. Premier Murray will run for Victoria County, though he has not yet been nominated. Candidates have been nominated by the Conservatives in all of the eighteen counties except Antigonish, and the Liberals have made nominations in all except two, Victoria and Colchester. The ranks will be closed up in the three counties within few days.

THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY MUST BE DISSOLVED WITHIN SIX MONTHS

Supreme Court Holds That the Company is a Monopoly in Restraint of Trade—Other Large Corporations to be Looked Into.

IMPORTANT DECISION

Washington, May 16.—The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday upheld the decision of the Missouri courts ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

The Supreme Court holds:

That the Standard Oil Co. is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

That this giant corporation must be dissolved within six months.

Corporations whose contracts are "not unreasonably restrictive of competition" are not affected.

Other great corporations whose acts may be called into question will be dealt with according to the merits of their particular cases.

The court was unanimous as to the main features of the decision, Justice Harlan dissenting only as to a limitation of the application of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

President Taft and Cabinet will consider immediately the entire trust situation and the advisability of pressing for a federal incorporation act.

The decision in the tobacco case was not handed down yesterday, but is expected on May 29.

Chief Justice White, in his opinion, first reviewed the preliminary proceedings in the case in the Circuit Court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri. He restated the essential points in the bill of the Government asking for the dissolution of the Standard Oil, and the answer questioning the jurisdiction of the court and denying the claims of the Government. He dismissed the objection to the jurisdiction in a few words, by holding that it was not well founded. He then came to the arguments as to the law and the facts in the case, saying that out of the "jungle" of law and facts both sides were agreed only in one thing, and that was that the determination of the controversy rested upon the proper construction and application of the first and second sections of the Anti-Trust Act. The views of the two sides, as to the law, the chief justice said, were as wide apart as the poles. The same, he said, was true as to the facts.

In this state of affairs, the chief justice seized upon the single point of concord, namely, the application of the two sections of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, as the initial basis of an examination of the contention. The rest of his opinion divides itself into a consideration of the meaning of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in the light of the common law and the law of the United States at the time of its adoption, the contentions of the parties concerning the act and the scope and effect of the decisions of the Supreme Court, the application of the statute to the facts, and, lastly, the remedy.

In striving to get at the meaning of the two sections of the law he said that the sole subject with which the first section dealt was "restraint of trade," and that the attempt to monopolize and monopolization" was the subject of the second section. The chief justice said that in getting at the meaning of these words he would be guided by the principle that where words are employed in a statute, which at the time had a well-known meaning in common law, or in the law of the country, they were presumed to have been used in this sense unless the context compels to the contrary.

CAPTURED MANIAC.

Constable and Son Arrest Wild Hermit Near Brockville.

Brockville, May 16.—County Constable Hourigan of Brockville had an exciting encounter with a maniac named W. A. Vandusen, living practically the life of a hermit on a lonely island in Gananoque Lake, 10 miles north of Lansdowne. For twelve years this man had made his home in a shack with a vicious dog as his only companion, and a rifle and shot gun convenient in times of emergency. The man has the reputation of being an expert hunter and trapper, and recently his mind became affected to such an extent, that residents of the locality within a radius of five miles were alarmed at his actions. Vandusen had an imaginery grievance against one of their number, William Lee, and a few days ago Lee learned that Vandusen had on two occasions been seized with an impulse to kill him, first with an axe, and secondly with a gun. He accordingly came to Brockville and swore out a warrant for the man's arrest.

The constable was driven off by Vandusen and his dog on his first visit to the island. On the occasion of a second visit, Hourigan and his son found that Vandusen had left the island, the dog having been made secure in the shack by the maniac before taking his departure. After waiting four or five hours under cover, they were rewarded by Vandusen returning. Hourigan allowed him to get within a few feet of the house before he pounced upon him. Though completely taken by surprise, he fought like a wild animal for ten minutes before the handcuffs were adjusted. During the melee the crazed man bit the constable's fingers, but not seriously.

When arraigned in the Police Court here yesterday, Vandusen presented a wild and woolly appearance. He told the magistrate that he had thought of killing Lee, saying: "The devil tempted me, but the Lord stopped me." He was remanded to be examined for his sanity. With the capture of Vandusen, residents of the locality where he made his haunts, are breathing easier.

STUDENTS PUT WRONG.

Witnesses in the Workman Case Say Harm Was Done.

Montreal, May 16.—That many of Dr. Workman's pupils had undoubtedly gone to the bad in a theological acceptance of the term, as the result of their professor's teachings, was the evidence adduced yesterday in the Workman libel suit case. Rev. Drs. Young of Montreal and Scott of Brantford both declared that Dr. Workman's views were at variance with the standards of the Methodist faith.

Mr. Justice Weir endeavored to obtain an admission from one of the witnesses that the doctrinal standards were subject to change and evolution, and asked if it was not true that the minister had placed a broader interpretation on the gospel than did he of fifty or a hundred years ago. The witnesses, while admitting that there was a broader interpretation given the doctrine to-day, no less positively averred that the doctrinal standards were in nowise affected thereby.

The judge also asked if it was not the very essence of Protestantism that every man should think as he pleased, and the answer given was that even granting this a Methodist minister was bound in conscience to teach the doctrines as outlined in the standards of his faith.

The chief points on which the witnesses declared Dr. Workman's teachings to be at variance with the doctrinal standards of his church were the questions of the corporal resurrection of Christ, the virgin birth, the nature of the atonement and the historical actuality of the fourth gospel.

Rev. Father Kidd In Charge.

Toronto, May 16.—By the unanimous vote of Bishop Dowling of Hamilton, and His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, Rev. Father John T. Kidd has been appointed administrator of the archdiocese of Toronto, until the appointment of a successor to the late Archbishop McEvay is made.

The rumor that Rt. Rev. Mgr. McCann had been appointed was emphatically denied by all concerned last night. Father Kidd is sole administrator.

Local Catholics are inclined to think that Bishop Fallon of London will be the new archbishop.

Labor Leaders Freed.

Washington, May 16.—Holding that the imposition of jail sentences on Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, president, vice-president, and secretary respectively of the American Federation of Labor, were unwarranted by the nature of the contempt and that the District Supreme Court should only have imposed a fine, the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday freed the labor leaders, and directed that the cases against them be dismissed.

Instantly Killed.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 16.—J. W. Stanilaw was instantly killed yesterday morning at the coke plant of the Michigan Lake Superior Corporation by falling between two heavy-laden coke cars, which were moving out of the yards. Both legs were cut off. He had been standing on the top of a coke pile, when he missed his footing and was precipitated on the track.

REVIVING SCANDAL

Opposition Rake Up the Affairs of 1905 and 1906—An Attack is Made on Hon. Mr. Fisher at Yesterday's Session

RESOLUTION DEFEATED

Ottawa, May 16.—A resolution, the intent of which was to renew the campaign of scandal-mongering which has lain in abeyance during the reciprocity debate, was introduced by W. D. Staples in the Commons yesterday.

It furnished an opportunity for the revamping of the election misdemeanors at Prince Albert in 1905 and London in 1908.

When the motion to go into committee of supply was reached, W. D. Staples made a speech in criticism of Hon. Sydney Fisher, in connection with the appointment of census enumerators and then moved in amendment: "In the selection and appointment of public officers, the Government is exercising a public trust and should be guided by consideration of the character and capacity of the person whom it is proposed to appoint. That the delegation of such a public trust to a local party committee or organizer is a public scandal and deserves the censure of this House."

Mr. Staples intimated at the outset that the matter would not have been brought up had certain questions which he put to the Minister of Agriculture the other day been answered to his satisfaction. He had asked whether or not the Liberal organizer of Manitoba had recommended the persons in that province appointed as enumerators, and Mr. Fisher had declined to answer. He had also asked if the enumerators were to be schooled by the Liberal organizer, and the Minister had replied in the negative in a very impolite manner. Mr. Staples then read letters addressed confidentially to census enumerators and signed: "Yours in the good cause, H. H. Perry."

Mr. Staples followed up the reading of the letters by a description of the incidents arising out of the provincial bye-election in 1905, when a poll was unlawfully held in the far north and 151 bogus ballots turned in to the returning officer. He read various letters which Perry, the present Liberal organizer in Manitoba, had addressed to Moberley McLeod and Neilson, the principals in that incident, which went to show that after they had been fined and left the country, Perry was in communication with them to stay away. Mr. Staples wanted to know if Perry was the kind of a man in whom the Minister of Agriculture had confidence.

Mr. Fisher said he did not hesitate to say that Mr. Perry, like many others, had made recommendations as to the appointment of census enumerators. "I do not," he said, "acknowledge in this House the recommendations on which I act and I do not propose to do so. They are of a private nature and it is the policy of the Government not to make them public."

Mr. Staples asked if, in view of the letters he had produced, the Minister still considered Mr. Perry to be a fit and proper person.

Mr. Fisher said he did not propose to accept any evidence against any man except such as had been established in a court of law. This was the first he had heard of these letters and he did not propose to accept them as evidence against Mr. Perry.

In reply to a question by Mr. Lake the Minister said that Moberley, who was engaged on census work in 1905, had been dismissed as soon as it was established in court that he had been guilty of offences in connection with an election. He would do the same thing to-day if it were shown that any census official was an improper person. Touching on the correspondence which passed between Mr. Perry and the principals in the Prince Albert election, as quoted by Mr. Staples, the Minister said that he gathered that they had been guilty of some trivial offences.

R. L. Borden interrupted to say that they were guilty of eight or ten offences against the election, and, besides, had committed forgery and perjury.

Mr. Staples' amendment was voted down by 84 to 51, a Government majority of 33.

George Taylor (Leeds) asked if it was true that the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding on the reciprocity agreement were being sent out in bundles to postmasters, who were instructed to distribute them. He was informed that this was the case. He said that the Government had no business to use the postmasters for political purposes. The Postmaster-General being absent, the Minister of Finance said he would bring the matter to his attention.

Mr. Fielding gave notice last night for Wednesday next of this resolution:

"Resolved that it is expedient to amend the Customs Tariff Act of 1907 to provide as follows:

(1) "The Governor-in-Council may by order-in-council extend to Japan for a period not exceeding two years from July 17, 1911, the benefit of the tariff advantages at present enjoyed by that country on its exports to Canada as expressed by and contained in article V. of the treaty of commerce and navigation between Great Britain and Japan, signed July 16, 1894, which treaty was made applicable to Canada by the convention between the United Kingdom and Japan respecting commercial relation between Canada and Japan signed at Tokio on Jan. 31, 1906; provided, however, that such advantages shall only be extended to Japan when and so long as the Governor-in-Council is satisfied that Canada will receive and is receiving during such period the reciprocal tariff advantages enjoyed by Canada at present on its exports to Japan under the provisions of the said article and the said convention.

W. O. Scoley (Wentworth) made a plea for a branch experimental farm station and better facilities for the handling of fruit.

Hon. Mr. Fisher said that there was a sum in the supplementaries for the construction of a free cold storage cooling plant for fruit in the Niagara district.

G. H. Barnard said this was a somewhat labored attempt of the Minister of Agriculture to pull Mr. Scoley out of the hole he had got into over the reciprocity agreement.

COMMONS ON DIVORCE.

Unusual Debate Occurs Regarding Hearsay Evidence.

Ottawa, May 16.—The unusual spectacle of a divorce bill being discussed on the floor of Parliament was witnessed when the bill for the relief of Gertrude Mary Grantham came before the committee of the whole for consideration. This bill was favorably reported by the Senate, but the Commons' private bills committee hesitated on the ground that the evidence was entirely of a hearsay character.

The petitioner is a daughter of Sir William Mackenzie of Toronto, and Sir Alan Aylesworth said he was not astonished that the private bills committee should have hesitated before reporting the bill. The evidence was entirely hearsay and consisted of the testimony of the wife, the defendant's doctor and Sir William Mackenzie to the effect that Grantham had confessed to misconduct. The Minister of Justice pointed out that while there was no collusion between the wife and husband suggested it was possible that the defendant might have boasted of his affairs with other women in order to get the wife to sue for divorce.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton took an entirely different view, as did E. M. MacDonald of Pictou, who urged that the House should be very careful in setting aside the judgement of the Senate divorce committee, and the Senate itself, which had passed this bill. Mr. Lancaster supported Sir Alan Aylesworth on the ground that to grant divorce on such evidence would be a bad example to young married couples. He also regretted that divorce was getting to be such a favorite fashion.

Mr. Borden argued that the evidence in the case was such as was always accepted and the bill passed in 1888 and 1894.

It is a Real Pleasure
To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of these modern glasses. They are certainly the finest produced in any country, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. We take a most thorough examination of the eyes, and are most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficient experience in refracting and adapting.

By CLIVE M. BRUCE

"Child," said the Kapellmeister, suddenly! "You are sobbing!"

"I am not—I am laughing, dear Master. Look at me! There is the mill across the promenade. How gaunt the wheel looks, and strange, with its spokes dripping, and the rain lashing down! And there is a light in my windows a candle, see? Old Marta is waiting, and how she will scold. Tell me, Master—dear Master, before we get there, tell me—some day may I set Brunhilde and sing, when the curtain is up, and the house is full, and Siegfried is there, and you at the baton—and the orchestra playing? Tell me!"

She drew closer to him, and the last words came out in a whisper, breathless and eager. "Put those other thoughts out of your mind, dear Kapellmeister. Ve—Velasco is only a name—nothing more.

"If I can sing I will be happy; I promise you. The sting of the curse will—pass. You are silent and cold!" she cried, "you won't tell me, and we are almost there—at the mill! Master!"

The Kapellmeister started: "The mill?" he stammered, "what were you saying, Kaya? How cold your hand is, little one! Of course you shall sing. You shall be our great Brunnhilde and the visitors will flock to Rheinstadt, and you will be famous and beloved."

He hesitated: "I can't see you, only your eyes gleaming Kaya. How bright they are, little one, like live coals! Where did you get that name—'Master'? Did Marta teach you? My pupils say that, the chorus, the orchestra, and the singers; but you never used it before. It is because I am old now and my hair is grey, and you are a child. I must seem to you like your father, Kaya."

"No," said the girl, quickly, "not my father! He was hard and cruel: he was a friend of the Tsar. I—I never loved him."

"Nor me," cried the Kapellmeister hoarsely, "nor me!"

The words sprang to his lips in spite of himself; they were low, and he thought she did not hear; but her ear was keen. She bent forward taking his hand, and kissed it swiftly, holding it between her own.

"Dear Kapellmeister! Dear Master!" she cried, half laughing, half with a sob: "You know I love you. When I was ill and alone, and desperate, and helpless, longing to die, you came to me. You saved me and helped me; and I was nothing to you but a stranger. You were father and mother to me; and now you are my master and teacher, and friend." She lifted his hand again to her lips and caressed it: "I love you," she cried, "dear Master, I love you with all my heart!"

Ritter stirred against the cushions: his hand lay limp in her clasp. "Yes, little one," he said, "yes. Your heart is like your voice, fathomless and pure. The carriage has stopped now, and there is the candle burning up yonder under the eaves. Can you find your way alone, without help? I am strangely weary."

His voice was low and the words came slowly, with an effort. He passed his hand over his face:

"Good-night—Brunnhild!"

He held her hands and drew her towards him: "Good-night, little one. There are shadows under your eyes, and your lip quivers; you are pale.—Good-night." He held her for a moment in a strong grasp, staring down into her face; then she was gone and the door closed behind her. His hands were empty, and the horses had turned, and were galloping back through the rain and the night.

CHAPTER XX.

It was dusk and the lights of the Rathskeller began to twinkle out one by one. The Keller was long and rambling, divided into innumerable small alcoves and corners, partitioned by strange and antique carvings.

The ceiling was low, with octagonal vaults like a cloister. On the smoke-grimed walls, here and there, were mural paintings of knights in armour, and fat peasants drinking, dimmed and half obliterated. Beneath were legends and proverbs,—printed in quaint, old-German characters; while across one end, like a frieze, ran a ledge carven with gargoyles, rude and mis-shapen. On the ledge were beer mugs of every size and description, with queer tops and cracked handles. Above, suspended from the ceiling by chains, hung a huge Fass; and from the throats of the gargoyles, dragon and devil alike, dripped the beer, turned on by small taps hidden.

In and out, among the tables, sped the waitresses in their Tyrolese costume, with its picturesque head-dress; and beyond lay the garden, innumerable bulbs of light gleaming like fire-flies among the trees.

"Bitte um zwei Munchener!"

"Sogleich, meine herren."

"Ein Chartreuse und ein Pilsener!"

"Ja wohl! Sofort!"

And the waitresses sped, vying with one another, coquetting with patrons, smiling gayly with sharp retorts; their eyes bright, their trays laden with foaming beer mugs.

In one of the alcoves, far back in the shadow, sat two gentlemen. The younger had removed his hat, and was pushing the hair impatiently back from his brows. His eyes were dark and sleepy, half covered by the brows, weighed down by the lids.

He was leaning on one elbow and responded languidly to his companion's half heeding, toying with his hands, and strumming on the table with his fingers, which were white, and supple, and full of magnetism.

Beside him lay a violin.

"You are nervous to-night, Velasco!"

"I am always nervous."

"What shall we eat and drink?"

"Donnerwetter—what you please! If I eat, I cannot play. Bring me some of that Rhine wine, Fraulein, the white in the slanting bottles and a plate of Pretseln. No beer—bewahre!"

The Musician raised his hands with a shrug of his shoulders, and then sank back in his former listless attitude.

"That is your Polish taste, Velasco. Try a bit of Schinken with me, or a Stackchen of Cervelat with cheese—eh? If you eat, you will be less nervous, and your fingers will become warm. When you play, you are abstinent as a priest before the mass."

The older man smoothed his beard which was turning grey, and lifted the beer mug to his lips.

"Ich danke!" said Velasco with irony: "My dear Kapellmeister, I am not as those who would serve Art with a bottle of champagne under each arm. I want no fumes in my brain and no clod between my fingers when I meet the Muse face to face."

"You are right there," said Ritter, thoughtfully, lowering his glass: "It is like a pearl coming out of the throat of a swine to hear the tones from Bauermann's fingers, when he can scarcely keep himself at the pianoforte, and his head rocks between his shoulders like a top falling. His sense of beauty is all that is felt of him, and that seems over ripe, like a fruit left too long in the sun. Materialism is the artist's curse. Their heads are in the clouds and their feet are in the slough.—Pah!"

The Kapellmeister tapped his glass sharply with the edge of his knife, and called without turning: "Hey—a Munchener, Fraulein!"

He scanned the face of his companion curiously. The Violinist seemed to be dreaming; he held the Rhine wine in his hand, gazing down into its liquid gold as if a vision lay at the bottom of the glass.

"Velasco!"

"Are you asleep, Velasco?"

"Potztausend—no! I hear what you say! You speak of musicians and swine in the same breath. It is true. You ought to know, who wave the baton over them year in and year out. They rise like a balloon and then they fall—!"

He dropped his hands on the table with an expressive gesture. "They give out through the senses; they take in the same way." He lifted the glass, staring into it again: "But it is not through pleasure, not pleasure. Bitter, never pleasure, that their senses are developed, and they learn to feel, and give back what they have felt. They think it is pleasure, and they fall into the error, and their art dies within them sooner or later. It is like some fell thing clutching at their feet, and when they try to rise it seizes them and drags them back, and they sink finally — they sink!"

The Kapellmeister leaned forward on the table, scanning the young face opposite him: "A year ago, Velasco, your chin was round and full; from the look of your mouth one could tell that you had lived and enjoyed. You were like the Faun, happy and careless, and your art was to you like a plaything. You cared only for your Stradivarius, and when you were not playing, you were nothing, not even a man. All your genius was concentrated there in your brows, where the music lies hidden. Your virility was in your tones, and your strength in your fingers. What has come over you?"

"Am I changed?" said Velasco. His throat contracted. He held the glass to his lips, but he did not drink.

The Kapellmeister gazed at him strangely: "Yes, you are changed. In one year you have grown ten. What it is I cannot tell, but the look of your face is different. The mouth has grown rugged and harsh; there are lines under your eyes, and your lips are firm, not full. It is as if a storm had burst on a young birch, and torn it from its bank amid the grass and the heather, and an oak had grown up in its place, brought into life by the wind and the gale."

Velasco tossed off the Moselle and laughed bitterly: "I have done with pleasure," he said. "I have lived and I know life, that is all. There is nothing in it but work and music."

"Tell me, Velasco," said the Kapellmeister, slowly, "don't be offended if I ask, or think that I am trying to pry into your affairs. When you were rehearsing this morning it occurred to me.—There was something new in the quality of your tone. Before, you were a virtuoso; your technique was something to gaze at and harken to, and there was no technique like it in Europe; now—"

"Well—now?" cried Velasco, "was I clumsy this morning? Was anything the matter? Potztausend!—why didn't you tell me?

His eyes gleamed suddenly under his brows and he twirled his fingers, toying with them nervously. "Gott—Kapellmeister! Why didn't you tell me at once?"

"Now—" said the Kapellmeister. He looked up at the Bierfass, hanging by its chains, and his gaze wandered slowly over the legends on the wall, the gargoyles dripping; the mugs with their quaint tops and their handles twisted, the roof in its octagonal vaults, smoky, begrimmed; and then back again to the table, and the flask before Velasco, yellow and slanting.

"Now—" he said, "you are no longer a virtuoso, you are an artist, and that, as you know, is something infinitely greater and higher and more difficult of attainment. All the great violins of my time I have heard; most of them I have conducted."

Ritter's voice lowered suddenly to a whisper, and he leaned forward, touching the other's hand with his own: "I tell you, Velasco, and I know what I say—you played to-day at rehearsal as none of them played, not even Sarasati, king of virtuosi; or Joachim, prince of artists. You played as if the violin were yourself, and your bow were tearing your own heart strings, . . . don't move! Do not get up! What is it, Velasco? You are as white as death and your eyes are staring! Listen to my question and answer it, or not, as you please. This is not an age of miracles. The birch was not torn from the bank without reason, or the oak transplanted. Tell me—have you ever loved a woman?"

MOOSE ON EXHIBITION

There was exhibited in the Pioneer Market at Calgary at the end of December the carcass of a magnificent moose, weighing nearly 1,500 pounds, the exhibit attracting a great deal of interest. When the story of the moose, which when alive must have been six feet high at the shoulders, was told the interest deepened, for the animal was shot near the main thoroughfare of Edmonton.

FACTS ABOUT FOWLS

To pluck a fowl speedily, place it in boiling water for a few minutes. When you remove it you will find a good many feathers have come off, and the rest will yield to a very light plucking.

If you are uncertain as to the age of a fowl, partly steam or boil it in a little water for about an hour before browning it in the oven, and it will be as tender as a young chicken.

WHAT A MARBLE WILL DO

Everybody knows that a marble placed in a bottle will prevent fur collecting round the inside, but few people know that a large clean marble, say a glass alley, boiled in milk, porridge, custard, or sauce, will automatically stir the liquid as it cooks. This prevents any chance of the liquid burning, and saves you the trouble of constant stirring, besides giving you both hands free to attend to your other duties.

Rowing Across North Sea

The foundation of Normany a thousand years ago by the hardy Normans from Scandinavia is soon to be celebrated in several ways, the most striking being the project of seven Norwegian students to row from Bergen to Rouen in a boat which will be an exact copy of that in which King Hugleik with his Vikings rowed up the Seine in A.D. 910.

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETSKI, 2026 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

FIGHT THE HOUSE FLY

The Necessity of a Campaign to Exterminate the Pest

This is a question that comes to the fore every year as regularly as summer approaches. Instead of being regarded as a necessary evil, as was the case some years back, movements are at last being set on foot to systematically exterminate the pest, but even now the majority of people do not realize what a menace to life and what a terrible disease-breeder it is. Screens are all very well to keep the flies out of our buildings, and fly-paper and other exterminators undoubtedly fill their own place, but what ought to be impressed upon the public is the stern necessity for removing the causes that breed flies. This is one of the cases where entire prevention is the only means of cure, and cleanliness seems to be both the beginning and the end of the house fly problem.

Across the border a systematic plan of campaign has this year been adopted. Cash prizes are being offered to the pupils of the public schools in many of the cities for the best essays on "The House Fly as a Carrier of Disease," in the belief that in this way children and parents both will become familiar with sanitary principles. Florida, Tennessee, and Louisiana have all adopted the prize plan, and the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs has signified its approval. In North Carolina a "Fly Catechism" is been distributed containing questions and answers such as this specimen one: "Do flies ever kill anyone? They killed more American soldiers in the Spanish-American War than the bullets of the Spaniards." Travelling fly-exhibits are being put on view, and insurance and other business companies are issuing special circulars containing fly facts. Within the last few months New York and Boston and other large cities have passed regulations providing for screening from flies and dust all food, candy, etc., offered for sale.

If we had no stables, and no sewage discharging into open waterways, two of the great causes of the fly pest would disappear, but as we are likely to have both for some time yet, we must make our rules fit the situation. If every housewife would realize the seriousness of the question and try to live up to the full extent of her own responsibility (such as keeping garbage cans covered, and when empty sprinkling them with lime or kerosene, keeping the back yards empty of all refuse, using every means to kill all flies that get in past the screens), much could be accomplished by the women alone in minimising the fly evil.

SOLDIER, LAWYER, STATESMAN

Sketch of the Life of the Late Sir Alphonse Pelletier

The late Sir Alphonse Pelletier, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, was distinguished as a soldier, lawyer and statesman. His regime at Spencerwood has been peculiarly happy, and he kept up the best traditions of the official residence for hospitality and intellectual activity. He was born at Riviere Ouelle, Quebec, in 1837, his father being Mr. J. M. Pelletier. He took his degree at Laval, and was called to the Quebec Bar in 1860, being appointed a Q.C. nineteen years later. He commanded the 9th Battalion during the Fenian Raid of 1866, and had also had other military experience. He represented Kamouraska in the Commons from 1869 to 1877, and in the latter year was called to the Senate. He was Minister of Agriculture in the Mackenzie Administration from January, 1877, until the resignation of that Government. His appointment as Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec dates from September 15, 1908, and he had filled several other important and responsible positions with credit and ability.

FINANCIAL TIMES ON CANADA

The Financial Times, London, England, says: "Canada, despite all that is said by the enthusiastic agents, is not, in the opinion of shrewd observers, really desirous of receiving British emigrants except those of the laboring classes, but is willing to absorb all the surplus capital this country is able to spare."

Could Not Walk Ten Yards Without Resting.

WEAK HEART WAS THE CAUSE.

Mrs. Robinson Collette, Rogersville, N.B., writes: "I am now enjoying the best of health after having used your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I was troubled with a weak heart and was afraid to draw a long breath for the pain it would cause me. I could not sleep at night, and it was impossible for me to walk ten yards without resting myself. I cannot speak too highly of your Heart and Nerve Pills, for they are the greatest pill I have ever used and I can recommend them to all sufferers."

Thousands of people go about their daily work on the verge of death and yet do not know it.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart for the simple reason that one thinks it will right itself, but there is where the mistake is made. It is only when a violent shock comes that the weakness of the heart becomes apparent.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, flagging energy or physical breakdown, the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will soon produce a quick and permanent cure.

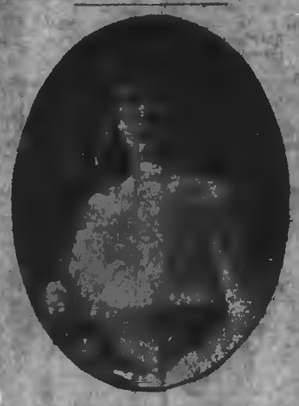
THE CORONATION CARPET

Scotland Has the Honor of Making the Carpets which will Cover the floor of Westminster Abbey for the Coronation, and the looms of a great carpet factory at Glasgow have been busily engaged upon the important task.

The floor covering has from earliest times been a specific feature in the preparations for the stately ceremony, and in the Liber Regalis prepared for Richard II., a copy of which is in the safe keeping of the Deans of Westminster, there is a definite order as to the "Ray cloth of Florre" to be placed under the "King's feet as he goeth." At all the later coronations the carpet has been of a rich and beautiful character, with as lustrious a surface as possible, and from the quantities needed in the more recent times it is one of the first requirements to be set in hand. The new carpet will follow very closely upon lines of that ordered for King Edward's crowning. Then as now the color was a singularly soft, rich blue. The design was symbolical and embodied the badge and motto of the Order of the Garter and the Tudor rose, with the thistle, shamrock, and lotus connected with festoons of bay leaves and ribbons. These were effectively shown in a rather lighter shade of color and the whole formed an admirable background to the magnificence of the State robes, the ecclesiastical vestments, the crimson of the peeresses' dresses, and the military and diplomatic uniforms.



PRINCESS MARY
Born April 25, 1897.

CORONATION SUMMER

Many Brilliant Ceremonies Will be Held—A Great Series.

From May on to the end of July London will be the scene of a series of festivities unequalled in splendor, the Coronation being the culminating point. The ceremonies already arranged include:—

May 16.—Unveiling by the King of The Queen Victoria Memorial in the Mall, the Kaiser and Kaiserin attending.

May 23.—Openins of the Imperial Conference.

June 21.—The King receives Colonial Premiers.

June 22.—Coronation Day.

June 23.—Procession through South London.

June 24.—The King holds Naval Review at Spithead.

June 26.—Gala performance at the theatre.

June 29.—Special performance at the theatre.

If time permits, the King will also attend a military review at Aldershot and a gala performance at the Opera.

King George himself is taking a very active part in the preparations, and, being a comparatively young man blessed with excellent health and plenty of vigor, there is little doubt that His Majesty will be able to support the fatigues of the numerous ceremonies with ease.

The routes of two of the Coronation processions—that of Coronation Day, June 22, and that of the Royal Progress on June 23—have already been announced. These will be the last word in modern pageantry, but the third procession to St. Paul's and the Guildhall on June 29 will be confined to Their Majesties, the Court, and a Sovereign's escort. The route for this procession has not been definitely settled yet, but it is the intention of the arranging committee to choose other streets and approaches than those used for the two pageants. The route of the return will be totally different from that of the approach.

The Territorials will play an important part in the celebrations, both at the military review and in the lining of the streets of London during the octave.

The Australian Government has approved the arrangement to send eighty New South Wales senior cadets to England, under Major Wynne, to take part in the Coronation celebrations. The expenses of the cadets will be defrayed by private subscription.

Mr. Fisher, Premier of Australia, accepted the invitation of the Labor party to a banquet on May 25 at the Holborn Restaurant, to which every trade union in Britain has been asked to send a representative.

SKIN GRAFTING CASE

An extraordinary operation was performed at Victoria Hospital, London, by Dr. Edwin Seaborn, on William Hayden. The man had the misfortune to lose the lower part of his nose, and his index finger was fastened to the bone of the nose so that it will grow on. In a short time the finger bone will be amputated at the proper point, and with the use of some of the skin of the finger the nasal organ is expected to resume something like a normal appearance.

Soothing Healing Pain-relieving 'MECCA' OINTMENT

is simply the result of a run-down, nervous condition—due to the excessive strain under which people to-day are living. To prevent despondency the nerves and body must be in a healthy, vigorous condition. You must cure indigestion, sleeplessness, insomnia and other nervous diseases. For more than 50 years one of the greatest tonic stimulants known to medical science, has been an unfailing remedy for nervous troubles of every sort, building up the body and restoring the tissues to their naturally healthy condition. For overworked men, delicate women and sickly children it is a guarantee of health and happiness. Makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

All liquor dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. Medical booklet, containing rare common-sense rules for health, and testimonials, also doctor's advice, sent free to anyone who writes.

CORONATION RENTS

Exorbitant Prices Being Asked—What Seats Brought in Old Days.

Extraordinary sums are being asked for the rents of West-end flats and houses for the forthcoming Coronation season, and as an indication of the high prices likely to be obtained for good views of the procession, the promoter of a house in St. James Street, has let it to a wealthy American, who has contracted to pay $5,000 for the day.

Ten thousand to twenty-five thousand dollars are being asked for the season for houses round about Grosvenor Square. In Belgravia the prices range from $2,500 to $5,000, and $5,000 for the larger houses, while in the Hyde Park district, including Bayswater and Kensington, the rents are anything from $2,500 to $3,000, and similar rents are being asked for flats.

In the opinion of one well-known agent, these prices are altogether too excessive, and instead of good business being done there is the likelihood of a slump in house-letting, unless there is moderation in the rents asked. "Fancy rents," he said, "will keep prospective tenants to hotels, or keep them out of London altogether. And I might mention that the supply of houses to be let exceeds the demand."

Referring to Coronations of the past, it is interesting to note that whereas seats and rooms at the Coronation of Queen Victoria and King Edward brought anything from $100 to $2,500, in the very early days seats could be had for as low as a farthing. The earliest recorded price paid for Coronation seats was in the reign of Edward I., when a few extravagant sightseers are reported to have spent a "Q"—a coin equivalent to half a farthing or a quarter of a cent—for a good place from which to view the pageant.

At the Coronation of Edward II. a seat cost a halfpenny; Richard III., a penny; Henry V., twopence; and in Henry VI.'s reign the frequency of Coronations caused them to pall on the public taste, with the result that the price went down to a halfpenny. It rose again with Edward IV. to twopence, which was the standard price until Henry VII., when it was a whole groat. At Queen Elizabeth's Coronation the charge was a tester, or sixpence; at James I.'s a shilling; and was advanced to half a crown at the Coronation of Charles II. and James II. At that of King William and Mary it was a crown, and at George II.'s a guinea, increasing slightly with each successive reign until that of George IV.

SHIPBUILDING ON THE COAST

A Big Plant for the Esquimalt Graving Dock Company

The inauguration of a big shipbuilding enterprise on the Pacific coast which will be able to take a share in the building of Canada's new naval vessels is indicated by the passing of an order in council granting a subsidy for a dry dock and ship repair plant of the first class to the Esquimalt Graving Dock and Shipbuilding Co. The subsidy provided for under the statute passed last session is three and a half per cent. per annum on the total cost for a period of thirty-five years. According to the estimate of the engineers of the Department of Public Works on the plans submitted, the total cost of the dry dock, wharf, repair machinery, building, etc., will be $6,637,800. The dock will be 900 feet long, 41 feet deep and 128 feet wide, and capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat. The promoters are Messrs. Bullen, the well-known shipbuilders of the Pacific coast, who have associated with Denny Bros. of Dunbarton, Scotland, one of the largest shipbuilding firms in the United Kingdom.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

A Lindsay Physician Says They Should Aid Morality More

Dr. White, of Lindsay, strongly criticises the public schools for failing to help public morals and public health. "The schools are not," he says, "the aid to public morals that they should be. Immorality is more prevalent in the schools, and, consequently, out of the schools, than it ought to be, and the time for education in this regard is not fully taken advantage of. The school, too, is not the aid to public health it ought to be. Teachers do not know enough about these matters, or, if they do know, they do not impart it to the young mind when it is most likely to receive and assimilate it."

INCIDENT AT A FUNERAL

Both Roman Catholics and Presbyterians Claimed the Corpse

A peculiar incident happened at Charlottetown when, at the funeral of Mrs. McKinnon, two hearses, one sent by the Presbyterian Church and the other by the Roman Catholics, appeared to claim the remains, while two graves had been dug, one in the Protestant and the other in the Catholic cemetery, for the same woman. It was contended on the one hand that the woman had left money with the Presbyterian minister for her burial, while her relatives, who are Catholics, stated she had received rites of their Church. The funeral ceremony was conducted by the priest and burial took place in the Catholic cemetery.

SWEET PEASE

They will Grow in Almost Any Kind of Soil

No other flower has a place in so many gardens as the sweet pea, and almost no other gives such a maximum of reward for a minimum expenditure of labor. They will grow in almost any kind of soil, and, provided they are liberally furnished with sun and water, they respond generously. They do best on well-drained clay land. Though the season this year is late, sweet peas should be already planted, for they can scarcely be planted too early. The reason for this is that they do best in a very cool soil, and if sown early their roots have time to grow and reach down into a cool strata of ground, which helps them to withstand the later heat of the summer. They thrive best out in the open, and another point to remember is that they do not grow to well if grown for several successive years in the same spot. The universally accepted method nowadays for sowing them is to sow in a trench. The trench should be a foot deep and wide enough for a double row, the seeds sown, and covered with earth to the depth of only an inch. When the plants are three or four inches high the rest of the soil should be added, gradually, until finally the trench is filled. If the little plants are very close together they should be thinned. The earth must be kept well cultivated. Every gardener has his own way of supporting peas. Wire fencing is often used, and lattice work made of strings, and the old-fashioned way of using brush is a very satisfactory, though perhaps hardly so neat. Whatever is used ought to be in position before it is needed; then when the first little tendrils appear they will have something to which to cling.

"A PREPOSTEROUS PRICE"

"The Mill" is a most beautiful work, but as for $500,000, that is a preposterous price." Such is the opinion of Mr. B. W. Leader, the Royal Academician, who recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. The son of a professional man with a large family, Mr. Leader confesses that he had to maintain himself from the first by art. The consequence was that he "had to paint pictures which the public liked, and not the pictures I wanted them to like. Many's the time I have wished I could destroy a number of those early pot-boilers." It is fifty-seven years ago since Mr. Leader first exhibited at the Royal Academy, and since then he has only missed one year, and that was owing to illness.

MINISTERIAL SALARIES

At the Presbyterian Synod in Woodstock it was reported that less was being donated now for ministers' salaries than five years ago. This was considered unjust, and the dearth of ministers was attributed to the small salaries paid. One of the lay delegates urged the adoption of a system to fix a minimum of $1,200 a year, with a parsonage for the pastors.

Solidified Gasoline

Solidified gasoline for automobiles is a stiff white jelly in block form, which is converted into liquid by the addition of 1½ per cent. of alcohol and soapstone. Space economy is the advantage claimed.

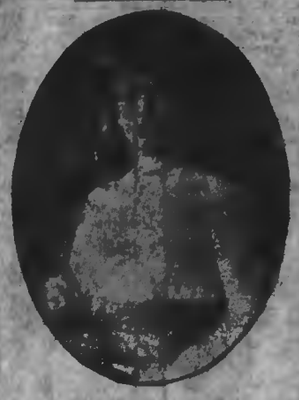
THE CORONATION CARPET

Scotland Has the Honor of Making the Floor Covering.

Scotland has the honor of making the carpets which will cover the floor of Westminster Abbey for the Coronation, and the looms of a great carpet factory at Glasgow have been busily engaged upon the important task. The floor covering has been a special feature in the preparations for the stately ceremony, and in the Liber Regalis prepared for Richard II., a copy of which is in the safe keeping of the Deans of Westminster, there is a definite order as to the "Ray cloth of Burrel" to be placed under the "King's feet as he goeth." At all the later coronations the carpet has been of a rich and beautiful character, with as lustrious a surface as possible, and from the quantities needed in the more recent times it is one of the first requirements to be set in hand. The new carpet will follow very closely upon lines of that ordered for King Edward's crowning. Then as now the color was a singularly soft, rich blue. The design was symbolical and embodied the badge and motto of the Order of the Garter and the Tudor rose, with the thistle, shamrock, and lotus connected with festoons of bay leaves and ribbons. These were effectively shown in a rather lighter shade of color and the whole formed an admirable background to the magnificence of the State robes, the ecclesiastical vestments, the crimson of the peeresses' dresses, and the military and diplomatic uniforms.



PRINCESS MARY
Born April 25, 1897.

CORONATION SUMMER

Many Brilliant Ceremonies Will be Held—A Great Series.

From May on to the end of July London will be the scene of a series of festivities unequalled in splendor, the Coronation being the culminating point. The ceremonies already arranged include:—

May 16.—Unveiling by the King of The Queen Victoria Memorial in the Mall, the Kaiser and Kaiserin attending.

May 22.—Opening of the Imperial Conference.

June 21.—The King receives Colonial Premiers.

June 22.—Coronation Day.

June 23.—Procession through South London.

June 24.—The King holds Naval Review at Spithead.

June 26.—Gala performance at the theatre.

If time permits, the King will also attend a military review at Aldershot and a gala performance at the Opera.

King George himself is taking a very active part in the preparations, and, being a comparatively young man blessed with excellent health and plenty of vigor, there is little doubt that His Majesty will be able to sustain the fatigues of the numerous ceremonies with ease.

The routes of two of the Coronation processions—that of Coronation Day, June 22, and that of the Royal Progress on June 23—have already been announced. These will be the last word in modern pageantry, but the third procession to St. Paul's and the Guildhall on June 29 will be confined to Their Majesties, the Court, and a Sovereign's escort. The route for this procession has not been definitely settled yet, but it is the intention of the arranging committee to choose other streets and approaches than those used for the two pageants. The route of the return will be totally different from that of the approach.

The Territorials will play an important part in the celebrations, both at the military review and in the lining of the streets of London during the octave.

The Australian Government has approved the arrangement to send eighty New South Wales senior cadets to England, under Major Wynne, to take part in the Coronation celebrations. The expenses of the cadets will be defrayed by private subscription.

Mr. Fisher, Premier of Australia, accepted the invitation of the Labor party to a banquet on May 25 at the Holborn Restaurant, to which every trade union in Britain has been asked to send a representative.

SKIN GRAFTING CASE

An extraordinary operation was performed at Victoria Hospital, London, by Dr. Edwin Seaborn, on William Hayden. The man had the misfortune to lose the lower part of his nose, and his index finger was fastened to the bone of the nose so that it will grow on. In a short time the finger bone will be amputated at the proper point, and with the use of some of the skin of the finger the nasal organ is expected to resume something like a normal appearance.

Soothing Healing Pain-relieving MECCA OINTMENT

is simply the result of a run-down, nervous condition—due to the excessive strain under which people to-day are living. To prevent despondency the nerves and body must be in a healthy, vigorous condition. You must cure indigestion, sleeplessness, insomnia and other nervous diseases. For more than 50 years one of the greatest tonic stimulants known to medical science, has been an unfailing remedy for nervous troubles of every sort, building up the body and restoring the tissues to their naturally healthy condition. For overworked men, delicate women and sickly children, it is a guarantee of health and happiness. Makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

All liquor dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. Medical booklet, containing rare common-sense rules for health, and testimonials, also doctors advice, sent free to anyone who writes.

CORONATION RENTS

Exorbitant Prices Being Asked—What Seats Brought in Old Days.

Extraordinary sums are being asked for the rents of West-end flats and houses for the forthcoming Coronation season, and as an indication of the high prices likely to be obtained for good views of the procession, the occupier of a house in St. James Street has let it to a wealthy American, who has contracted to pay £5,000 for the day.

Ten thousand to twenty-five thousand dollars are being asked for the season for houses round about Grosvenor Square. In Belgravia the prices range from $2,500 to $5,000, and $5,000 for the larger houses, while in the Hyde Park district, including Bayswater and Kensington, the rents are anything from $2,500 to $3,000, and similar rents are being asked for flats.

In the opinion of one well-known agent, these prices are altogether too excessive, and instead of good business being done there is the likelihood of a slump in house-letting, unless there is moderation in the rents asked. "Fancy rents," he said, "will keep prospective tenants to hotels, or keep them out of London altogether. And I might mention that the supply of houses to be let exceeds the demand."

Referring to Coronations of the past, it is interesting to note that whereas seats and rooms at the Coronation of Queen Victoria and King Edward brought anything from $160 to $2,500, in the very early days seats could be had for as low as a farthing. The earliest recorded price paid for Coronation seats was in the reign of Edward I., when a few extravagant sightseers are reported to have spent a "Q"—a coin equivalent to half a farthing or a quarter of a cent—for a good place from which to view the pageant.

At the Coronation of Edward II. a seat cost a halfpenny; Richard III., a penny; Henry V., twopence; and in Henry VI.'s reign the frequency of Coronations caused them to pall on the public taste, with the result that the price went down to a halfpenny. It rose again with Edward IV. to twopence, which was the standard price until Henry VII., when it was a whole groat. At Queen Elizabeth's Coronation the charge was a tester, or sixpence; at James I.'s a shilling; and was advanced to half a crown at the Coronation of Charles II. and James II. At that of King William and Mary it was a crown, and at George II.'s a guinea, increasing slightly with each successive reign until that of George IV.

SHIPBUILDING ON THE COAST

The inauguration of a big shipbuilding enterprise on the Pacific coast which will be able to take a share in the building of Canada's new naval vessels is indicated by the passing of an order in council granting a subsidy for a dry dock and ship repair plant of the first class to the Esquimalt Graving Dock and Shipbuilding Co. The subsidy provided for under the statute passed last session is three and a half per cent. per annum on the total cost for a period of thirty-five years. According to the estimate of the engineers of the Department of Public Works on the plans submitted, the total cost of the dry dock, wharf, repair machinery, building, etc., will be $6,637,800. The dock will be 500 feet long, 41 feet deep and 128 feet wide, and capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat. The promoters are Messrs. Bilfen, the well-known shipbuilders of the Pacific coast, who have associated with Denny Bros. of Dumbarton, Scotland, one of the largest shipbuilding firms in the United Kingdom.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

A Lindsay Physician Says They Should Aid Morality More

Dr. White, of Lindsay, strongly criticizes the public schools for failing to help public morals and public health. "The schools are not," he says, "the aid to public morals that they should be. Immorality is more prevalent in the schools, and, consequently, out of the schools, than it ought to be, and the time for education in this regard is not fully taken advantage of. The school, too, is not the aid to public health it ought to be. Teachers do not know enough about these matters, or, if they do know, they do not impart it to the young mind when it is most likely to receive and assimilate it."

INCIDENT AT A FUNERAL

Both Roman Catholics and Presbyterians Claimed the Corpse

A peculiar incident happened at Charlottetown when, at the funeral of Mrs. McKinnon, two hearses, one sent by the Presbyterian Church and the other by the Roman Catholics, appeared to claim the remains, while two graves had been dug, one in the Protestant and the other in the Catholic cemetery, for the same woman. It was contended on the one hand that the woman had left money with the Presbyterian minister for her burial, while her relatives, who are Catholics, stated she had received rites of their Church. The funeral ceremony was conducted by the priest and burial took place in the Catholic cemetery.

SWEET PEASE

They will Grow in Almost Any Kind of Soil

No other flower has a place in so many gardens as the sweet pea, and almost no other gives such a maximum of reward for a minimum expenditure of labor. They will grow in almost any kind of soil, and, provided they are liberally furnished with sun and water, they respond generously. They do best on well-drained clay land. Though the season this year is late, sweet peas should be already planted, for they can scarcely be planted too early. The reason for this is that they do best in a very cool soil, and if sown early their roots have time to grow and reach down into a cool strata of ground, which helps them to withstand the later heat of the summer. They thrive best out in the open, and another point to remember is that they do not grow so well if grown for several successive years in the same spot. The universally accepted method nowadays for sowing them is to sow in a trench. The trench should be a foot deep and wide enough for a double row, the seeds sown, and covered with earth to the depth of only an inch. When the plants are three or four inches high the rest of the soil should be added, gradually, until finally the trench is filled. If the little plants are very close together they should be thinned. The earth must be kept well cultivated. Every gardener has his own way of supporting peas. Wire fencing is often used, and lattice work made of strings, and the old-fashioned way of using brush is a very satisfactory, though perhaps hardly so neat. Whatever is used ought to be in position before it is needed; then when the first little tendrils appear they will have something to which to cling.

"A PREPOSTEROUS PRICE"

"The Mill" is a most beautiful work; but as for $500,000, that is a preposterous price." Such is the opinion of Mr. B. W. Leader, the Royal Academician, who recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. The son of a professional man with a large family, Mr. Leader confesses that he had to maintain himself from the first by art. The consequence was that he "had to paint pictures which the public liked, and not the pictures I wanted them to like. Many's the time I have wished I could destroy a number of those early pot-boilers." It is fifty-seven years ago since Mr. Leader first exhibited at the Royal Academy, and since then he has only missed one year, and that was owing to illness.

MINISTERIAL SALARIES

At the Presbyterian Synod in Woodstock it was reported that less was being donated now for ministers' salaries than five years ago. This was considered unjust, and the dearth of ministers was attributed to the small salaries paid. One of the lay delegates urged the adoption of a system to fix a minimum of $1,200 a year, with a parsonage for the pastors.

Solidified Gasoline

Solidified gasoline for automobiles is a stiff white jelly in block form, which is converted into liquid by the addition of 1½ per cent. of alcohol and soapstone. Space economy is the advantage claimed.

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone in The Bladder

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

JOLIETTE, P.Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Human Immortality Divine Immortality

Difference Between These in the Bible.

Lynchburg, Virginia, May 14.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, N.Y., preached twice here to-day to attentive audiences. We report one of the discourses, which was preached from the words of the Apostle, "Christ brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." The speaker said:

All around us we see what the Scriptures designate a reign of sin and death. The various forms of life in nature—the grass, the flowers, the lower animals and man—exist for a brief summer time of life, then wither and die. This does not strike us as strange, except in conjunction with humanity, and that because of man's greater intelligence—his appreciation of the value of life, his growth in knowledge and his ability to use life's opportunities with his increased wisdom.

The disposition to shun death is not peculiar to man; it is the law of nature. The smallest creature, by self-preservation is properly said to be the first law of nature. The lower animals, like man, have sensation, an appreciation of pain; but all these things are much more pronounced in humanity than in the lower animals; and the lower the form of life the more slight are these sensations. We are defending vivisection, but we quite agree with scientists that the pain, the suffering of the lower animals, is as nothing in comparison with that of humanity. We even note the fact that the more refined a human being, the more intense his suffering. Correspondingly, refinement and intelligence bring fear of death and desire for life everlasting.

All mankind seem, instinctively, to hope for a future life, even though with the majority the hope is accompanied with dread respecting its conditions. However, only the Bible reveals a rational basis for faith respecting a future life—a survival of the general death conditions everywhere prevalent. The heathen hope for a future life, but none of them furnish a logical basis for such expectations. Only in the Bible can this be found.

The heathen hope is represented by their great philosophers, Socrates and Plato. Their hope is, in brief, that, in view of man's great superiority over the beast, it must be he will have a future, even though to all appearances death means the same to the human as to the brute. The Bible explains that man was indeed created in his Maker's image and likeness and granted the privilege of eternal life on condition of obedience, but that he disobeyed and therefore became subject to death; and that death, the penalty, effects him exactly as it does the brute creation. But the Bible does not leave the subject here. It tells of God's pity and love, and of His provision to rescue mankind from sin and from death.

Since the Divine sentence is that only the perfect may live, Adam and his race, as imperfect sinners, could not have eternal life after a violation of the Divine Law; but to meet this emergency, Divine Love provided a Redeemer, who died, "the Just for the unjust"; "As by man came death, by a Man also comes the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive; every man in his own order" (I. Corinthians xv. 21-23).

Thus God has manifested His character in a way and to a degree which could never have been known to angels or to men had He not permitted sin to enter the world. His Justice has been manifested in the infliction of the death penalty upon our race for six thousand years. Divine Love has been manifested in the arrangement made by which the Only Begotten Son of God, on the heavenly plane, counted it joy to leave His glory and honor and be made flesh and die for our sins. Before the Divine Plan shall be fully consummated God's Wisdom and Power will also stand fully revealed through His dealings with sin and sinners.

Through the merit of Christ's death, Adam's transgression will be fully offset, and the penalty of Adam's sin will be fully paid to Justice; and Adam himself and all of his posterity, who have shared his penalty, will be set free from the sighing and crying, the pain and trouble, mental, moral and physical, incidental to the execution of the death sentence against sinners. Thus, through the death of Jesus, Divine provision has been made for a future eternal life for mankind—for so many as will appreciate the privilege and conform themselves to the Divine laws and avail themselves of the privileges which will be granted.

How natural it is for us to be impatient! The few years of our lives measuring our knowledge and experience, leave us little appreciation of the span of Eternity, from the Divine standpoint. We are inclined to say, If God designs to do anything for man's aid, why does he not do it immediately? We cry out, O Lord, haste! haste! Behold Adam's children, mentally, morally, physically, in a deplorable condition, unable to help themselves, dependent upon Thy mercy, Thy salvation! Like sheep we are laid in the grave; like the brute beast we seem to perish; we have only a promise of a salvation from death through the Redeemer, and a resurrection from the condition of death.

But God will not be hastened. He has a wise as well as gracious purpose. He has a definite time for every feature of His great work. He has allowed four thousand years to pass before He even sent His Son to begin the work of redeeming mankind, by the payment of a ransom-price. He has allowed nearly two thousand years since to elapse without recovering mankind from sin and death conditions. It is for faith to trust, and yet it is but natural that we should inquire, why not sooner? For what does God wait so long? A reply is three-fold:

(1) God leaves time for the birth of a sufficient number of Adam's children to people or fill the earth, purposing that the powers of procreation and the begetting of children shall not continue in the future as in the present. He declares to us that those who attain to that world to come "will neither marry nor be given in marriage," but in this respect will "be like unto the angels," who have no children, who do not propagate their kind.

(2) Incidentally, in connection with man's fall and recovery, God purposes a most wonderful manifestation of His Wisdom, Love and Power in the bringing into existence of a new race of beings, not only higher than human nature, but higher also than angelic natures. God purposes a New Creation whose members will be limited in number and all be made partakers of the divine nature—"far above angels, principalities and powers." This New Creation, the most wonderful exemplification of Divine power ever manifested or ever to be manifested, he has arranged shall be developed during this Gospel Age and in conjunction with the reign of sin and death. It is to be developed from amongst mankind, and is, in rank and time of development, to take precedence over the salvation of humanity from sin, sickness, sorrow and death, to perfection and Paradise restored, world-wide.

We have already mentioned the glorious exaltation purposed of God for the New Creation. St. Peter tells us that these will attain the divine nature; and this attainment will be through, or by means of, the power of God working in the heart as the result of faith in "the exceeding great and precious promises" (II. Peter i. 4). These will not be coerced into obedience—theirs will be voluntary submission to the Divine will. The test upon them will be loyalty and faithfulness to God to the very limit—to the extreme of self-denial, and voluntary humiliation in the service of righteousness, following in the footsteps of Jesus.

Indeed, Jesus is the first and the Head of this New Creation. None could attain it except by and through His aid. He is the Captain of their salvation. He is their Forerunner in this great "race" to which with Him, they have been invited of God—the reward of which, to the faithful "overcomers," will be "glory, honor and immortality."

The Apostle writes concerning the Church, the elect "little flock" of called, chosen and faithful ones. He tells us that by perseverance in well doing we are to attain glory, honor and immortality; and that this reward, to the faithful, will come in the First Resurrection, when mortality shall be clothed upon with immortality; when the new body, glorious and of the divine nature, will be granted to each of the faithful, as instead of the fleshly and imperfect bodies of the present trial time. In other words, our trial is not to demonstrate the perfection or imperfection of our flesh, for this is already known to God and to us, and to all. "In my flesh dwelleth no perfection." The trial is to demonstrate the loyalty of the will and of the heart. It is faithfulness in conquering the will of the flesh and bringing into subjection to the will of God all the powers of the natural body, so far as possible. It is the test of its loyalty to principle, to righteousness, to God.

St. Paul, as one of these loyal ones, declared before his death, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all those also who love His appearing." This includes all who are hungering and thirsting and striving for that righteousness which Messiah's Kingdom is to bring to the Church through the First Resurrection. Righteousness will eventually be brought to the world through the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom, which will put down all things contrary to the Divine will, and uplift every person and principle loyal to God.

The immortality for which the Apostle declares the Church is to seek is of a different kind entirely from that which the world may expect. It is a different kind even from that which the angels possess. It is the immortality which is a feature or quality of the divine nature. This immortality, the Scriptures assure us, was originally possessed by the Heavenly Father alone. We read, 'The Father alone hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach, Whom no man hath seen nor can see." The Only Begotten of the Father, the Logos, when made flesh, revealed the Father to mankind (John i. 18). The faithfulness of the Logos as the Man Christ Jesus was rewarded by the Father with glory, honor and immortality—the divine nature.

And this great privilege has been given to an elect "little flock," the Bride's class, to become associated with Jesus in the sufferings of this present time and in the glory to follow. The invitation to the Church is to follow the example of Jesus their Redeemer, to walk in His steps, to sacrifice earthly interests and with Him become partakers of the divine nature—glory, honor and immortality (II. Peter i. 4). Our Lord Jesus corroborates the same thought, saying, "As the Father hath inherent life (immortality in the highest sense of the word—deathlessness), so hath He given unto the Son that He should have inherent life," that He might give it unto whosoever He would—the faithful class, the overcomers, "more than conquerors."

As we have seen, the Almighty alone, possessed inherent immortality until He gave it as a reward to His glorious Son. "The Beginning of the creation of God." By and by, in the First Resurrection, when the elect "overcomers" shall enter upon this same plane of immortality, the opportunity to become of this nature will be closed, so far as the Scriptures declare.

The immortality enjoyed by the angels, otherwise spoken of in the Scriptures as everlasting life, is not inherent immortality, but an eternal maintenance in life by the Creator, subject to the conditions of obedience and righteousness.

In this same sense of the word Adam was immortal, but his immortality was dependent upon his obedience. When he disobeyed, Divine provision for his sustenance was withdrawn. He was expelled from Eden that the sentence of death might take effect, "dying thou shalt die." Similarly, Satan and others of the angels, because of disobedience, will be destroyed, forfeiting their immortality was conditional, as was that of humanity.

The redemption to be accomplished by the Redeemer during His reign as Messiah is to reinstate all the willing and obedient in human perfection and Divine favor, as these were enjoyed by Adam before his transgression. All the wilfully wicked, all not desirous of returning to fellowship with God through the Redeemer, will be destroyed in the Second Death. The test will be so thorough, so crucial, that God declares that there shall be no more crying, no more dying; which implies that there will be no more sin—that the lessons connected with human and angelic transgression will be so thoroughly learned that those found worthy of eternal life will have their characters eternally fixed in respect to righteousness and sin, as God's character is fixed and unchangeable.

The Scriptures, as we have already intimated, use the word immortality in a more restricted sense than is common in our general usage. They apply the word to the Father and to the Son, and to the Bride, the Lamb's Wife. The blessing of everlasting life provided for angels and for men found obedient to the Divine will is Scripturally called, not immortality, but everlasting life.

Thus the Scriptures explain the two-fold work of Christ: (1) The work for the world, in providing for all the willing and obedient of mankind, everlasting life; (2) the work for the Church, in making possible for the willing and obedient of the Bride-class, glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature. The Scriptural expression is that "Christ brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel" (II. Timothy i. 10). Everlasting life was intimated in the remote past, but not specifically stated. The declaration that "the Seed of the woman" should "bruise the Serpent's head" implied a recovery from sin and death, a victory over the Adversary, a release of mankind from the death penalty.

But it was not specific. The promise of God to Abraham, that in his Seed all the families of the earth should be blessed, contained an intimation of a Divine provision for the restoration of humanity from death and the present fallen condition, a restitution to eternal life conditions. But there was nothing specific in it. The Prophets also gave intimations of coming blessings through a great Messiah, but failed to say that eternal life would be the grand result.

Not until the Saviour appeared and made His consecration unto death, on behalf of the race, was it proper for even Him to give such assurances. But after His consecration, during the three and a half years of His ministry, He declared His mission to be the seeking and recovery of that which was lost, and the giving to His footstep followers of a share with Himself, not only in the sufferings of this present time, but in the glory to come. Now is the time in which, by holiness, faithfulness, loyalty to God and to the Truth, and the laying down of life for the brethren, we may make our "calling and election sure" to the highest imaginable reward—glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature.

O! for that glorious dawning we watch and wait and pray,
Till o'er the height the morning light shall drive the gloom away;
And when the heavenly glory shall flood the earth and sky,
We'll bless the Lord for all his works and praise him by and by.

One of Byron's Jokes.

Byron had given to Murray, his publisher, as a birthday present a Bible, magnificently bound, which he enriched by a very flattering inscription. This was laid by the grateful publisher in his drawing-room table and somewhat ostentatiously displayed to all comers.

One evening as a large company were gathered around the table one of the guests happened to open the Testament and saw some writing on the margin. Calling to Murray, he said, "Why Byron has written something here!" Narrower inspection proved that the profane wit had erased the word "robber" in the text and substituted that of "publisher," so that the passage read thus: "Now, Barabas was a publisher."

The legend goes on to state that the book disappeared that very night from the drawing-room table.

AIRSHIP FLIGHTS BY THREE WOMEN

Duchess of Beaufort and Others Made Flights Over Badminton Park, England, Recently

The Duchess of Beaufort, the Marquis of Worcester, Lady Blanche Somerset, and Lady Diana Somerset, made aeroplane flights over Badminton Park recently. The Duchess invited M. Tabuteau to fly from the British and Colonial Aeroplane Company's works at Filton, near Bristol, at Badminton House. He arrived at half-past nine—the appointed time—after doing the journey in twenty minutes. He was received by Lord Lonsdale, and, after breakfasting, made a number of visits to the park. The Duchess and some of her guests were so much impressed by the skilful handling of the aeroplane with apparent ease and safety of the flights, that they decided to go up as passengers with M. Tabuteau, and the aviator took up in turn the Duchess of Beaufort and her three children, the Marquis of Worcester (who is eleven), Lady Blanche Somerset (who is fourteen), and Lady Diana Somerset (who is thirteen). Afterwards Countess Nora Nelson, Mr. W. H. Chaplin, General and Mrs. Brocklehurst, Mr. H. Lygon, and Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Ward, were taken for short flights. About six o'clock M. Tabuteau and his assistant started back for Bristol, and alighted at the works in the presence of a large crowd of holiday makers.

GHOST IN RICHMOND

In Holy Trinity Church in the Form of a Verger

The lovely London suburb of Richmond, which has lately come into the public eye as the home of the exiled King Manuel, has another claim to distinction now, having added a real ghost to its other attractions. The ghost is walking in the Holy Trinity Church in the shape of the church verger, and among those who have laid eyes on it is the Rev. A. G. Church, a well-known clerical writer and reviewer. When asked about the apparition of the verger, he said: "A few Sundays ago I was surprised to see the verger of Holy Trinity in the chancel of the church, as I knew that he was dangerously ill and had been confined to his bed for many weeks. His figure, in the cassock which he always wore in church, stood dark against the white of the surpliced choir. No figure could be more familiar to me; I knew him well, not only as a regular worshipper in the church, but from having employed him in his private capacity of a jobbing gardener. I may explain that my seat is close to the chancel, so that I could not have mistaken some other figure for his. What I saw was some five or six yards from me. It struck me as a little strange that I had not seen him before—the experience occurred to me about ten minutes after the beginning of prayers—and that I did not see him again. But I thought that he might have been tired and seated himself in the vestry.

"Anyhow, I was so convinced that I had seen him that I said to a friend while walking home from the service, 'So the old verger is about again.' 'No,' replied my friend, 'he is lying very ill in the infirmary.' He died nine days after."

THE FINEST EMOTIONS

These are Illustrated in "Monna Vanna," Says the Leading Lady

Mr. Maurice Maeterlinck is going to London to witness the first performance in England on June 1st of his famous play "Monna Vanna," which has hitherto been forbidden here as immoral, but which is now to be played at the Court Theatre. Miss Adeline Bourne, who created a sensation by her splendid and realistic execution of the title rôle in Oscar Wilde's "Salome," has been signed to play the heroine in "Monna Vanna." Speaking of the play, she said: "I can never understand what the Censor was thinking about when he barred the public performance of 'Monna Vanna' some years ago. The play resembles more than anything else a version of the Lady Godiva story, and serves to illustrate some of the finest emotions it is possible to portray on the stage."

CANADIAN FOLKLORE

A Legend of the St. Lawrence Found Among Mr. Weyeth's Papers

A legend about the "High Rocks" near Brockville has been found in verse among the papers of the late Mr. H. C. Weyeth. The story tells how Claire, a young novitiate among a company of French priests, encamped near the St. Lawrence (then the Cataraqui), wandered away into the forest one moonlight night, and was lost, his friends, after prolonged search giving him up for dead. He, however, had sunk down exhausted and fallen asleep.

"Claire slept and woke and started,
For a maid stood by his side;
'Twas the White Fawn, Great Wolf's daughter,
And the Red Knife's promised bride."

The maiden lifted him up and led him to the recess in the rocks, nursed him tenderly, and by signs and nods, frowns and smiles made him understand that to leave his retreat meant death.

Meantime Red Knife wondered at the coldness of his promised bride, and an accident gave him the clue. White Fawn fell one day returning from the cave and sprained her ankle, and, lying in her wigwam for days, she worried about Claire. At last she made up her mind to confide in her bosom friend, the Swan, so that she might get word to him. It was an unlucky decision, for the Swan was secretly in love with Red Knife, and triumphantly told him the news.

In demon rage he hurried to the shore, slew and scalped her lover and awaited White Fawn. When at length she came and saw her dead she made one wild leap from the precipice into the waters below and was lost forever. Then "The spirit seized the Red Knife,

And narrowed the cavern walls,
And the murderer, caught between them,
For mercy faintly calls.

"And yearly the walls closed in,
And the Red Knife screams in pain,
Louder and sharper ever,
As the year comes round again.

"When God speaks in His thunder,
When the High Rocks drip with spray,
Draw near the cavern, stranger,
Then shalt hear the redskin pray.

"And the Sachems drowned the Swan,
For her falsehood 'neath the waves,
That murmuring of the lovers,
Chant a requiem o'er their graves.

"Some half-effaced rude pictures,
Which the moss-grown rocks still keep,
Are left to tell the story
Of the Indian Maiden's Leap."

BONAR LAW'S RETORTS

Canadian in British Parliament Has a Reputation for Repartee

The heckler does not get much change out of Mr. Bonar Law, the Canadian elected M.P. for Bootle, England. At a meeting in Dulwich on one occasion he was referring to the baby-like language of a proclamation addressed to the Chinese Coolies in South Africa, when someone shouted out that it was written by Lord Selborne. To which Mr. Law immediately replied, "I really do not believe it; but if it is written by Lord Selborne there is only one possible explanation. He knows that if is intended, not for the Chinese, but for the House of Commons, and he has written the proclamation down to the level of the present House."

Mr. Law was speaking in Glasgow during one General Election, and happened to refer to the attitude Mr. Balfour then took on the fiscal question. He pointed out that the "English people love compromise," and instanced the course taken by Henry VIII. at the time of the Reformation. At this juncture the following question was handed up to be considered: "Is the candidate aware that Mr. Balfour is a bachelor and that Henry VIII. was much the reverse?" "Yes," was the candidate's apt retort; "but possibly Mr. Balfour might not be a bachelor if he could be sure of getting rid of his wives as easily as did Henry VIII.!"

BAD FIRES IN COUNTRY

Emily Farm House is Burned Down —Old Roberts Homestead Falls a Prey to the Flames—Completely Destroyed

OTHER CONFLAGARATIONS

OMEMEE, MAY 15—On Friday afternoon at three o'clock the house of Mr. [illegible] T. Switzer of the 6th line of Emily was burned to the ground, and almost everything in the house was destroyed. The cause is thought to be a spark falling upon the roof of the house, and owing to the extreme dryness of everything, the fire gained rapid headway before help could be summoned. The property was insured for $1,200, which partially covers the loss. Fortunately for the family there is an old vacant house on the premises, into which they will move for the present.

ALMONTE, ONT., MAY 16.—A fire, which wiped out the big business block, with damage of one hundred thousand dollars, occurred here this morning about 2 o'clock. The local firemen seemed unable to cope with the flames and aid was asked from Carleton Place. It was finally got under control. Many residents left their homes dressed in scanty attire. The cause is not definitely known.

On Friday evening of last week, Mr. Wm. Henderson, of the Township of Galway had his barns and dwellings destroyed by fire. Mr. Henderson rented the farm recently occupied by Mr. John Gilman, who removed to Midland. The fire destroyed not only the dwelling, barns and stables, but the contents as well, including waggons, sleigh, buggy, agricultural implements and the pigs and calves that were housed in their pens. With the exception of the organ and two or three covers the furniture and household effects were all destroyed. The loss is a severe one as there was no insurance. The fire started in the township of Somerville, near the Burnt river and ran right through to the Bobcaygeon road. The fences surrounding Mr. Henderson's farm were also burned.

House Burned In East Ops

On Tuesday evening about five o'clock fire broke out in the farm house owned by Dr. Broad in East Ops, and occupied by Mr. Jacob Smith. The house, which was a log one, with frame kitchen, burned rapidly. The contents were also consumed. There was no insurance on the building and contents. The fire is supposed to have started by children playing with matches, as there had been no fire in the stove during the afternoon.

AN UNUSUAL CASE IS HEARD IN POLICE COURT

In Connection With Removal of Tubes From a Body at the Cemetery—Local Undertaker Appears in Court—Case Against Him is Dismissed by Magistrate Who Finds That No Offence Was Committed.

Mr. John Comstock, the local undertaker, was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of interfering with the dead body of Arthur Greenwood, a young man who died in the hospital on May 9th. Mr. Comstock was represented by his counsel, Mr. F. D. Kerr and entered a plea of not guilty.

After considering the evidence his Worship, Magistrate Dumble, stated that he found the accused not guilty. Referring to the matter, he said: "The law is that any person is liable to five years' imprisonment for interfering with a dead body, but there were different ways of interfering. Some people take the bodies out of the grave to sell them to the doctors, and others take them and keep them until the sorrowing friends pay so much to have them returned; while others, whose minds are generally affected, commit indecent offences upon a dead body and such like, but in the present instance no offence was intended. There were some valuable tubes left in the body, and the doctor wanted to get them, and as a consequence requested the undertaker to get them for him. The only way to do this was to get at the body at the cemetery, before the grave was filled in. This body had been operated upon, and these tubes inserted for to try and save his life and there certainly was no object in burying them, as they would be absolutely useless in the grave, but would be quite useful when saved. The undertaker got down into the grave and secured the tubes, without any unnecessary offence to the body, and on the strength of this he is arraigned here on a charge of unlawfully interfering and committing an indecency and indignity upon the dead body. I am quite certain that such was not in the mind of the undertaker, and I fail to see where there was any improper interference or any thing indecent. There was no intention to offend or wound the feelings of the deceased or the friends of the same, and the man who did it, thought he was quite within his rights. If the friends had kept their tongues quiet and said nothing about the trivial incident, all this trouble would have been averted. It was a simple act performed with a good intention, and, although we, as Christians, respect our dead, it was quite evident that in this incident there was no intention of showing any disrespect. I find nothing in the evidence to convict Mr. Comstock, and I would be doing very wrong if I did so."

Fred. Patterson, a friend of the deceased, was the principal witness in the case. His evidence in the case, was in part, as follows:

"I was at Arthur Greenwood's funeral, and saw the body in the casket. I saw it placed in the grave, and I visited the grave after the funeral, with the intention of taking a photograph of it. Mr. John Comstock was there, and I asked him how soon the grave would be filled in. He said in about half an hour. I decided to remain. Soon after this Mr. Comstock got down into the grave, and told me that he was going to remove some tubes from the body. He removed the lid from the coffin, and placed it beside the grave, and then took a tube out of the body. To do this, he unfastened the clothing, and pulled it back off the stomach, and removed the tube from a wound which had been made by the operating surgeon. When he removed the tube, he put back the clothing and fixed up the coffin as it had been before, and I remained until it was filled in. He told me that the doctor who had been in charge of the patient asked him to get the tubes. I did not see him illtreat the body, or show any disrespect, and the whole thing was done in less than fifteen minutes. I took a picture of the grave when it was covered."

Mrs. Price was the next witness called. Her evidence was as follows: "I was at the funeral, and after the people had gone I was looking around for my grandson's grave, and I therefore was detained a little behind the rest. I was attracted by seeing Mr. Comstock take off his coat, shove up his sleeves, and jump into the grave. I wondered what he was doing and Mrs. Rew and I stood and watched. After a while I went to the grave and saw Mr Comstock covering up the body. I saw nothing in his hands. He asked me to retire and I did so."

Mr. Frank Wise, Superintendent of the Little Lake cemetery, gave his evidence as follows.

"I did not see the act performed, but I knew it was going to be done. Mr. Comstock told me that he would have to get some instruments from the body, as the Doctor had requested him to do so. He did it with my consent. I would not allow anything wrong to be done in the cemetery, but this seemed so simple that I told him to go ahead as long as the friends were notified. He spoke to me about it before the funeral. I knew at the time, that the friends had not been notified, and I also knew that they should have been notified. But the act seemed so simple that I gave my consent. His Worship then gave his decision on the strength of this evidence, as stated.

THE CASE FOR THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

Mr. D. O'Connell Replies to the Letter From Mayor Morrow —Refers to the Bonner-Worth Company and the Gold Medal Furniture Proposition—An Interesting Communication.

Peterborough, May 16, 1911.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—If you will permit me I would like to answer some statements contained in the Mayor's letter, published in your paper on the 13th inst, and which seems to call for a reply.

In the first place, I regret that I am compelled to say that the Mayor has not treated me quite fairly in this matter. He insinuates, rather than asserts, in describing me as Mr. Duggan's advocate, that I am acting for that gentleman in a professional capacity, and thus conveys an entirely erroneous impression. I have not any professional relations with Mr. Duggan, either in this or any other matter, and my course throughout has been prompted by my convictions that that gentleman has not been treated with fair play.

Referring specifically to the statements contained in the Mayor's letter, allow me to make them up seratim.

The Mayor says, "Mr. Duggan has pointed to two industries as the fruit of his work, the Bonner-Worth and Gold Medal Camp Furniture Company. As to the first Mr. Bonner wrote me, and I handed his letter over to the Commissioner, who invited Mr. Bonner to visit Peterborough, and Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth met the members of the Council and the whole matter of the bargain between them and the city was made and concluded by the members of the Council." The fact is that Mr. Bonner wrote to the Mayor of Peterborough, presumably not knowing that there was such a person as the Industrial Commissioner. The letter was, as the Mayor states, handed to the Commissioner, who immediately communicated with Mr. Bonner by telephone, and succeeded in inducing him to come to Peterborough for a personal interview. When that gentleman arrived, Mr. Duggan took him in hand and finally attended with him before the meeting of the City Council, where the bargain was concluded and where only it can be concluded.

Mr. Duggan informs me that he requested the Mayor to apply for a report respecting Dams 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 and put an application in for Healey Falls. The Commissioner had been previously informed that an application by the city for this electric power would be likely to be favourably entertained. Mr. Duggan states that in his interview with the Mayor respecting these matters that his proposition was not favourably entertained and that the Mayor stated to him that it would antagonize the present power companies, that the present price was not too high and that the power would be given away in any event in the same manner that it had been previously given to the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited. Mr. Duggan says he left the Mayor's office under the impression that his request that the application be made would not be entertained. However, some days afterwards he learned that the Mayor had caused the application to be made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for a report on the several powers in the vicinity of Peterborough that might be suitable, mentioning Dams Nos. 2, 4 and 5 on the Peterborough-Lakefield section, the dams at Hastings and the dam at Lakefield, nothing was said in this letter respecting Healey Falls.

The Commissioner, as he says, recognizing the difficulty of having the Mayor make the application for Healey Falls, induced the members of the Council to have a resolution passed in Council authorizing the application to be made, and in this way apparently acted contrary to the wishes of the Mayor, who, in Mr. Duggan's opinion, seemed to be opposed to anything being done in regard to Healey's Falls.

Mr. Duggan further informs me that he induced Mr. R. B. Hall, representing the Otonabee Power Company Limited, and Mr. Shook, representing the Dickson Company of Peterborough, Limited, to interview Mr. Beck other firm, meaning the Gold Medal Camp Furniture Company, that its representative visited Peterborough and selected a site before Mr. Duggan came to Peterborough. This would seem to intimate that this matter was concluded before Mr. Duggan undertook the duties of his office. If this meaning is intended to be conveyed it is wholly wrong. On inspection of the Commissioner's file in this matter the last communication that I can find between the city and the company is a letter written on the 4th day of February, 1910, and then the matter was apparently allowed to lie dormant and nothing done until the Commissioner took it up, on the 25th day of May, 10 days after taking office. That the matter was not finally concluded before Mr. Duggan came here, appears from the correspondence between the Industrial Commissioner and the Company, by which it is shown that an ultimate conclusion had not been arrived at by the Company until the 20th day of January, 1911 as appears by a letter of that date, and which is on the Commissioner's file and open to inspection. The Mayor, while citing these two instances with which the Industrial Commissioner was connected, makes no mention whatever of the great volume of other work done by that gentleman. It is evidently a difficult matter to satisfy His Worship as to the efficiency of the Commissioner's work, and in my attempt to do so, I cannot do better than call as a witness on Mr. Duggan's behalf the Mayor himself. Let me cite from his inaugural address delivered to the Council on the 9th day of January, 1911, as reported in the public press: "I would like to emphasize a statement made in my address to the Council a year ago in which I stated that the continued growth of the city depended to a very large extent on the securing and locating of new manufacturing industries. The Council of 1910 made a grant of $2,000 to the Board of Trade for the purpose of engaging an Industrial Commissioner. An official, namely, Mr. H. V. Duggan, was engaged about the 1st of June last, who has been devoting his time to this work, and as Mayor I have been kept in close touch with Mr. Duggan and I know that he has been doing his work in a very systematic manner, and I am strongly of the opinion that good results will accrue to the city from the expenditure of the above sum." Not a word of condemnation is said here and the Commissioner was then in office practically eight months. Such was the statement of the Mayor and I presume his opinion, in the month of January last. In my previous communication I had the hardihood to say that sometimes public matters are discussed by the members of the City Council without full information. No better justification of that remark could be had than the apparent contradiction between the statement contained in the inaugural address of the Mayor and the statement contained in his letter to the public press of the 13th inst.

There is a direct conflict between the Mayor and Mr Duggan as to the circumstances under which the application was made to the Hydro-Electric rability of the scheme. After this interview, Mr. Duggan obtained from Mr. Hall, again representing the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, and Mr. Shook, again representing the Dickson Company of Peterborough, Limited, letters intimating the willingness of these companies to give options upon the respective powers, at the prices mentioned in these letters. From the circumstantial detail with which Mr. Duggan states his relations with the Mayor in respect to this matter, I am of the opinion that in this case, as in others, the Mayor's memory is again at fault.

However this may be, certain it is that Mr. Duggan had extensive communication with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission before the Mayor's application had been sent.

The Mayor censures Mr. Duggan for having the report of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission read before the citizens of Peterborough, but the chairman of the Commission exonerates Mr. Duggan in the matter. The Mayor cites an instance in which the city had a report made on the waterworks power, at the time it was contemplating the purchase of the same, and makes a comparison between the methods adopted then and in the case under discussion. Without any animadverting upon the morality of withholding information for the purpose of driving an inequitable bargain and procuring property at less than its value, let me say that the circumstances surrounding each case are entirely different. When the city contemplated purchasing the waterworks it had the report made by an engineer engaged by it, and for whose services it alone paid. In the case under discussion the report was made, not at the instance of the city, but made by the Hydro-Electric Commission and it was open to inspection of any official, as stated by Mr. Beck in his address at Peterborough, and the information therein contained was as equally accessible to the officers of the Company as to the officials of the city. In addition to this both Companies have had reports made by engineers and I am informed that the report of the Hydro Electric Power Commission's engineers of the Otonabee Power Company power was practically the confirmation of the report previously made by the engineers of that company. So there was no information in this matter obtained by the Hydro-Electric Commission of a secret character, and that could have been withheld from the Companies had not publication been made of the report.

The Mayor states in his letter that he was told by a deputation of the Board of Trade that "Mr. Duggan did not know that Mr. Beck was bringing the report, although Mr. Duggan had informed citizens that it would be at the meeting several days before it was held." The Mayor makes two mistakes here. In the first place, he was not informed by a deputation that I do not think it was known that Mr. Beck was bringing the report. What occurred at the meeting was, that the Mayor asked me, after I concluded speaking, if Mr. Duggan had sent out notices saying that the report would PREMISES AWRY.

Yesterday the Examiner printed a letter from a former pastor of St. Andrew's, commending an editorial article. To-day the Examiner contains a letter from a present pastor of St. Andrew's which is not quite commendatory of another article. In connection with the communication of Rev. Mr. Rollins, the Examiner has to say that the comments were made in good faith. The statement treated was taken from a journal that we have heretofore found reliable. The Examiner is willing to accept Mr. Rollins explanation and to express regret that it was misled, and make the amends honorable. The press does not claim to be more impeccable than the pulpit, and if misled itself may unwittingly mislead its readers, but, judging by the onslaughts of the orthodox on the pulpit utterances of the higher critics, the press does not do all the misleading.

NO STANDING.

There is no annexation sentiment in Canada, except in the newspapers that are seeking to kill the reciprocity agreement and that is not sentiment, but swagger—they do not believe in it themselves. We are about to take the census, and if we had this question among the schedules—"are you in favour of annexation?" it is improbable that in one out of ten thousand cases an enumerator would get an affirmative answer. Canadians don't want annexation, and if they don't want it no power on earth can make them take it. If the United States wanted Canada, which they do not, they would find it as difficult to fill their want now as they did in 1812, when all they got of Canada was a few nameless graves for the slaughtered of their repulsed "invading hosts". Those who talk flippantly of annexation of Canada to the United States do so for an object and in utter ignorance of the insuperable obstacles to even entertainment of the idea. Annexation sentiment has no standing in Canada and as it takes two to make a bargain it is not even a debatable question.

THE QUALITY IS GOOD.

During the past fourteen years three-fourths of Canada's immigration has come from Great Britain and the United States; and a considerable proportion from northern Europe, the home of the better classes of foreign element. This is satisfactory; for, while we need population to supply our prime want, it is better that it should be of a class that does not require too much making over; does not involve too much difficulty in the way of assimilation. The immigrants that come from Great Britain and the United States are accustomed to the amenities and obligations of citizenship under advanced representative institutions and naturally drop into a useful place in the body politic. There is still, however, a liberal sprinkling of foreign peoples among our new citizens, who come from countries where manners and morals and governmental conditions are on a much lower plane than in Anglo-Saxon countries. These need particular attention and the state, the church, and society in general, are concerned in bringing to these people the renovating influences of Christianity, and instruction in the duties of citizenship in their new country. Without such influences there is danger of these elements becoming a disintegrating and demoralizing presence, instead of an element in the building up of the country. We have good reason to be in a position to congratulate ourselves upon the superior class of our immigration, as compared with that of the United States of recent years. The chief influx into the Republic has been from the south of Europe, and the goal of the new arrivals has been the cities, while the great bulk of our immigration has sought the land.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The London Free Press aptly draws attention to the fact that in six recent murder trials the plea of insanity has been raised in defence, and has in every one of these cases, failed. This is a tribute to the fact that the element of sanity enters pretty largely into the mental quality of Canadian jurymen and Canadian administrators of justice.

A RIDDLE TO BE READ.

(Montreal Herald)

Reciprocity, we are told, will lead to Annexation because Canadians will become so enamoured of trade with Americans that they will welcome union rather than lose the trading privileges.

Reciprocity, we are also told, will do Canadians no good, because prices for natural products are not higher in the States than in Canada.

And there you are!

"THE CANADIAN NATIONAL LEAGUE."

(London Advertiser)

"The Canadian National League," composed of a few citizens of Toronto and Montreal, with power to add to their numbers, has sent broadcast a pamphlet on reciprocity. The chairman, Mr. Z. A. Lash, K.C., says in an accompanying letter:

"Happily, there is no need to impute disloyal intentions to our friends who are also friends of the agreement. However strenuous the fight against the policy underlying the agreement becomes, the Canadian National League will keep its discussions outside the lines of bitter partisanship, seeking only to spread the information which it believes to be necessary to an understanding of the principles involved, namely Canadian nationality, British connection, and fiscal independence, and of the economic results which would follow."

The fair promise of Mr. Lash's letter is not borne out by the pamphlet, much of which is devoted to parading the annexation bogey. There is no argument in citing the utterances of a few United States politicians and journals that profess to see in the agreement the entering wedge of political union. Neither is it relevant to discuss free trade in manufactures, a proposal flatly rejected by the Ottawa Government. In asserting that the Laurier Government eliminated reciprocity from Canada's trade policy in 1896 the authors of the pamphlet are falsifying the record. Why there should be danger to British connection to-day in a measure of reciprocity which the last Government begged Washington to grant in 1891 and 1892 is a question conveniently ignored.

The pamphlet adds nothing to the stock of information, and gives no new aspect to the controversy. Its assumption that Canadians are not the masters of their destiny, or may place it on the bargain counter, is insulting to this country and does no credit to the pamphleteers. "The Canadian National League" is sadly lacking in robust national spirit.

THE CASE FOR RESTRICTION.

(Toronto Star)

The Canadian National League has issued its first pamphlet in opposition to reciprocity. It bears marks of careful preparation, and is free from personal abuse and from charges of bad faith or disloyalty. But there are inherent weaknesses in the case which no controversial skill could repair.

It is contended that the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty of 1866 was a source of inconvenience to Canada, because Canada had learned to rely upon the market of the United States; that many Canadian farmers thought they were ruined, and that a decided leaning toward annexation arose; but that eventually abrogation proved to be a blessing in disguise, leading Canada to cultivate the British market, fostering self-reliance and furthering the movement for confederation. All this may be admitted without admitting the case against reciprocity. Nations, like individuals are sometimes hardened and strengthened by difficulties. But if they are wise, they do not invite difficulties, nor spurn advantages when they are offered. Canada, as this writer points out, has done a great deal in defiance of geography. That is no reason why, when the opportunity offers, she should refuse to accept the aid of geography. We have been compelled to disregard to some extent the map of North America, but that is no reason why we should declare a perpetual feud with the map.

It is contended that in 1878-9, when the National Policy was established, there was a complete reversal of Canadian policy; and the influences in

Tactics Of Conservative Opposition in Regard To Reciprocity Agreement

(Manitoba Free Press.)

If Eastern papers have the rights of the matter, there are wide divergencies of view among the Conservatives over the tactics adopted by the party leaders in fighting reciprocity. The official, dominant wing has taken up a position of irreconcilable hostility, and declares that it intends to force an election before the pact is ratified. It is safe prediction that, if it really wants an election, it will get one. If, when Parliament reassembles in July, the Opposition is in its present state of mind and resorts to deliberate obstruction, an early appeal to the electors will undoubtedly be taken by the Government. A minority in the party which, it is said, is not without representation in the House of Commons, holds that the Opposition, in taking this line, is really playing into the hands of the Government. They would prefer to see the reciprocity measure passed and the elections deferred until next year or the year after. If reciprocity fails to bring the results predicted for it by its upholders, the Opposition would then be able to take advantage of the resulting disappointment; whereas, if it is a success, they could side-step the question and try to force the fighting in other directions where the Government is more vulnerable.

A common-sense view of the situation would seem to support the contention of the minority. The prospect is always more satisfying than the achievement; and, assuming that there is a general desire for reciprocity among a decided majority of the people of Canada, as all the facts seem to indicate, an appeal before the consummation of the measure will bring a larger degree of support than will be possible after it is an accomplished fact. That will certainly be the effect in Western Canada. The government will be perceptibly stronger in fighting an election in the West before the Agreement is ratified. Not that reciprocity will prove, in operation, to be a disappointment; but because, once it is an accomplished fact, the Conservative farmers who are favourable to reciprocity and will support the Government on that issue, will hasten to ally themselves once more with their own party on other issues upon which they are at variance with the Government. The circumstances certainly suggest that Mr. Borden's chances of victory will be very seriously minimized if he succeeds in giving the Government a first class excuse for a dissolution before reciprocity is passed by the Dominion Parliament.

What then is the impelling motive which has induced the Conservative leaders to declare for an early election? This desire appears to be largely due to the lure of an unusually large and juicy campaign fund. The special interests of the East immensely wealthy and powerful, and inveterate in their hostility to reciprocity, have undoubtedly promised the managers of the Conservative party that, given an early election, they will wash the Government out of office by a flood-tide of gold. It is even declared by certain Liberal papers in the East that, in the event of an election preceding reciprocity, money to fight the proposition can be obtained from the Tariff Reformers of England and from protectionist interests in the United States. This is doubtless far-fetched, though both these wealthy and powerful interests would rejoice in the defeat of reciprocity by the Canadian electorate, though for very different reasons. The Tariff Reformers would be pleased because it would remove what they consider would be an obstacle to the fulfilment of their dearest wish—the institution of Imperial preferential trade; while the United States Protectionists would welcome this destruction of a reciprocity agreement which marks the first step of the United States away from the policy of high protection. It is very doubtful, however, if either interest would go beyond giving the Canadian Conservatives their blessing and best wishes. To take money from either of these sources would be a very dangerous thing for the Canadian Conservatives to do; it would be, likewise, entirely unnecessary, because there is no doubt that the Canadian influences which are determined that reciprocity shall not go into operation would supply all the money that the Conservatives could possibly spend in the most wasteful and lavish campaign imaginable.

What the managers of the Conservative party fail to see is that in a fight such as that upon which they are light-heartedly embarking, money will be, in comparison with previous campaigns, of relatively little value. It will be a fight between conflicting interests. On the one hand, the powerful and wealthy corporations; on the other, the tens of thousands of farmers, with a powerful reinforcement from the consumers in the cities. A political campaign in Canada is too often merely a fight between the "ins" and the "outs." Notwithstanding many surface indications of interest, the attitude of the general electorate is one of indifference. In such a contest money has an enormous influence; but in a campaign which directly affects the pockets and the interests of 95 per cent. of the people of Canada, the power of money will be very greatly minimized. The people are not to be bamboozled.

There were some American lambs sold at $8.50 to $8.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Dealers reported $6.65 for selects, fed and watered, and $6.75 for hogs, f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 15.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 13 were 2650 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 2075 hogs and 1910 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1700 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 425 calves.

Although the run of cattle was somewhat larger than a week ago, there was no further depression in the condition of the market, as the fact was more than offset by the improved quality of the stock and the increased demand for beef for local consumption, and in consequence a stronger feeling developed. Prices showed an advance of 10c per cwt., which, according to drovers and dealers let them out with a small profit on their day's trading. The market was more active than it has been of late, owing to the fact that butchers generally were pretty well cleaned out of stock and operated more freely.

Choice steers sold at $6.35; good, at $6.10 to $6.30; fairly good, at $5.85 to $6.05; fair, at $5.65 to $5.80, and common, at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs this morning on account of increased supplies. The advance in prices noted at the end of last week was all lost, but the reduction the demand was good from packers and an active trade was done, sales of selected lots being made at $6.70 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet, but the tone of the market was steady and prices show no important change. Old sheep sold at 5½ to 6c each; spring lambs, at 9½ to 9¾ each, and calves at from $2 to $6 each, as to size and quality.

Our Summer Ready-to-wear Opening will be held next Friday and Saturday

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IT was at an afternoon tea.

"Who is that distinguished looking woman over there?" I heard a stranger say.

"Why, that's Mrs. B." was the answer.

Now Mrs. B. is one of my closest neighbours, and I turned with interest to look at her through the eyes of a stranger who saw her as distinguished looking.

And although I had lived too closely to her to quite realize that before, I admitted it now. Yes, she was rather distinguished looking. In the group of women who chatted over their afternoon tea-cups one would have undoubtedly noticed her among the first.

But why?

I studied her for some moments before I answered my own question and then made this decision: Chiefly because in that gathering of marcel waves and puffs and rats and coronet braids, Mrs. B's soft hair was parted and done very simply. She has an excellently shaped head and this simplicity showed off its fine contour admirably.

If you looked at the group of five of which she was one, I'm sure you would have seen her first, just because she had distinguished herself in this way.

She made me think, somehow of one of those beautiful old houses set far back from the street in stately simplicity, that occasionally delight the eye that is wearied of the flaunting showiness of its much more expensive neighbours.

Now, the greatest desire of womankind is to be noticed — there's no blinking it, no glossing it. Acknowledged or unacknowledged, conscious or deeply unconscious, that is the purpose of all the silks and laces and musical training and high heeled pumps and gossamer stockings and knowledge of French and German, and puffs and jewels and artistic erudition with which we bedeck our minds and bodies—to win other men and women's notice.

Isn't she clever?

And isn't she worth imitating?

Quickly, of course, before the rank and file grows tired of artificiality and decides to affect simplicity again, and simplicity consequently ceases to be a distinction.

Indeed, fashion notes inform us that such a move is likely to be made soon, so if you like my suggestion and decide you would like to find some simple, gracious, becoming method of wearing your hair, and thus easily winning the title of distinguished looking, now is your time. You'd better not wait a day, but pull off those puffs and rats this very day and try it.

Ruth Cameron.

THE NEW TREASURY VAULT.

Uncle Sam Now Has the Largest and Finest Safe in the World.

The United States government is now in possession of the largest and finest safe in the world. It is located deep underground below the United States treasury building at Washington, and in this huge strong box it is the intention to keep in storage at all times not less than $500,000,000 in currency. Of course this new governmental depository of wealth is not a "safe" in the ordinary interpretation of the word, but rather a vault, nearly fifty-four feet in length, close to twenty feet wide and about sixteen feet in height.

The exterior walls of the new vault are of the heaviest steel construction, and the door and portholes provided for ventilation are closed by heavy steel doors fitted with the latest approved locks of the heaviest and most intricate construction, but the main safeguard for this subterranean wealth lies in an electric protective system which cost $9,000 and which surrounds the entire vault in a close drawn network of electric wires—more than seventeen miles of wire in the aggregate—which sounds alarms at any interference.

This system is tested every fifteen minutes day and night. The only means of reaching the new vault is by a secret elevator, guarded by treasury watchmen.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

HE DIDN'T CO-OPERATE.

Lloyd George Balked When He Heard the Conditions.

A celebrated explorer recently approached the chancellor of the exchequer with a view to obtaining treasury assistance and support for a forthcoming expedition.

Lloyd George met the inquirer by stating that the proper course to pursue was first to obtain help from outside bodies of citizens, such as the Stock Exchange, and then to apply, if necessary, to his majesty's ministers.

The explorer accepted the advice, but was quickly back in Mr. George's room at the treasury.

"Well, have you been successful?" asked the chancellor.

"Partially so," replied the explorer.

"How much money have you got from the Stock Exchange?" said the minister.

"Only £200," was the answer, "but with the prospect of a great deal more on certain conditions which require the co-operation of the chancellor of the exchequer."

"What were these conditions?" Mr. George inquired.

"There were two," said the traveler. "One was that the $200 would be raised to $125,000 if I took you with me to our destination on the top, to be increased to $250,000 if I left you there."—London Letter in New York American.

The Wood in a Ship's Hook.

With the laying of the keel of the Europa, the biggest ship in the world, now under construction, comes the news from abroad that the gross tonnage of all the ships flying the Hamburg-American line flag has passed the 1,000,000 ton mark, or, to be correct, 1,022,422 tons. For years the Hamburg-American line has held the tonnage record for ships sailing under one house flag. Some idea of the enormous size of the Europa may be gathered from the order which has been given for 2,000,000 feet of Oregon fir to be used for the decks alone. For months this lumber has been drying near Portland, Ore., before being shipped to Germany. Special care is taken to provide only clear, vertical grain wood.—Christian Herald.

At a Psychic Dinner.

"Have you been to a psychic dinner yet?" asked a pretty girl at a studio tea. "No? Then you have missed the latest development of an idea adopted by those who always keep up to the very last scream in metropolitan life. It seems that real food is served, just as at any ordinary dinner, and one has to pay for it in real money, but everything like a psychic, soulful atmosphere. At one held recently a woman, [illegible] married, told of having shot in her travels one of her past husbands—that is, a man to whom she is sure she was married in some previous existence. Isn't it a wonder what some people can dope out when they try?"—New York Press.

What Tree Planting Did.

Between 1862 and 1878 trees were planted on 19,000 acres of the mountain Ventoux in Provence, France. The mountain is stony and the land seemed of no value. The forests which have grown up since yielding wood a year, and it is figured that in five years the yearly yield of timber will be worth half as much more. The springs have reappeared in the country, the lands at the foot of the mountain have increased in value, and the villages have become prosperous.

He Took It.

Mrs. Stephists—Do you remember when we were children and I used to come and play with you?

Miss Tardiegg—Yes, and your mamma never let you stay more than an hour. Those were the happy days!

A Would Be Widow.

He (who has just proposed)—I hope you don't think that I am too old for you? She—Oh, no! I was only wondering if you were old enough.—Illustrated Bits.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS

No woman can decorate her head with false hair in the shape of rats, puffs, switches and transformations and make it appear natural. Hair growing on the scalp if adorns is the only kind that always looks right. There is a grace and beauty in natural hair which is not to be mistaken.

Newbro's Herpicide permits the luxuriant growth of beautiful hair. It kills the dandruff germ, preserves the hair and gives it the life and brightness of true hair health.

Every woman may have beautiful glorious hair growing on her own head. There is no secret about it—use Newbro's Herpicide.

BIRDS ON THE WING.

Wonderful Feats of Gliding Performed By the Vulture.

On the horizon in tropical countries there often appears a small black point visible only to the practiced eye. The point increases in size as it approaches. It is the sailing bird par excellence, the vulture, says The Strand Magazine, returning to its hollow in the rock a dozen miles away.

A glider who sails magnificently upon its outstretched wings, without a beat, without the slightest deviation from its perfectly straight track, it will traverse the space from one horizon to the other, again become an imperceptible point and disappear, leaving the spectator marveling at the simplicity with which nature solves a problem of mechanics which appeared impossible to man.

When one observes a sea eagle perched upon a lofty cliff it may be remarked that in order to quit its eyrie it waits until a gust of wind arises, then it lets itself fall forward with extended wings, gives a beat or two as it turns, brings itself to face the wind and thus mounts without a wing beat hundreds of yards high.

A gliding bird so sets its wings that the air currents make an angle with their plane. The wind thus sustains its weight and gives it at the same time a forward movement. If its force is stronger than is necessary to obtain these two effects it produces a third effect—the bird mounts into space without a wing beat. If the air suddenly became calm the bird would fall, but the fall would be extremely slow.

Prof. Drzewiecki has calculated that a gliding bird at a height of 1,500 yards at the moment when it commences to descend with motionless wings can by setting them at the most favorable angle touch the ground at a horizontal distance of about fifteen miles. If the wind fall large birds can always, with a few wing beats, attain an altitude where they will find a wind which will permit them to continue their journey "on the glide."

The gusts and eddies of the wind are, of course, great disturbers of flight, and few birds attempt to struggle with a tempest. Even the strongest fliers have not from this point of view so much boldness, as they generally get credit for. Thus the stormy petrel is so named, not because it braves the storm, but because as soon as a storm threatens it will often seek for refuge on a ship's rigging and thus forestall the tempest. And if the albatross loves the stormy waves it is only because it frequently alights upon the waves where it often sleeps soundly to the rocking of the billows.

Shakespeare Censored.

The dramatic censorship in England to-day, much as it is abused, is very mild compared to what has been known in former periods when many of Shakespeare's plays have been censored. Colley Cibber in his autobiography tells us of one master of the revels, who was responsible for the licensing of plays in his day, expunging the whole first act of Cibber's adaptation of "Richard III." on the ground that the distresses of Henry VI. would rekindle with people of King James, then living in France.

On another occasion "King Lear" was inhibited during the illness of George III. George Colman when reader of plays banned the use of such words as "cruel" and "heaven."—London Mail.

TEN THOUSAND DRUGGISTS

Unite In Their Opinion Regarding a Certain Medicine.

Druggists should know better than any one else the value of every medicine.

Therefore, when over ten thousand recommend Vinol, the cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, over their own signatures as the greatest tonic reconstructor and strength creator — and offer to return the purchase money in every case where it fails to give satisfaction it must indicate that Vinol is a power reliable specific.

We could publish columns of such testimony as the following:

C. A. Potterfield, the leading druggist of Charleston, W. Va., says he used Vinol for every member of his family and has never been disappointed with the results.

Mr. J. P. Bradley, druggist, of New Brunswick, N. J., says, "Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine. He has proved it from personal experience."

The many years that Vinol has been on the market has served to strengthen its popularity, and proved by continued tests that it will do all that is claimed for it.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not build up your strength and give you an added interest in life. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Hunter streets.

A Ptture Donated For The First Local Home Run

"Doc" McFadden, of McFadden's furniture store, and the genial catcher of last year's T.A.B. team, city champions, has again shown his interest in baseball by donating a very handsome picture to the first Peterborough player to make a home run in a game here. He has selected a splendid picture for the purpose, a baseball sketch entitled "Home" depicting a player sliding to the plat. The picture is a large one, a yard in length by eighteen inches, while the frame is embellished with baseballs, bats, gloves and other articles of the diamond. It is on exhibition in the west window of the McFadden store to-day, warmly admired by every lover of the ball looking by the way some of the Midland League players are hammering the ball in practice; it won't be long before some one drops in and makes a demand for the picture.

POETICAL CRITICISM OF A SOCCER GAME

"SOME NASTY 'KNOX.'"

Now All Saints and Knox were two football teams,
Who said when they met, they'd give each other beans,
But Knox found out they'd to pick a nice bone
Although the field was covered with stone.

The game started up, but sad to relate
All Saints had but ten men, because one was late;
But straight down the field the ball started to roll
And in less than five minutes All Saints got a goal.

This seemed to make the Knox team very mad,
And the way that they jumped at All Saints was too bad.
The ball was put out of play now and then,
And sometimes got lost in an old chicken pen.

Then at half time up went a big cheer,
And somebody shouted the late man is here,
So on went the game, and when it was done,
All Saints were the winners by two goals to one.

But I tell you, boys, to uphold England's game,
Play clean, healthy sport, let that be your aim.
And then at the finish all join in and sing
So and so has the Cup. "God save the King."

A. SPECKED TATER.

Notes of the Midland Leaguers.

There is a merry race for places in both the infield and outfield.

Watch Jimmy O'Hearne operate around second.

Rahmel will be a good addition to the pitching staff.

Murphy hits the ball on the nose.

The league certificates were delivered to the clubs to-day.

Will some of our sporting merchants now donate a prize for the first home run into the raceway.

Bill Shaw is laying down some perfect bunts in the practice games and gets down to first in aviator style.

The grand stand at Riverside will have to be extended to accommodate the crowds this summer.

Cobourg will probably open here on the 24th with a few of the old-time stars still in action.

Doubtful.

"The world is getting so good you may soon see the lion lie down with the lamb."

"Yes, but when the lion rises, where will the lamb be?"

"I dunno. You'll have to ask somebody in Wall street!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cynical.

"People who lose their money are always complaining to their friends about it."

TO Get Poisons From the Blood

You Have to Depend on the Filtering Process of the Liver and Kidneys.

These Organs Alone Can Purify the Blood, and They Do Their Work Well When Helped by

DR CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

No medical treatment can possibly purify the blood except as it acts in healthy working order the kidneys, liver and bowels.

To these organs is assigned the duty of filtering from the blood the poisonous waste matter which is left over when the nutritious elements are extracted from the food you eat. If they are not overcrowded or slow and sluggish in action they keep the blood pure and healthy.

For this reason Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills are the most satisfactory treatment you can possibly obtain to purify the blood.

Their effects are prompt, definite and certain. The liver action is quickened, the kidneys are invigorated, the regular movement of the bowels is assured. It is only a matter of a few hours until you begin to feel the benefit of this great medicine. Further use, as often as is necessary to keep these organs active, will cleanse and purify the blood and enable the digestive system to properly do its work.

Backache, headache and bodily pains will disappear, and the fatigue which is an accompaniment of poisons in the system will give way to new vigour and energy. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE CASE FOR THE INDUSTRIAL COMMIS'R

be given at that meeting, and I replied "Not as far as I know. In fact I do not think it was know that Mr. Beek was coming until the day he was here," and again Mr. Duggan informs me that he never made the statement to any citizens that the report would be read at the meeting, nor did he, in fact, know that it would be.

Permit me to again repeat that in my opinion the Industrial Commissioner is being harshly and unfairly dealt with. I am firmly of the opinion that the members of the Council, in dealing with this case, were not fully informed. Alderman Morgan, animated by a desire to have justice done in this matter suggested at the Council meeting at which the report was brought in, recommending the retaining of the Industrial Commissioner's services asked that the Commissioner be afforded an opportunity of meeting the City Council and of discussing the matter with its members. For some reason or another this request was not acceded to. Again, at a committee meeting of the Council at which it was decided not to engage Mr. Duggan, Alderman Duncan, no doubt wishing to be fair to this officer, asked that no action be taken until the chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission was heard from, and according to the public press, he was informed by the Mayor that nothin gmore would be obtained from that source than that already before the meeting and prompt decapitation was suggested. Unfortunately, Alderman Duncan's request was not complied with, as when the chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission came, he informed the public that Mr. Duggan was not to blame in the matter. If Mr. Duggan has incurred displeasure because he had the back-bone to stand by what he conceived to be the city's interests, it is all the more reason for retaining his services.

A resolution has been passed by the manufacturers, retail merchants and members of professions, requesting that a meeting of the City Council be called for the purpose of discussing the matter with that committee with a view of reconsidering the Council's decision. This request will no doubt be complied with. Mr. Duggan will be present at that meeting and I have no hesitation in leaving the merits of the case to the members of the City Council and of this committee. The facts of the dispute between the Mayor and Mr. Duggan can then be investigated and the attitude of both these gentlemen upon the questions now being discussed, can be fully ventilated and the City Council and citizens have an opportunity of deciding upon the merits of the case.

Yours truly,
D. O'CONNELL.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir.—It is always wise to be sure of one's facts; to get down to the "simple truth," and stay with it. The synod did not account "for the increased prevalence of shop-lifting by putting the blame on merchants." The synod did not account ofr it in any way. The synod did not even admit that there was an increase in shoplifting. The synod made no "specious excuse" for shoplifting. "Specious excuse"—the words flow easily from the pen, but they are words that should not be employed except for very grave reasons. The synod did not get "its cart before the horse." The editorial writer did not take sufficient pains to get at the "simple truth." The "simple truth" is that the synod declined to pass a resolution dealing with shoplifting, placing the blame on merchants. I may say for the benefit of those who did not hear the discussion that the alleged shoplifting, so far as the discussion went, was supposed to be confined to the very large departmental stores, and to the bargain counters, where customers were often lined up two and three rows deep during the bargain rush hours. The synod referred the resolution to a special committee, of which the writer happened to be a member. After very full discussion the committee unanimously recommended "that the matter of alleged increase in shoplifting be referred to next year's committee on Moral and Social Reform, for investigation and that the committee report to next year's Synod."—This was adopted.

When you say 'make the man right' the synod will agree with you to a man. I am afraid many of the members of the synod would sharply dissent from your view that it is "pernicious doctrine" to hold that merchants keep their bargain counter attractions under glass. Is it any more pernicious than the bolt on the front and back door of the Examiner building? Is it any more pernicious than the clasp on the window, or the safe in the office, the policeman on the streets, or, for that matter, the clerk behind the counter? There is an element of prevention in all these. This, however, is aside from the simple truth, which I set out to state, viz., the Synod did none of the things on which your editorial was based.

Yours truly,
JAMES ROLLINS.

GOOD WORK AMONGST THE FARMERS OF EAST PETERBORO'

Readers of the Examiner will be interested in learning of the work that is being done this spring amongst the farmers of East Peterborough in connection with the branch office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture located in Norwood, which branch is in charge of Mr. H. C. Duff, B.S.A. To-day Mr. Duff was in the city while passing through on a hurried trip to Central Smith. While calling on the editors of Farm and Dairy, one of the staff secured the following information for his paper and has kindly passed it on for the benefit of Examiner readers.

Some work has been done in the matter of reforesting blow-sand areas. An acre of Mr. Frank Greenbank's farm, one half mile east of Norwood on the Peterborough nurseries. The area planted is a hill of blow sand on which one would not think that any thing would grow at all.

Near Westwood an acre of land belonging to Reeve Comstock has also been planted to Scotch pine. This land at Westwood has given the council much concern in recent years and $500, has been spent in repairing the road and in erecting a high board fence to prevent further damage being done to the road by this drifting sand.

Those who have seen these new plantations and have heard about them think that the matter is purely an experiment and some have little faith in the ultimate success of the venture. As a matter of fact, these small plantations are not in any sense an experiment, but rather a demonstration of what has been accomplished elsewhere and that the same results may be accomplished in Peterborough county in preventing damage from blow or drifting sand.

Considerable work is being done in connection with neglected orchards in East Peterborough. The trees on three acres of a 10-acre orchard owned by Mr. Ben Cardwell have been pruned, scrapped and sprayed and placed in first-class shape. The orchard before Mr. Duff took a hold of it was in an awful condition and Mr. to improve the orchard and to make Cardwell was on the point of cutting it out believing that it was impossible it pay. Quite a number of farmers have gone to see this orchard since it has been renovated. All have been greatly surprised and pleased at what has been done and the owner is greatly delighted at the results.

Other orchard work is being carried on in connection with an orchard owned by Mr. J. Sargent. Material is being supplied for the spraying of several small orchards in the vicinity of Norwood and material and instruction are being furnished to a few others.

Mr. Duff reports an unusual, in fact, a tremendous interest among the farmers of East Peterborough in regard to alfalfa. Many of the farmers have sown alfalfa this year for the first time an are hopeful of securing a satisfactory stand off the crop.

MARKS BROS.

The people's favourites, Marks Bros.' Company, opened their week's engagement at the Grand last night and a big audience welcomed the popular company back to Peterborough. Their opening vehicle was "For His Sister's Sake," a clever melo-drama, full of stirring situations and funny episodes, the result being a most pleasing production, especially as it was well acted. Mr. Ernie Marks and Miss Kitty Marks were the stars of a well selected cast. The vaudeville specialties were up to the usual Marks standard. The company will appear at the Grand every evening this week with the exception of Thursday, when the opera ohuse will be taken for the Bryan lecture.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR

From Farm and Dairy.

The year 1910 for the farmers in the three provinces down by the sea was one of the most prosperous they have experienced for many a year. Excepting the failure of the fruit crop, which bore heavily on the growers of the Annapolis Valley, N.S., crops were unusually good. Professor Cumming, Secretary of Agriculture for Nova Scotia, in his annual report, states that the amount of cheese manufactured in the province increased 19 per cent. and the amount of butter 50 per cent. over the make of 1909. In Prince Edward Island the milk production of 1910 exceeded that of 1909 by 25 per cent. In New Brunswick also, dairying has advanced, although in this province the greatest progress has been made along the lines of fruit growing.

In all of these three provinces agriculture, which for several years back had steadily declined, due to the large emigration of the young men to the United States and later to the Western provinces, shows signs of revival. The young men are beginning to realize that the oldest provinces of the Dominion offer splendid opportunities along agricultural lines since they are nearer than any other part of Canada to the Old Country markets, and in most lines of agricultural produce, increases of the Maritime provinces are not producing enough to supply their own home market. In many sections down by the sea improved farms, with buildings, can be purchased at less cost per acre than is asked for the virgin prairie lands of the West.

The new interest being awakened in Maritime agriculture is due in no small measure to the influence of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College. In proportion to the population the regular attendance at this College is greater than the attendance at Guelph, and the short courses held in the winter months are equally larger than the short courses at Guelph. The enthusiasm engendered in the minds of those attending these courses is carried home to all parts of the province, and the results are evident in the awakened interest in agricultural life. During the last 20 years we have heard largely only of the West. For the next 20 years we shall hear much of the agricultural development of the East.

HAULING PRODUCE TO MARKET

From Farm and Dairy.

What does it cost to haul our farm produce to market? Some years ago an estimate was made in the United States that it cost the farmers of that country $900,000,000 annually to transport the products of their farms to the railway station. By determining the difference in cost of transportation in some sections that had excellent stone roads and others that had the ordinary earth roads, it was estimated that the substitution of good roads for poor roads in all sections would cut this transportation bill in half. And this $450,000,000 saved would construct a great many miles of improved roads each year.

This estimate was made for the United States; Canadian farmers are paying a bill to their poor roads that is just as large in proportion to the population.

The indirect advantages of good country roads are just as great as the direct saving in cost of transportation. The value of farm lands lying adjacent to the few first class country roads that we have are invariably higher than are the value of those farms situated away from the road, it may be only one concession back. Good roads make social intercourse easier and tend to relieve the monotony that creeps into country life at some seasons of the year.

Stone roads cannot be made on every concession. Roads can be improved, however, on every concession, and that at little expense by use of tile drains and the King drag and money invested in good roads is a paying proposition in both direct and indirect returns.

PROFITS OF CREAM

From Farm and Dairy.

The larger the amount of cream produced within a given radius of any creamery, the greater are the profits to both maker and patrons. Investigations carried on by the Iowa State Dairy Commissioner show that in that state in creameries making not more than 5,000 lbs. of butter a year the cost of production per pound is 2.17c.; in creameries making from 50,000 to 100,000 lbs. the cost per pound is 2.36c. The cost of production decreased just in proportion as the make increased until creameries manufacturing 200,000 lbs. stated their cost at 1.71c.

Most of our creameries are going over as much territory as they can with profit to get cream. It is not a case of more territory to be covered to decrease cost of production, but of getting more cream in the same territory.

One of the greatest drawbacks to dairying in creamery sections is that so little cream is produced per acre. It is safe to say that in every creamery in Ontario the cost of production could almost be cut in two did all the patrons shipping to that creamery look on dairying as a business proposition, keep more and better cows, and instead of occasionally adding to the creamery and at other times making at home, cater to the creamery all the time.

Make dairying a business and greater returns will be realized all round. Any effort the creamery man makes to get his patrons to test their cows, sow alfalfa, put up silos, etc., means dollars in his pocket and theirs.

WEIGHTS OF CHEESE

From Farm and Dairy.

There are still some factorymen who evidently fail to recognize the importance of properly stamping the weights of cheese uniformly on the boxes by the use of a hand or preferably a rubber stamp instead of a lead pencil. If the weights are put on with pencil they are often hardly distinguishable on arrival at point of delivery, especially if handled in wet weather. The cost of rubber stamps is very little, and their use often avoids serious misunderstanding between buyer and seller as to differences in box weights.

Not only this, but the style, appearance and quality of the cheese box has an influence on the sale of cheese. In fact it has been said that a fastidious buyer in the Old Country will sometimes refuse to even examine a lot of cheese when the boxes present a slovenly appearance, preferring to take some other lot which is a neat, trim appearance. The accompanying cut indicates how the weight may be stencilled on the cheese box. The factory brand may be put either left of, as just below, the standard weight.

Marriages Are Valid.

Toronto, May 16.—"Don't worry about any church declaring invalid any marriage in Canad which is valid according to the civil law," said Mr. Justice Riddell at Cosin's Presbyterian Church last night.

In addressing the Catch-My-Pal society, Judge Riddell explained some of the legal positions of the crown in the courts, and the new Canadian.

The King was just as much King of Canada as of Great Britain. The crown possessed a veto power, but it exercise died with Queen Anne, and was as dead as Queen Anne.

The courts were not the supreme institutions generally supposed. They were simply bodies employed to administer justice in accordance with custom handed down for hundreds of years, with the admixture of a little Roman law. The customs had, some of them been embodied in written statutes, but many of them had not. The safety of the community depended upon the intelligence and honesty of the jurymen.

SPLENDID SUPPER AND CONCERT AT PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Enjoyable Evening Spent at Park Street Baptist Church Speeches by Revs. Webb, and Gregory, of Lakefield, Hon. J. R. Stratton and Others—Vocal and Elecutionary Numbers.

A very sumptuous supper was served at the Park street Baptist church last night, also a very pleasing programme was given in connection with the anniversary services of the church held yesterday. This is the 16th anniversary of the church, and the anniversary which finds it in a very prosperous condition, in fact the most prosperous since the founding of the church, and undoubtedly the most prosperous and flourishing condition since the establishing of the new structure, which is indeed a credit to the congregation which is working so hard and accomplishing so much toward the general good of the church. The ladies of the congregation deserve special praise for the splendid supper which was given, also for the very great pains they took to see that all were served at the tables; in fact they did everything in their power to see that those present thoroughly enjoyed the supper.

The programme was of a very pleasing and interesting nature. Vocal selections were given by Mr. Steer, and Mr. Miller, and Mrs. Pettit, elocutionist, added a very pleasing item to the programme, which was very much appreciated and applauded.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford, pastor, presided in his usual bright and acceptable manner, and among his other opening remarks, he drew the attention of the assemblage to the fact that it was a celebration entertainment, and that they had great cause to celebrate, as the church had advanced so rapidly, now having a membership of 200, and in consideration of this, he thought that as well as a celebration entertainment, it should be a time of thanksgiving. After a few other remarks, he introduced Mr. Steer, who was a former choir leader in the church, and who just happened to step in the city on his way through. His contribution of a vocal solo, "Oh, Canada" was very much appreciated, this fact being shown in the usual manner.

Rev. Wm. Gregory, pastor Lakefield Baptist church, was the next to be called upon. He spoke a few encouraging words, to the congregation, which were well received, and expressed his pleasure at being present, and partaking in the festivities of a celebration so worthy. He also expressed his regret at the absence of Rev. Dr. A. T. Bowerby, of Toronto, who conducted the services at the church on Sunday, and who was to have been present, but was unexpectedly called away. He gave those present a great deal of advice, which if followed, would prove very beneficial.

Mr. Chiles was present and spoke as representative of Knox church in the absence of Rev. Mr. Keith, the pastor. He wished to make a few remarks, and among them he wished to refer to the allusion Mr. Riddiford had made regarding his being an engineer. He was desirous of having those present understand that he would feel much more at home in the cab of a locomotive than on the platform. Regarding the young people, he said that they had great opportunities and great spheres for usefulness. Every individual had a grand opportunity, but to be really useful, they must be healthy in body and soul. Comparing a locomotive to a human being, Mr. Chiles made the statement that a locomotive was absolutely useless, unless it was supplied with fuel and steam, and it was just the same with a person, if they were not developed in body and soul, in other words, they would be absolutely useless. He thought that it was the duty of young people also to gather as much knowledge as they could, and then distribute that knowledge so that it might be beneficial to others.

A vocal solo was then contributed, much to the delight of all, by Mr. Miller.

Then followed an address by Hon. J. R. Stratton. Mr. Stratton explained that it was rather a surprise to him to be present, and no doubt it was a great surprise to them. He had received an invitation to be present, but he had not intended to speak, but as the reverend lecturer from Toronto was absent, he would try and fill in a little of the time. He was glad to be present and congratulated the congregation upon the grand success of the church and also upon the increase in the congregation. He was also pleased to note the expansion and enlarging of the Murray street church and hoped that it would continue to do so. In speaking further of the Park street congregation, Mr. Stratton said that there had three things necessary for the development and building up of a church. 1st, the divine element, 2nd the working element as the head of the church and the minister, 3rd, the church board gave their time to the work and welfare of the church. Mr. Stratton also made a number of other complimentary and encouraging remarks appropriate for the occasion.

Mrs. Pettit thencontributed her very acceptable number, and this was followed by a speech from Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church.

Mr. Webb stated that he enjoyed very much to take tea with them, and he felt that they needed no speech from him after having one from a minister, an engineer and a statesman, but he would say only a few words to show his appreciation of the kind welcome he had received. Speaking of church work, he said that he thought that there was no calling so noble as that of extending the kingdom of God, and that one Christian should be interested in the welfare of another. He further wished to assure them, that every member of the Murray street Baptist church was most heartily interested in the progress and welfare of the Park street church, and he, on behalf of the congregation, wished them every success.

Rev. Mr. Riddiford then made a neat speech in which he expressed his pleasure at seeing how the people turned out in large numbers, and the great success the evening had been, and the programme finally came to an end by Rev. Mr. Gregory pronouncing the benediction.

Lee sang "Come Into the Garden, Maud," which was greatly appreciated, and Mr. Albert New rendered "I Am a Friar," and was loudly applauded. Mr. E. Langley also sang.

After several other musical items had been given Mr. Guy proceeded with the Agenda, and gave a brief outline of the object of the Society, which was to assist young Englishmen on their entry into the country.

It was resolved that a fee of $1 per year be established.

The following officers were elected:

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the cysts a when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

COMING TO CONVENTION

Rev. Mr. Rose Will be Worth Hearing at George St. Church To-morrow

In 1872 there came to Peterborough as assistant pastor of George street Methodist church a young man, son of an eminent Methodist minister of an earlier day. This young man remained here one year and now, after thirty-nine years he comes back to adress the people to whom he offered his first ministerial labours. Dr. S. F. Rose, is the son of the Rev. Dr. Rose and brother of the late Judge Rose of the High Court of Justice. He has occupied the most important Methodist pastorates in Canada, having been stationed at Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Toronto, where he now resides. Many who know him by reputation, will be glad to hear this distinguished minister at the great Sunday school gathering in the George street Methodist church on Wednesday night.

AT NORWOOD

Rev. Father Casey, of Campbellford, Delivered Interesting Sermon

NORWOOD, MAY 15.—"The Apostolate of the Laity" was the title of an interesting and novel sermon preached at the R. C. church here last night, by the Rev. Fr. Casey of Campbellford. The occasion was the presenting of crosses and diplomas to the promoters of the Apostleship of prayer, a Roman Catholic organisation to promote devotion to the Eucharist. The sermon was of a nature rarely heard from Roman Catholic pulpits, the preacher undertaking to show that preaching was not confined to the priesthood alone, but was participated in by all. Rev. Father Kelly closed the ceremony with benediction of the Host.

MISS HALLIHAN'S RECITAL WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

Once more the people of Peterborough are indebted to Miss Lavina L. Hallihan for the pleasure of a delightful musical evening. Her recital last night in the Conservatory of Music Hall was a success artistically, and it is pleasing to note, financially as well. There was a large and enthusiastic audience which indicated its appreciation of the different numbers in a manner that left no doubt as to its appreciation of the merits of the programme. Miss Hallihan was assisted by Miss Julia Choate, violinist, of the Conservatory staff, and by Mr. Frank Bemrose, tenor, and Mr. J. Dennis Hayes, baritone, both of Toronto, whose numbers were greatly appreciated.

It was the first opportunity local music-lovers have had of hearing Miss Hallihan since she commenced her studies in Toronto and delightful as has been her singing in the past, she last night succeeded in demonstrating unmistakably, that her course of study has had beneficial results. Her beautiful voice, pure, powerful and sweet, has lost none of its charm and her numbers last night held her audience entranced with the beauty and charm of their rendition. She sings with a confidence and a sureness of technique that is refreshing, and it seems safe to predict that great things are in store for this talented Peterborough young lady. Her work last evening delighted her admirers, who had been eagerly looking forward to an opportunity of hearing her again. Her numbers were varied enough in nature to give her a chance to show her versatility and to prove that she is at home in any department of vocalism.

Miss Hallihan was heard last night in a programme that gave full range to her capabilities. In all these Miss Hallihan sang with an effectiveness and artistic feeling that were most satisfying and that is more to say than individual analysis of the several numbers. While she made a splendid success in all her numbers, especial praise is due her presentation of Marshall's "I Hear You Calling Me" and Gounod's "Chantez. Rise et Dormez." One of the pleasing features of Miss Hallihen's appearance was the fact of the evidence of distinct progress in her musical studies and musical development. There was to be noted a very distinct improvement in—if the term may be so applied—voice manipulation. She is able to sing with great ease, and without using the full force and volume of voice. She only uses what is necessary, adapts the volume of voice to the sentiments and requirements of her selections—in a word, sings with expression, a phase that to a musical critic means nearly everything. She or her teacher used good judgment in making selections for her recitals. In displaying such marked improvement at this early stage of her musical studies, in the character and improvement of that priceless possession, her natural voice Miss Hallihan is affording proof that public opinion in taking a substantial interest in the promotion of her musical career was not misled, but that she is justifying, and will still more amply justify, whatever encouragement has been, or will hereafter be, given. She has a voice of such rarely good quality, that it had only to be heard under favourable conditions to demonstrate how well worth cultivating it is; and in this connection, the remarks made by Mr. Kerr at the intermission of the recital that thanks were due to Mr. R. J. Devey for bringing Miss Hallin and her splendid quality of voice before the public in a most effective way, through assigning her the chief role in the Geisha, were quite a propos.

The assisting artists added greatly to the success of the occasion. Miss Choate's brilliant violin playing needs no comment. When it is stated that she played last night at the top of her form, Peterborough people will understand the enjoyment of the audience in listening to her two numbers, which were sympathetically accompanied by Miss Dean.

Mr. Frank Bemrose's robust tenor voice of remarkable range and purity was advantageously displayed in his two double numbers. He sings with a feeling and expression that make his work altogether enjoyable, and last night's audience could not get enough of his singing.

Mr. J. Dennis Hayes showed a well trained powerful baritone and his numbers were welcome additions to the programme, being received with appreciated applause.

Mr. R. J. Devey opened the programme with a brilliant rendition of Beethoven's Sonata Pathetique, which he played in faultless fashion. Mr. Devey added to the success of the event by his splendid playing of the accompaniments. The programme was as follows:

WHY TY COBB IS MOST DANGEROUS BASE-RUNNER

NEW YORK, May 15.—Ty Cobb is the greatest base stealer in the game. There is no getting away from it, although many will claim that Eddie Collins, the fleet-footed Athletic, is his superior. Last season Collins slightly out-pilfered the speedy Tiger ,but Cobb ran him a close second. One year's work alone cannot earn Collins the crown. Wait until he has played as long as the "Georgia Peach" and then see if his base-stealing record totals up high as Hughey Jennings' bearcat.

The elements of Cobb's success as a run getter are several. In the first place, of course, he is a wonderful hitter. Only one man in the American League outhits him last season and that was Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Club, who performed in only twenty games near the end of the season.

Jackson hit .387, while Cobb's final average was .385. It's a cinch that if the Nap had played in as many games his mark would not have been so high

There were many others who hit nearly as hard as Cobb and yet didn't steal half as many bases. Cobb's wonderful ability to pilfer is due to his great speed and quick judgment, as well as his consummate nerve in advancing each step on his journey after making his start.

Cobb's fame came to him early on account of his introduction of new and original methods of base running, in sharp contra-distinction to the old style of advancing.

Most clubs still rely mainly on signals between the manager, the batter, and the base runner. The runner must wait for his signal and then works in combination with the batter. This is the modern scientific method, and it is the most effective when dealing with the average base runner, who needs help from the batter in making his way around the sacks.

But Cobb, while he is ready to play a team game when it looks like the best thing to do, does not depend to any great extent on assistance in going his way. He is a very fast man and a remarkably quick starter. More important still, he is a quick thinker and capable of outguessing the average opponent more than half the time.

The opposition has little chance to out guess him, for when once he gets on a ri always ready to advance and does not tip off what move he is going to make.

Cobb takes a big lead off any base he may be occupying, and is always a source of great worry and annoyance to the opposing team, especially the pitcher and catcher. The instant he gets on he has everybody up in the air. No one knows just when he is going to make a dash for the next cushion.

His tremendous speed is always in his favor, and his baldness in executing his moves is extraordinary. He can slide in any style, and he comes into a bag with a rush that is terrifying to the guardian of the sack ,accompanied as it is by flashing of polished spikes in the air.

Cobb has been called a "dirty player," but only by players who have failed to head off his wild dashes around the paths. There is nothing vicious or dirty in his playing. He simply sets out to gain his point and the opposition must make way for him or suffer the consequences. He runs the bases without thought of injury to himself or others, as does he draws five times the salary of the cautious athlete who is always getting out of somebody's way.

Cobb is the cause of more wild throws than any other player in the game today. He takes such a big lead that it always looks as though there was a chance to get him, but the throw must be hurried to nail the fleet-footed lad, and often the result is a wild throw.

"It was when I was with the Boston Club," says Cy, "and we were playing Detroit one day. Cobb came to bat and rounded one down in front of the plate. He was off like a shot for first base, but should have been a comparatively easy out at that. The pitcher, however, hurried, as a man always does when Cobb is marching around, and threw slightly wild.

"The first baseman reached out for the ball and partially stopped it, but could not quite hold it and it careened off his glove a few feet. Cobb just kept on going, making the turn at full speed and headed for second. Again there were oceans of time to nail him, but the first baseman in his haste tossed high. The shortstop, who covered second, had a jump for the ball. It bounded off his finger tips and rolled into left-centre field for three or four yards.

"Cobb kept on going, never slackening his speed and dashing for third base with all his might. The ball was quickly recovered, and once again there was a certainty of putting him out with a good play.

"But all the infielders were now up in the air and none was sure of his aim. The shortstop's throw to third was low, the ball bounced off the shins of the third baseman and rolled into foul ground. Cobb kept right on going. He rounded third, still at the limit of his speed, and rushed along for plate.

"For the fourth time he could have been headed off, for the throw was short and there was plenty of time to get him after the third baseman had recovered the ball. This time the throw was fairly good, but low, and Cobb, coming into the plate with one of his ling feet-first slides, succeeded in kicking the ball out of the catcher's mitt, slid over the plate, and scored his run.

"He had made the complete circuit and tallied on a slow roller to the box, on which he should have been thrown out at first. Opportunities had been offered to get him at several bases, including the plate, but the daredevil dashing had rattled the team in the field to such an extent that no one of the fielders made the play perfectly, and Cobb took advantage of the various wild throws and muffs to get a run on an infield grounder."

This instance is a good illustration of the style of Cobb on the bases and explains why he invariably leads his league in the art of scoring runs. He is simply in a class by himself as a negotiator of the distance from plate to plate. Combining a keen eye at the bat with wonderful speed and intelligence and nerve to take every chance the instant that it is offered, he shines above the average cautious and mechanical player like an arc light above a candle.

PEACE IS IN SIGHT
MEXICAN OUTLOOK BRIGHT
PRESIDENT DIAZ TO RESIGN

United States Commander Says President Will Relinquish His Position in Two Months.

MADERO'S DEMANDS

Washington, May 17.—President Diaz of Mexico probably will resign in two months according to a telegram received at the White House last night, from Col. Steever, in command of the United States troops at El Paso, The telegram reads:

"Prospects for peace brighter to-day and armistice will probably be agreed upon in twenty-four hours. Madero demands four places in Cabinet, one of them Secretary of War, and fourteen governorships. Mexican Government agrees to give him Gobernacion and Justice and possibly one other, while the Secretary of War is to be chosen jointly by the two parties. Madero will likely get ten governorships. Diaz to resign after new governors appointed, probably in two months. This is the latest fairly reliable information I can procure."

The minor conditions of peace include the pensioning of soldiers, the payment of indemnities out of the public treasury and arrangements for the reconstruction and repair of public utilities.

The question of the resignation of Diaz has been diplomatically avoided in the peace terms. The revolutionists obtained their demand that soon public announcement be forthcoming from the President as to his intention to resign when peace should be restored.

The feeling is that Gen. Diaz will give way to Senor de la Barr as Provisional President within two or three months, and that a general election will follow within a month or two later. The provisional governors will hold office until state elections shall have been arranged.

The President's advices indicate that the insurrecto army in Mexico now numbers 27,000 men, while the federal army is only 23,000.

STABS INSTEAD OF FRANCS.

Reward Informer Would Have Received, According to Camorrist Chief.

Viterbo, Italy, May 17.—Enrico Alfano, reputed head of the Neapolitan Camorra, was again confronted yesterday by Abbatemaggio, the informer, when the trial of the thirty-six Camorrists for murder resumed.

"To-day," he began, "is the anniversary of the death of my beloved brother Ciro, who died in prison. I must make a superhuman effort to overcome the emotion that possesses me. Still in my ears is the echo of the last desperate lamentations of my brother. In the agony of death he continued to deny the assertion of this man Abbatemaggio."

Attacking the informer, Alfano said: "It is absurd to say that 400 francs ($80) was given to Abbatemaggio, who took no part in the affair, and only 150 francs to the real murderers."

Alfano, infuriated, replied: "If I had been in a position to fear your revelations I would have given you 400 stabs instead of 400 francs."

H. B. Commissioner to Retire.

Winnipeg, May 17.—It is stated on what is claimed to be good authority that Commissioner C. C. Chapman of the Hudson Bay Co., will retire June 30, on a life pension of $25,000 in recognition of his great service, and that he will live in England.

TWENTY BUILDINGS BURN.

Peel, N.B., Visited By a Fire Which Will Cost $35,000.

Peel, N.B., May 17.—With the wind blowing a hurricane and everything dry as a tinder from the prolonged drought, a fire caught on the roof of the house yesterday owned by Herbert Clark, and occupied by himself and Howard Boyd, and after an hour's hard fighting some twenty buildings are in ashes, a score are homeless and there is a monetary loss of nearly $35,000. The fire is supposed to have caught from a burning flue, and the beautiful residence with contents and the buildings adjoining were swept away, entailing a loss of $5,000 with only $700 insurance.

W. W. Melville lost a barn and contents with small insurance. Harry Carr's building and contents were wiped out with a loss of $1,000 or $1,200 with small insurance.

The buildings owned by Mr. Ross were saved with difficulty, but a large barn owned by Mansar Clark was burned with its contents. His house was also damaged to the extent of about $3,500.

Aldrich Hatfield lost his house and everything he owned, entailing a loss of about $1,500.

The fire leaped from these buildings to the McIntosh house occupied by John Thomas. The buildings are a total loss. Some furniture was saved. The fire worked back and caught in Thomas McRae's fine new farm building and as a result his house, two sheds, three barns, machinery and furniture were burned. The loss is $6,000 with $600 insurance.

Clarke Craig had 500,000 lath stored at the C.P.R. tracks, which were wiped out with no insurance. Mr. Craig was called from this fire to one at Charleston, where his mill was threatened.

Many other buildings were endangered in the conflagration, but the river was close at hand and the telephone brought crowds from every quarter and the fire was soon stopped.

Ought To Be Careful.

Ottawa, May 17.—At the evening session of the Royal Society of Canada, Prof. Ramsay Wright delivered the presidential address on "The Progress of Biology."

He urged the careful selection of the class of immigrants to be admitted to Canada. Earl Grey and M. J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the U. S., were present.

Prof. Wright said it was believed the physical basis of heredity had been discovered in certain particles in the cells of organisms. The problems had been attacked in more than one way; by means of statistics by the principles of the school of eugenics, who sought to show the effects of the introduction of good and bad stock in the race. London, for instance, was slowly becoming decadent. "We ought to be careful in the selection of immigrants into Canada. If we can get a good quality of immigrants from the British Isles, I think that is where we should look for them."

LLOYD GEORGE ANNOUNCES
FINE SURPLUS FOR YEAR

Twenty-Eight Millions of Dollars Surplus, of Which Seven Millions Will Go to Fight Tuberculosis.

SALARIES FOR MEMBERS

London, May 17.—Chancellor Lloyd-George presented the budget in the House of Commons yesterday.

About the only novelty it contains is a proposal to pay members of the House of Commons a salary of $2,920 a year. The Chancellor declined to give members traveling allowances or pensions, and excluded from the salary benefit all Ministers already drawing salaries.

The Chancellor's realized surplus, including payments delayed in 1909-10 by the action of the Lords in throwing out the budget of that year, totalled $38,836,000, of which he proposes to donate $7,350,000 to the support of sanitariums for consumptives. His estimated expenditure for the current year is $966,170,000, which is $37,756,000 more than last year.

The Chancellor's estimated revenue for the current year is $988,560,000. There is no fresh taxation provided.

Of the increased expenditure of $36,750,000 over that of last year's budget the navy, civil service and old age pensions account for most of this enhancement. The payment of members of the House of Commons will absorb a further sum of $1,250,000, while the coronation will add another $1,500,000 to the demands of the Treasury.

Mr. Lloyd-George claimed that the British fiscal system had passed through an exceptional strain with added lustre. During his three years' tenure of office, the Chancellor declared, he had paid off $130,000,000 of the national debt, while it has been reduced $300,000,000 since the Liberals had assumed power. The Chancellor said he had reached the conclusion that the prospects of a continuance of good trade were excellent, as the trade barometer stood at "fair." Of the estimated revenue of $988,560,000 the big items are the customs and excise duties, which are depended on to bring in $560,000,000, death duties of $125,700,000, income tax and supertax of $201,500,000 and the postoffice revenue of $123,700,000.

The Chancellor, as was anticipated, announced the revision of the excise import duties, from which the protective effect is removed. This involves the small loss of $250,000.

The Opposition criticism on the budget centered in the provision for the payment of members of the House of Commons, to which Austen Chamberlain declared he was unalterably opposed, as it would deprive members of the British House of the unique distinction of serving without pay. He predicted that it would flood the House with money-grabbing politicians making an easy livelihood.

A. J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, obtained the promise of the Government that an opportunity would be afforded later to debate the question fully.

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Opposition Spends the Day Criticizing the Waterworks Treaty—Cannot Adjourn on Friday

AS WAS HOPED

Ottawa, May 17.—Plans for an adjournment on Friday were dissipated by the Opposition last night. When the Government bill confirming the waterways treaty was submitted to committee they resumed obstructive tactics, repeated their critical contributions of the morning and afternoon sittings, when the measure was under consideration for second reading, and thereby detained the House upon it until after midnight.

During the morning sitting, Hon. Mr. Fielding told Mr. Herron that the House hoped to adjourn at the end of the week. "May we hope to have the co-operation of the hon. gentlemen opposite in that endeavor?" he asked with mild irony.

Then C. A. Magrath, leading the attack, the Opposition fell tooth and nail on Dr. Pugsley's bill for the establishment of the International Commission.

Mr. Magrath says that under the agreement entered into between the representatives of the two countries a situation has arisen in Southern Alberta which, it is claimed, may do everlasting harm to the Canadian farmers in that territory, and may turn prosperous smiling farms into arid wastes. In other words their supply of water is threatened. He contends that the Canadian representatives who agreed upon the waterways treaty have jeopardized Canadian interests through absolute ignorance and neglect of ordinary precaution, and as apparently have the interests of Alberta been sacrificed that one of the experts employed by the United States Government has publicly stated that this is so.

The chief argument of Mr. Magrath was in connection with the Milk and Mary rivers, which flow from the United States into Alberta. The former of these, after traversing one hundred miles of Canadian territory, returns to the United States and empties into the Missouri system. By the arrangement come to, water can be diverted from the Mary River into the United States to the Milk River. Mr. Magrath pointed out that the whole water of the Mary River was necessary for irrigation in Alberta. Mr. Oliver claimed that Canada had no choice in the matter, and that the United States, if so minded, could divert the whole of the water of the two rivers, so that none would enter Canada at all. The Opposition constitutional lawyers argued that this could not be done.

Another statement made by Magrath was that the advice of the only expert appointed by the Canadian Government had been set aside, and that there was "not an expert within one thousand miles of the negotiators on the part of Canada," whereas the United States negotiators, as usual, had a number of experts at their elbow. Canada, by slipshod methods, had undertaken to manufacture exports.

He declared that no parallel was to be found in the history of any business in the wide world.

Hon. Mr. Oliver complimented the previous speaker on his knowledge of the situation. He agreed with him in many respects, in most respects. Mr. Oliver explained that Canada was to get half the flow of the St. Mary's River in high water and three quarters of the flow in low water. Two international rivers flowed from the United States into Canada; one of those remained in Canada, while the other, the smaller, turned back again into the United States. But the alternative of Canada was not as between getting half or three-quarters of the flow of the river, but between getting what we did get and nothing at all. The United States proposed to divert the St. Mary's River into the Milk River and so take the flow to Montana irrigation works.

Mr. Borden asked what right the United States had to do this. He could not find that they had any authority for the proposed diversion.

Mr. Oliver said he agreed with Mr. Borden as to the question of the abstract right. The United States, however, had the power, as the river where the diversion was proposed was entirely in United States territory.

Major Cassin asked if Canada could not divert back the water to the St. Mary's River, from the Milk River, after the United States had diverted it, as the Milk River ran through Canada, after the point where the work was to have been done.

Mr. Oliver said this was undoubtedly the case. But although this could be done, the fact was that Canada by this retiversion could not use the water for the lands it was proposed to irrigate directly from the St. Mary's River, and without the double diversion.

Aqueduct Plant Burned.

Montreal, May 17.—Damage difficult to calculate was sustained by the city yesterday morning at 10.30 o'clock, when fire completely cleaned out the stores department of the waterworks, at the corner of St. Charles, Borromee and Lagauchetiere streets.

S. Lafond, clerk and storekeeper, had a narrow escape when the flames burst from the paint room and singed his coat as he sat at his desk, and seven draughtsmen on the upper floor, besides losing valuable instruments, were not able to save the plans and notebooks they were working on. As a result the engineers will have to go over their work and calculations for the new aqueduct again, delaying the work for months. While blue prints of the older works are stored in another place, the plans of the men were engaged upon had not been completed, and no record of them now exists.

The building was valued at $800, and the damage to the contents, valves, watermain fittings, etc., is estimated at $20,000.

"THE BLACK CROSS"

By CLIVE R. BIGGS

There was a sudden silence in the Rathskeller. It was almost deserted, and the waitresses were all in the garden, running forward and backward under the trees. From outside came the sound of voices and glasses clinking; and close by, from the ledge, the slow trickle of the beer through the throats of the gargoyles.

"Look at them!" said Velasco, dreamily: "It is the Pilsener that runs through the dragons' mouths, and the Munchener through the devils'; a bizarre fancy that!"

He stopped and struck a match against the table edge, lighting his cigarette. "These are Russian, Kapellmeister, extra brand! Try one! I prefer them to Turkish, myself." He leaned his head against the carvings of the partition, and drew the smoke in through his nostrils slowly, his eyes half closed.

"It is a quarter to eight now," said Ritter, "but there is plenty of time. I shouldn't have asked that question perhaps, Velasco. Forgive me. My own affairs have turned my thoughts too much on that subject."

"Was it several years ago?" said Velasco, "I don't remember." He passed his hand over his forehead several times as if chafing his memory.

Ritter pushed away his plate, and leaned forward with his head on his hands, staring down at the table, and tracing out the pattern of the wood with his fingers.

"Fourteen years to-night, Velasco. I have never spoken of it to any one; but somehow to-night it would be a relief to talk. Brondi was staying at my house; he was the Tristan. One night he gave out he was ill, and some one else took the part. When I returned from the opera, he was gone and she was gone, and the house was dark and deserted."

Ritter was silent for a moment.

"Fourteen years to-night, Velasco, and I feel as if it were yesterday."

The Violinist shaded his eyes from the light as if it hurt him: "When you came back," he said, "when you found out—what was it you felt, love or hate?"

The Kapellmeister made a swift, repelling gesture as if some reptile had touched him: "Love!" he cried. "hate! Velasco—man, there is many a sin at my door; I am far from a saint heaven knows; but to deceive one who has trusted—to desert one who has loved and been loyal! God! There is no worse crime than that, or more despicable! Can one love, or hate, where there is only contempt?"

He clenched his fist, and his eyes were like two sword points, boring into the face opposite.

"Contempt—" he said "it has eaten into my heart like a poisonous drug and killed all else. There is nothing left."

The Kapellmeister took a long breath; then he continued hoarsely: "But I am a man, with a woman it is different. Her heart is young, and she knows nothing of the world. It is like a stab in the dark from a hand she loves, and her heart is torn. If she is brave, facing the world with a smile on her lips, she bleeds inwardly. She is like a swan, swooping in circles lower and lower, with a song in her throat, until the great wings droop, and the eyes grow dim, and she falls finally, and the song is stilled. But the last beat of her heart and the last echo of her voice is for him—for him who fired the shot in her breast!"

He half rose in his seat with his hands trembling, and then sank back again.

"Have you ever loved a woman, and left her, Velasco? Tell me—have you a dread like that on your conscience?"

"I—?" The musician laughed aloud and took his hand from his face: "You are talking in riddles, Kapellmeister! The beer has gone to your head, and you are drunk! Look—at the clock over yonder!—What is love? A will-o'-the-wisp! You chase it and it eludes you; you clasp it and it melts into air! There is nothing in life, I tell you, but music and work."

He poured out another glass of the wine: "Here's to your health, Kapellmeister! Prosit—eirmndfy x meister! Prosit—my friend! Put those grim thoughts from your mind, and women from your heart. We must be off."

He was quaffing the liquor at a gulp.

"Prosit, Kapellmeister!"

Ritter made no answer. He sat staring moodily down at the table. "You are young, Velasco, to be bitter. Is it music, or work, that has carven those lines in your face?"

There was a sting in his voice.

The Violinist threw back his head like a horse at the touch of the spur. His eyes blazed defiantly at the Kapellmeister for a moment, and then the light went out of them as flame from a coal. The glass fell from his hand and lay shattered in fragments on the floor. He stood looking down at them wearily.

"That is my life," he said, "it is broken like the glass; and the wine is my love. There is nothing left of it but a stain. It has gone from me, and is dead. Come:

He lifted his violin and the two men took their hats and went out, side by side, silently, without speaking.

The room was empty. Slowly from the throats of the gargoyles trickled the beer; and the Faun was like a great shadow hung from the ceiling by its chains. From outside came the clamour of voices and laughter, and the waitresses sped to and fro. The lights twinkled gayly under the spreading of the leaves, and the glasses clinked.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Friedrichs-Halle was old and shabby and had originally been a market. The entrance was under an arcade, and there was an underground passage, connecting the Opera House; a passage narrow and ill-smelling, without windows or light; but dear to the hearts of musicians by reason of its associations.

Mendelssohn had walked there, and Schumann, and Brahms; and the air, as it could not be changed, was the same. The very microbes were musical, and the walls were smudged with snatches of motives, jotted down for remembrance.

"Is there a seat left in the top gallery—just one?"

"Standing room only, Madame."

The ticket-seller, who sat in a box-like room under the arcade, handed out a slip of green paste-board, and then shut the window with a slam. The gesture of his hand expressed the fact that his business was now over. Standing room also had ceased, and the long line of people waiting turned sadly with muttered exclamations.

The foyer was like an ant-hill in commotion; people running forwards and backwards, trying mainly to brave an entrance, until the noise was like hornets buzzing; while from behind came the sound of the orchestra tuning, faint raspings of the cellos, and the whirls of the wood-winds, and above them the cry of a trumpet muffled.

Kaya took the green paste-board hastily in her hand, clasping it, as if afraid it might in some way be snatched from her, and sped up the narrow stone stairway to the right, running fast until her breath failed her. Still another turn, and another flight, and she stood in the Concert Hall, high up under the roof, where the students go, and the air is warm and heavy, and the stage looks far away. The gallery was crowded.

On the stage the orchestra were assembling, still tuning occasionally, here and there where an instrument was refractory. The scores lay open and ready on the desks. A hum of excitement was over the House, and one name was on every lip: Velasco!"—the Polish violinist, the virtuoso, the artist, whose fame had spread over all Europe.

In Berlin he had had a furore; in Dresden the orchestra had carried him on their shoulders, shouting and hurrahing; in Leipsig, even Leipsig where the critics are cold, and they have been fed music from their cradles, the glory of him had taken them all by storm.

"Velasco!"

The orchestra stood quietly now, expectant, each behind his desk. A hush crept over the House. The people leaned forward watching. It was past the hour.

Kaya stood wrapped in her cloak, leaning against the wall. Her head was bare, and her hair was like a boy's, curling in rings and shining in the light. Her eyes were fixed on the little door at the end of the stage. Every time it opened slightly she started, and her heart gave a throb. The air grew heavier.

When it finally opened it was Ritter who came out. He strode hastily across the stage, nodding shortly as if aware that the ripple of applause was not for him; then he took his place on the Conductor's stand, with his back to the House, and waited, the baton between his fingers. The door opened again.

Kaya covered her eyes for a moment, and a little thrill went through her veins. She swayed and leaned heavily against the wall.

God! It was seven months and a day since that night in the inn. She was in his arms again, and he was bending over her, whispering hoarsely, his voice full of repressed anger and emotion:

"Lie still, Kaya, lie still in my arms! The gods only know why you paid it, but it isn't the truth! You love me—say you love me; say it, Kaya! Let me hear you, my beloved!"

He was pressing his lips to hers.

"Take away your lips—Velasco!"

Then she recovered herself with a start, and took her hand from her eyes.

The door was ajar. Velasco was coming through it carelessly, gracefully, with his violin under his arm: and as he came, he bowed with a half smile on his lips, tossing his hair from his brow.

The audience was nothing to him, they were mere puppets, and as they shouted and clapped, welcoming him with their lips and their hands, he bowed again, slightly, indifferently, and laid the Stradivarus to his shoulder, caressing the bow with his fingers.

Ritter struck the desk sharply with his baton and the orchestra began to play, drowning the applause; and it ceased gradually, dying away into silence.

Then Velasco raised his bow.

There was a hush, a stillness in the air, and he drew it over the strings—one tone, deep and pure with a rainbow of colours, shading from fortissimo, filling the House, to the faintest piano—pianissimo, delicate, elusive; breathing it out, and pressing on the string with his finger until it penetrated the air like an echo, and the bow was still drawing slowly quiveringly.

He swayed as he played, laying his cheek to the violin; the waves of dark hair falling over his brows. His fingers danced over the strings, and his bow began to leap and sparkle. The audience listened spellbound, without a whisper or movement. The orchestra accompanied, but the sound of the violins in unison was as nothing to the single cry of the Stradivarius.

It sang and soared, it was deep and soft; it was like the sighing of the wind through the forest, and the tones were like a voice. From his instrument, his bow, his fingers, himself, went out a strange, mesmeric influence that seemed to stretch over the House, the audience, bending it, forcing it to his will: compelling it to his mood.

As he played on and on, the influence grew stronger, more pervading, until his personality was as a giant and the audience pigmies at his feet, sobbing as his Stradivarius sobbed; laughing when it laughed; crying out with joy, or with pain, with frenzy or delight, as his bow rent the strings. He scarcely heeded them; his eyes were closed and he rocked the violin in his arms, swaying as in a trance.

Kaya crouched against the wall; and as she listened, she gazed until it seemed as if her eyes were blinded and she could no longer make out the slim lines of his figure, the dark head, and the bow leaping.

The tones struck against her brain with a thrill of concussion like hail against a roof. It was as if he were calling to her, pleading with her, embracing her.

She stretched out her arms to him and the tears ran down her face. "Velasco!" she murmured, "Velasco—come back! Put your arms around me! Don't look at me like that! I love you—come back!"

Then no sound left her throat, and the cloak pinioned her arms. She was crouching against the wall, and gazing and trembling: "Velasco—!"

DISFIGURED FOR LIFE!

Mothers Should Realize What Neglect of Skin-Troubles May Mean to Children.

A lifetime of disfigurement and suffering often results from the neglect, in infancy or childhood, of minor affections of the skin and scalp. A mother overlooks a little rash or attempts some simple treatment and in a day, perhaps, the little one is covered with severe eczema or a similar distressing eruption. Then the struggle for a cure begins.

A multitude of remedies are tried, doctor after doctor consulted and hospitals visited, but too often the suffering extends, without substantial relief, from days to weeks, weeks to months and months to years. Added to this is the ever-present fear that the itching, burning and disfigurement will become chronic, marring future welfare and making life miserable.

In the prevention of the simple skin troubles from which all this suffering so often arises and in establishing a condition of skin health that makes eruptions impossible, mothers are assured that nothing is purer, sweeter or more effective than Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. And greater still, if possible, is the success of these simple household remedies in the treatment of the severer skin affections themselves. With the first warm bath with Cuticura Soap and gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment, the itching and burning of eczema cease, the child falls into a refreshing sleep, the tortured mother's heart rejoices and, in many weeks pass fails on a disfigured humanity. Frequently a single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are sufficient.

Positive as is this statement, it is justified by more than thirty years of phenomenal success. To quote but a single instance, Robert Mann, of Proctor, Minnesota, says:

"Our boy was born in Toronto on Oct. 13, 1900, and when three months old a slight rash appeared on his cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When it broke, matter would run out, starting new blisters until his entire face, head and shoulders were a mass of scabs and you could not spy a particle of clear skin. We tried about every advertised remedy without avail, in fact some of them only added to his suffering still one in particular, the ——— Remedy, almost put the infant into convulsions. The family doctor prescribed for him and told us to bathe the baby in buttermilk. This did not do any good, so we took him to a hospital. He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and he got worse, if anything. We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course and so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing his flesh. We left Toronto and shortly after our arrival in Duluth, the Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1905, and soon the cure was complete. You would not think he was the same child for Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease. There has been no return. We still use only Cuticura Soap for baby's bath."

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM

Roumanians Hold a Fair Once a Year For Marriage Purposes

"In the spring a young man's fancy—" you know the rest; and a study of the different ways young men and maidens take in other countries in this matter of courtship is interesting just now.

There is nothing particularly remarkable about the English way, though Englishmen in Canada may adopt different methods when their chance comes, and the choice of 5,000 is open to them. The Roumanian plan may come in useful then. Here they hold a fair once a year which all the marriageable girls attend. Each is accompanied by a wagon, which contains her dowry of furniture, etc. Then the girls are drawn up in line, and the men form another, with the parents behind them. If a young man admires any particular girl, he goes to her, while the parents of each also begin to discuss the matter.

Should all be found satisfactory, the marriage takes place at once, and the bride accompanies her husband home.

In Russia the marriageable maiden arrays herself in white, and with her parents goes to the winter gardens. The girl carries a silver spoon in her hand. When the parents observe a young man looking towards their daughter they hand the girl over to a marriage agent, who proceeds to make the necessary introduction and arrange the dowry.

STEEL OR WOOD?

Remarkable Imitations of Oak and Mahogany in Steel

"Very soon steel will be one of the chief rivals of wood in the manufacture of furniture," said the manager of a big furnishing establishment in London, England. "Already it is being used on a large scale for this purpose.

"As a matter of fact, it is possible to produce remarkable imitations of oak or mahogany in steel. And the advantages, of course, are many. Steel is fireproof, waterproof, dustproof, and cannot be attacked by vermin.

"In the manufacture of furniture very fine steel plates are used. They are smooth and extremely light, and are, of course, specially rolled for the purpose.

"Desks, shelves, tables, and chairs are among the articles made, and they have proved stronger and more durable than wooden pieces. This makes them particularly suitable for office use.

"As a matter of fact, we have already supplied various banks, insurance companies, and Colonial Government offices with desks and other furniture made of steel."

THERE ARE NO SUFFRAGETTES

Every Person in the Isle of Man Has a Vote

The Isle of Man, whose Parliament, the House of Keys, has been on strike, has a very different set of laws from those in England. There is no income tax, no land tax, and no death duties. All the revenue required is raised from taxes on food and drink.

There are no laws to restrict the hours that may be worked in factories and shops. Moneylending is not a profitable business there, for a 200-year-old law makes 6 per cent. the highest interest that can be charged. Yet imprisonment for debt is a far commoner penalty for failure to pay than it is in England.

There are no Suffragettes in Man, for the simple reason that every woman, married or single, owner, occupier, or lodger, has the Parliamentary vote.

ANTS SCARE ELEPHANTS

Every Kind of Beast and Reptile Fears the Bull Ant

In the vast equatorial forests of Africa the most dreaded of animals is the great bull-ant. Unlike other ants, it carries nothing away; everything is eaten on the spot. Every kind of beast and reptile—elephants, lions, gorillas, snakes and man himself—flees before this terrible insect.

These ants march through the forests in a long thin column, two inches wide and miles in length. If they come to an open space where there are no trees to shelter them from the sun, they burrow underground and form tunnels, through which they march on. It often takes as long as twelve hours for one of these armies to pass.

Any creature overtaken is at once attacked with irresistible fury and instantly devoured. The strongest and weakest, the most fierce and the most timid of creatures, are alike their prey.

Natives overtaken by them seek refuge in the nearest pond or river. Yet, even when the ants themselves are drowned, their strong pincers refuse to relax their hold upon any flesh they may have attached themselves to, and, though their bodies are torn forcibly away, their heads remain.

AN ARTILLERY TEAM

The officers commanding field batteries have received instructions to the effect that one man from each of the 15 highest field batteries in last year's efficiency list will be taken on the composite team which goes to England in August for the artillery competitions. There will also be eight men from the heavy artillery and seventeen from the coast defence, making a team 40 strong.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New System Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been troubled for twelve years. I had consulted doctors and physicians taking all kinds of blood medicines, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, dizziness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New System Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. LISA

A Story of the Russian Revolution

By Allan W. Thompson

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I lived on my father's estate in the department of Tula, in Russia. Several of us living in close proximity were very intimate. Nicholas Dimitriski was a sort of leader among us—a serious, intellectual fellow, who never spoke without weighing his words. Then there was Anna Alexandrovna, a young woman calculated to shine either in court society or among those women who band themselves together in England or America to accomplish some great good for their sex. Next came Lisa Saranin, not over eighteen, as gentle and retiring as the other two were full of vigor.

I suspected that Nicholas was tinctured with the revolutionary doctrines at that time spreading all over Russia. This I regretted, for with his talents he might win the favor of the government, and this would in turn enable him to occupy some high office.

From a few words I overheard spoken between him and Anna it seemed to me that she discouraged him in taking a position antagonistic to the czar. Nicholas was influenced in a contrary direction by Lisa, whose nature was fitted for a quiet, peaceful life.

I suspected that both these girls loved Nicholas and that they were two antagonistic influences, the one pulling him toward a dangerous career, the other endeavoring to keep him out of the strife that would now coming. He was led by Anna's ideas, while Lisa's restraining influence was not in accordance with his ardent nature.

That there was a strife of another kind between these two girls I did not doubt. It seemed to me that on the one hand the resolute Anna would possess Nicholas if she was obliged to wreck her life in order to get him, and it seemed that if the gentle Lisa did not get him she would herself be wrecked. Not one word concerning these things was spoken. There was underneath our intercourse a current running deep and swift that was scarcely noticeable on the surface. I think I was the only one cognizant of it, and even I did not realize its strength.

Finally our little group was broken up by Nicholas and I going to the capital, I to practice law, Nicholas ostensibly to do the same, but since he was possessed of a good income there was no necessity for him to labor. Great was my surprise when he told me on our way to St. Petersburg that he was engaged to Lisa. I was pleased to hear the news, for, as I have said, I sympathized with Lisa in this struggle between the two girls. But somehow I did not think Anna a girl to give up a lover to one who, considering her own dominating nature, must have seemed greatly her inferior. Now that the subject was an open one between us I intimated this to Nicholas. His reply was characteristic of him:

"I know nothing of the stratagems among women and care less. A man's heart is independent of his relations with any woman: I love Lisa. Anna is companionable with me in an intellectual way."

"But does not Lisa fear her influence over you?"

"She does. She distrusts Anna. But one cannot expect that either of two rivals will do the other justice."

These few words furnished me with food for thought during the rest of the journey. I have noticed that the good women of the world are apt to be correct in their judgment of the bad ones. It struck me that Lisa was endeavoring to protect the man she loved against an evil influence. But with a man's illogical mind I asked why should an influence drawing him to take up the cause of a downtrodden people be bad? And here is where a man's judgment is often mistaken when a woman's is right. He attacks a question with logic which is fallible. She attacks it with instinct which is infallible.

We hadn't been long in St. Petersburg when I learned that Anna was there. What she had come for I did not know, but I believed she had come because Nicholas was there. I saw her some among those present on several occasions at court balls and heard that she was quite prominent among the beauties of the capital. I often met Nicholas and without directly questioning him gave him every opportunity to tell me if he saw her often and what was going on between them, yet he never would talk about her.

But one day he went for me. I went to him at once and found him very much agitated.

"What's the matter?" I asked hastily.

"You have heard the adage 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned?'"

"Well?"

"I have resolutely refused to make love to Anna. It is one of those singular cases that I cannot understand. Her love has turned to hate."

"How can she harm you?"

"She can send me to Siberia."

"Surely she will not do that!"

"I think not. I fear not for myself, but for some one else."

"Who?"

"Lisa."

"Great heavens!"

"It is a question which a woman scorned hates the more—the man or the rival who has taken him from her."

"But how can Anna harm Lisa?"

"That I don't know. I only hope that if she harms her at all it will be through me. It would be some satisfaction for me to suffer for my own fault in not listening to Lisa's warnings. If one hair of Lisa's head should be harmed directly I should go mad."

I said all I could to comfort him, but in the situation there was no comfort. There had been a great revolution in his mind with reference to Anna. I could see that while before he had had confidence in her and had admired her he now stood in terror of her.

I went often to see him during the next few weeks and always found him much worried. One day, after not having called on him for a longer period than usual, I went to his rooms and found them empty. I asked the concierge what had become of him, and was told that he had gone out two days before and had not returned.

I knew the blow had fallen. I made every effort to find where Nicholas had been taken, but never succeeded in getting the slightest clew either as to the time or manner of his arrest. I did not doubt that he had been arrested for revolutionary designs.

It occurred to me to go and see Anna, whom I had known intimately, and question her. What use? Would she admit that she knew anything about Nicholas? No. I would have written Lisa sympathetically, but knew not what to say to her. I might say just the wrong thing. There was nothing to do but let the horrible episode take its course, or, rather, wear out the lives of those who were involved in it as countless similar ones had done with others.

I went home not long after this and as soon as I arrived went to see Lisa. I was interested by the belief that she was not at home. I didn't where she was, but he could not tell me. He only knew that she left quite suddenly some time before. She did not return during the city at Tula, and I could not find out anything about her. All that concerned her must have been very secret, for no one seemed to be aware that anything unusual had happened.

But while I was at home news came that startled the community. It was that Anna had been found in her carriage, which was standing from a half of the Winter Palace with a dagger driven up to the hilt in her heart.

All that was known as to when the assassin might have been was that the coachman heard the door of the carriage close. Presently he heard it close again. But whether any one got in for the purpose of committing the deed he did not know. He had not seen any one enter or leave the carriage. The dead was the mystery of its time at the capital. Upon my return to St. Petersburg I asked an officer of police with whom I was acquainted about it, and he told me in confidence that Anna was a paid spy in the service of the government, and it was supposed that she had been assassinated by a relative or friend of some one she had betrayed. The assassin was never discovered.

The next time I went home I called upon Lisa. She had known through Nicholas that I sympathized with him and with her, and she showed her appreciation of my interest in them. But I found her very much changed. She was not twenty yet she looked thirty, with an oldish look at that. I refrained as much as I could from speaking of the unpleasant features of her love and neither of us spoke of the death of Anna Alexandrovna. Lisa seemed buoyed up by a hope that she would before long be reunited with her lover, but she gave me no reason for her expectation.

Two years after this I received a letter from Nicholas postmarked the United States of America. It told me that Lisa by the death of a relative had come into possession of a valuable estate. She had turned it into cash, gone to Siberia, bribed his jailers and effected his escape. They had gone around northward by sea and shipped from England for America. They were living happily on a farm in North Dakota raising wheat.

The closing paragraph of the letter interested me greatly. It referred to the punishment that had been meted out to Anna Alexandrovna. In my heart I could not but admit that in Anna's death I had seen Lisa's hand, revenging her lover. The epistle closed with these words:

"While in prison word was passed one day that a government spy had been assassinated by order of a revolutionary circle and that her name was Anna Alexandrovna. A young man killed her in her carriage.

I breathed a sigh of relief.

NATURE WILL CURE YOU
Of Kidney Disease, Aided by Father Morrisey's No. 7.

Kidney trouble is one of the most distressing ailments of mankind, and leads to backache and rheumatism. This is because of the importance of the work done by the kidneys,—work which must proceed normally to insure good health.

A very large proportion of civilized people have some form of kidney trouble, sometimes without knowing that their malady is of that nature. Many obscure pains can often be traced to diseased kidneys.

These organs are the filters of the body. Their function is to strain out of the blood and eliminate through the bladder the worn out tissue and other impurities gathered by the blood in its course.

When the kidneys become congested and sluggish these impurities, including the irritating and poisonous uric acid, are not entirely removed from the blood. The result is that the uric acid is deposited in the joints and tissues, causing the agonies of rheumatism and frequently affecting the liver and other organs.

Father Morrisey, the famous priest-physician of Barthogue, N.B., after much research compounded a remedy which worked hand in hand with Nature. His doctrine, justified by thousands of cures, was that the need is not a patchwork relief, but a treatment that will enable the forces of Nature, working through the kidneys, to accomplish their intended work.

His famous prescription, No. 7, assists the kidneys to work vigorously and eliminate the harmful uric acid from the whole system. In the form of tablets, No. 7 is easy to take, and will effect cures where other remedies have failed. Do not trifle with kidney disease, but take No. 7 Tablets, the treatment that has proved so successful with other sufferers.

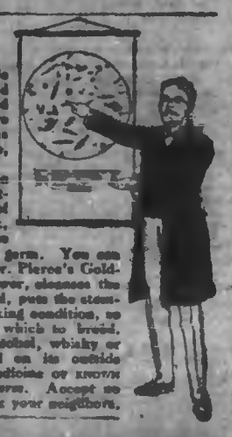
Afraid of Ghosts



Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It improves the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

HABITANT LEGISLATOR

J. B. MORIN NEVER FORSOOK THE WAYS OF HIS PEOPLE.

Sturdy French-Canadian, Who Spent Twelve Years in the Commons, Was Noted for His Unconventional Characteristics and Beloved for His Sterling Honesty and Kindliness of Heart.

So insignificant are the things of the present in comparison with those of the past—so much more important are the men and events at hand than those that have been, and so short is the memory of the public respecting those who have ceased to serve or to entertain, that when the death of Jean Baptiste Morin was announced the other day most people had to think twice in order to recall who the man was, and in what connection they had once known him, says a writer in The Montreal Standard. And yet it is only three years since he retired from public life, life which for twelve years he was a conspicuous figure—conspicuous, not because of the high offices he filled or the power he exercise, but because of his strong personality, his clear-cut and often amusing characteristics. In short, Jean Baptiste Morin was a character, but one that not only afforded entertainment to those whose good fortune it was to be associated with him, but that also inspired respect among opponents and won confidence and affection among friends. In fact, it can be truly said of Mr. Morin that, while he had political adversaries, he had no enemies. For twelve consecutive years, that is, from 1896 to 1908, he sat in the House of Commons for the County of Dorchester, Quebec. At least one-half of the members now composing the House were personally acquainted with Mr. Morin; and it is safe to say that each one of these members learned of his death without a feeling of personal bereavement. Those who sat in the House with Jean Baptiste Morin will even hold him in kindly remembrance, and to be so remembered by one's associates is the most beautiful of monuments.

Accompanying the announcement of Mr. Morin's death were published sketches of his career, telling how his ancestors came from St. Etienne, France, away back in 1636—only twenty-eight years after the founding of Quebec by Champlain, and six years before the founding of Montreal by Maisonneuve. They settled in what is now Montmagny County, and some of their descendants are living there to this day. The late Jean Baptiste was born not far distant, at St. Henedine, in Dorchester. As a lad of sixteen he went to the United States to make his way in the world, and he succeeded. He learned the coal and the lumber business. He engaged in both and made money. He carried on the business of a railway contractor, and made more money. After a sojourn of thirty-two years he returned to his native province, where his people dwelt and where his heart had ever been. He served his parish and his county in municipal affairs, and in 1896, when the tide of Liberalism swept the country he stemmed it in Dorchester, and went to the House of Commons to sit in Opposition.

For twelve years he sat there, and never was member more diligent in his attendance. Whoever might be absent when the Speaker took the chair at three o'clock it was not Jean Baptiste Morin; whoever might steal away to his lodgings during the wee small hours of an all-night sitting, Jean Baptiste Morin remained at his post until the House adjourned and everybody went home. It seemed to be of little concern to him whether his country permitted him time to sleep or not.

None of the members of his time heard more speeches and delivered fewer. And yet he was not a silent member, for upon about every important question he spoke once, usually briefly, but always with great earnestness. With few exceptions he spoke in English, and it was to some extent because of his rather picturesque use of a language that was not his mother tongue that he was always listened to with interest and often with amusement.

But it must not be thought from this that he could not or did not treat a subject seriously or effectively. Nature endowed Mr. Morin with more than the average ability, and although his endowments had not been developed by what the world calls higher education, he had been trained in the hard school of action. He knew what he knew thoroughly, and about which his experience gave him special knowledge. His points were telling, since opinion there whose views he opposed.

In the official, social life of the capital, which is open to every member of Parliament, Mr. Morin took part freely and with evident enjoyment. What made him conspicuous was the unconventional manner in which he observed the conventionalities.

When Parliament, he was invited to dine one evening with a prominent member of the Opposition, whose residence was on Stanley Hill, the fashionable quarter of Ottawa, across the canal and in the southeastern part of the city.

It was early summer, and the dinner hour—owing to daylight. Leaving the House some time before it rose for the 8:15 o'clock session, Mr. Morin went to his lodgings to dress for the dinner party. Shortly after six o'clock, with the sun still shining and the breath of day in the air, he was seen making his way leisurely along Spark street and across the Sappers' Bridge to the eastern part of the city, dressed in an evening suit—conventional "swallow-tail" coat, glaring shirt front, white tie, and all, but his feet were encased in the heavy boots he was accustomed to wear down in Dorchester, and on his head was the black derby he wore in summer and winter. Of course, he was smoking, for that was his steady custom when not attending to his Parliamentary duties. From one corner of his firm mouth projected a stub of a clay pipe, highly colored but still more highly flavored, and dearly beloved, because of both qualities. Such was Mr. Morin in the conventional circle of polite society.

As with unconscious dignity and equally unconscious incongruity he strolled along Spark street he was the observed of all observers, a sight to be openly laughed at by the illbred, and by others to be carried away in the mind's eye and enjoyed in secret. But Mr. Morin cared for none of these things.

Mr. Morin dearly loved his native province. Its people were his people, its institutions were those laid by his forefathers, its language was the speech he learned at his mother's knee. But he was no narrow provincialist, with sympathies circumscribed by the circumstances of locality, race or creed. For almost a third of a century he had lived in a foreign land, and life there only tended to make him more appreciative of the worth of Canadian citizenship and of British allegiance. So far as his power and opportunities permitted, and according to his light, he did what he could for the cause of good government and national development. He did not achieve distinction, but he did the things next at hand that seemed to be right. While Quebec has contributed to public life many greater men, she has also conferred distinction upon other less worthy of remembrance than is Jean Baptiste Morin.

A PERILOUS MOMENT.

When Canada's Constitution Was Nearly Wrecked.

The Constitution came within an ace of being shattered when Mr. Fielding was putting his interim supply bill through its various formal stages. Whenever Mr. Speaker is in his chair, the Mace must lie on the table. That is one of the bulwarks of the nation. During the formal proceedings of sending a supply bill on its way to the Senate, the Speaker pops in and out of his chair continually, for the reason that one minute the House is in committee and the next in full dress again. When in committee the Mace reposes snugly on a shelf under the table. On this occasion Chairman Gilbert McIntyre was performing his usual functions with the bill in committee stage, and Col. Harry Smith, somewhat spent with rushing up and down lifting the Mace off and on the table, retired from the chamber to have a chat with Captain Chamberé, "the gentlemanly usher of the Black Rod." While he was absent it became necessary for the Speaker to take his seat again. He did so, but horrible to behold, the Mace was not on the table! Sydney Fisher, who is a stickler for Parliamentary etiquette, gasped in astonishment, and motioned to Doctor Sproule, another "light of ancient days," whose respect for the rules is almost as strong as his Orange principles. Meanwhile Speaker Marcil was rushing through the formula, which sounded like "Mr. Fielding moved, seconded by Mr. Fisher, that the bill be read a third time pleasure of the House to adopt the motion carried." By this time Mr. Fisher's face was blushing red, and Dr. Sproule hastily sent a page for a glass of water. (Whenever the doctor is unusually agitated he always takes the water cure.) Finally the doorkeeper, noticing the Sproule and Fisher signals of distress, saved the day by rushing in and flopping the time-honored emblem of power and authority on the table with a thud which spilled the ink over the desk of Dr. Flint, clerk of the House. Mr. Fisher is reported to be seriously considering the nomination of the doorkeeper for an Edward medal of the highest class. He certainly prevented a breach being made in the walls of the constitution, and in the words of the late lamented Doctor Barr, M.P. for Dufferin, "he seen his duty and he done it nobly."

Mixed Emotions.

A Bostonian tells of a class, well set up young Irishmen who formerly saw service in the British navy, but who is now engaged in business at the Hub.

"When are you going to get freedom in Ireland, John?" the Bostonian cheerfully asked.

"The only way that we'll get freedom in auld Ireland," said the Celt, "will be if France an' Russia an' Germany an' Austria an' maybe Italy—if they would all join together to give those blackguards of English a race auld Ireland. That's the only way, sir, we'll get home rule."

Then as he looked cautiously about a twinkle of cunning was added to his expression. "An' the whole lot of 'em together couldn't lick it, sir. Oh, it's the grand navy we've got!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Trees and the Song Birds.

[Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.]

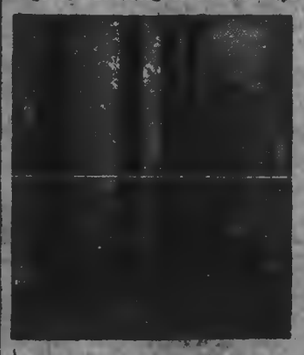
As I speed over the country in my lecture work on "The Salvation of Our Trees" there are many things to inspire and cheer the heart, especially that of seeing what attempts people make to grow trees, shrubs and flowers. I sometimes feel that I should like to get off the train and show people just how. To me everything seems so simple. There is no luck, no chance; it is all cause and effect. Learn just what to do and do it, and old Mother Nature is there ready to do all the rest, and, say, does she not do finely?

The one discouraging thing is, as is often the case, to meet some stupid, bigoted, conceited old man who thinks he knows all and can't even raise a good crop of weeds. In the decade that is about to close there is truly something inspiring. In that short time, since my old "Tree Doctor" raised the cry for "our wounded friends the trees" and the Cleveland newspapers re-echoed the call to the nation, practically all the newspapers have lent their aid, and the great "magazine-wave done public educational work. As yet there is not 5 per cent of the adults that are awake to the real, deplorable condition of the trees. The deterioration of the trees is faster than the education as to how to take care of them; hence my only hope now lies with the child.

Illustration No. 11 shows Mr. and Mrs. William Lodge of Silver Lake, O.

NO. 11.—CHILDREN AND BIRDS HOME-LIKE MANNER THERE.

It is not only interesting and pretty, but there are the profoundest of thoughts clustering around it. The little boys are holding a couple of seedling walnut trees, the seed (nuts) of which I brought from the old Charles Dana place, Deseris island, Glen Cove, N. Y. The plants are a year old, and they, it is hoped, will grow up with the children. To give an idea of what one generation could do we call attention to illustration No. 12. These trees (the largest ones) were planted thirty-three years ago by the grandfather of the children here seen. They were planted right and then taken care of, and here they stand, honoring the memory of the patriotic citizen who believed that one of the best ways to serve one's country is to plant trees. This new movement, the saving of our song birds, exhibits an unaccountable slowness on the part of the average adult to be aroused to one of the greatest menaces that have ever been known in the history of nations, the total extinction of our song birds by the English sparrow and the crow. Unless the increase and depredations of these two fiends are checked our native small birds cannot last for another decade. Already we learn that an average of one-fourth of all the crops



NO. 12.—THESE PLANTED THIRTY-THREE YEARS AGO BY GRANDFATHER OF CHILDREN SEEN IN NO. 11 of the United States is destroyed by insects. "Destroy all the insectivorous birds," says Michelet, "and in also years the human race will perish from the face of the earth."

I want my readers to help restore and preserve our song birds. The only way to do this is to destroy the English sparrow, which destroys the song birds. There is an "uprising" nearly all over the country against this imported pest.

The English sparrow must be destroyed if we are to save our trees. All our trees will be ruined by insects if the sparrows keep up their fight against the insect killing birds.

Dog's Unpopular.

Up to date there have been only 61 dog tags taken out in Gas. In 1909, 450 were taken out, and in 1910 only 250.

Power of Nature's Beauty.

Have you never felt the marvelous powers of beauty in nature? If not you have missed one of the most exquisite joys in life, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. I was once going through the Yosemite valley, and after riding 100 miles in a stagecoach over rough mountain roads I was so completely exhausted that it did not seem as though I could keep my soul while we traveled over the ten more miles which would bring us to our destination. But on looking down from the top of the mountain I caught a glimpse of the celebrated Yosemite falls and the surrounding scenery just as the sun broke through the clouds, and there was revealed a picture of such rare beauty and marvelous grandeur that every particle of fatigue, pain and trouble vanished as if by magic. My whole soul thrilled with a winged sense of sublimity, grandeur and beauty which I had never experienced before and which I can never forget. I felt a spiritual uplift which brought tears of joy to my eyes.

A Delayed Execution.

An eighteenth century execution on Kennington common was stopped for a time owing to a strange cause. On Aug. 13, 1763, two days before the date of the execution, a heavy fog came over London, accompanied by thunder and lightning and torrents of rain. These continued for nearly forty-eight hours, and many people believed that the last day had arrived. When the time fixed for the execution arrived the assembled crowd cried shame on the sheriff for hanging a man when the world was coming to an end. As he persisted in his preparations they burst through the barriers and stopped the proceedings, shouting that the culprit might as well wait a few minutes, when the grand summons would come to all. The sheriff had to obtain the assistance of a force of soldiers before the execution could be carried out.

Twelve Miles Up.

Aviators who are striving for altitude records could be frozen stiff in their seats if they were to go up as high as twelve and one-quarter miles. Kites have been sent up that high, or about 65,600 feet. They were equipped with recording thermometers, which showed that the temperature was 80 degrees below zero F.—New York Press.

Why They Don't Build Docks.

It costs $2 to get a trunk from a ship anchored in the harbor at Pernambuco, Brazil, to the shore. The authorities will not permit the building of docks because, they say, it would "knock the harbor business out of a job."

The Talmud.

The Talmud is the compendium of ancient Jewish oral, or unwritten, law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch, or written law. Its origin is coeval with the return of the Jewish people from the Babylonian captivity, 536 B. C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 A. C. The Talmud is a compendium of prose and poetry and contains two elements, legal and legendary. Its morality resembles that of the New Testament, and its philosophy reminds us very forcibly of that of the great Plato.—New York American.

Chaldean Marriages.

In ancient Chaldea when a marriage was celebrated the priest lighted a fire which should be kept burning in the new home until the death of one of the parties.

The Peacock's Tail.

If you wish to take the conceit out of a peacock pull out his tail feathers, and as soon as he finds the glory of his plumage gone he becomes the humblest, most subdued and ashamed looking bird that ever walked the earth.

Prismatic Shells.

The prismatic color of shells, scales of fish, wings of insects and feathers of birds depend upon the interference of light in the thin plates that compose the integuments.

Ale in England's Navy.

From the beginning of the English navy down to the eighteenth century a gallon of ale a day for every man and boy was issued, and not until about 1830 was the brewing of ale especially for the fleet stopped.

He Gave Up A Fortune

Because He Couldn't Wait a Few Hours For a Smoke

By JAMES P. WALKER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Having proposed to Genevieve, daughter of Colonel Meehard of the —th United States infantry and having been referred to her father, I wrote him a note asking when I could see him alone, there being an important matter about which I desired to confer with him. Of course he knew what that matter was. In reply I received an invitation to dine with him at his club—the Army and Navy. We dined in a private room. I purposely waited till the dinner was finished and the colonel had drunk his share of the wine. I was about to open the subject for which we had met when he stopped me by laying his hand on my arm. Then, reaching back of him, he pushed a button. A waiter appeared, and the colonel ordered him to bring one first rate cigar.

Now, Genevieve had posted me on one matter about which I must be very careful. On no account was I to let her father know that I used tobacco in any form. The colonel detested even the word tobacco.

"Thanks, colonel," I said. "I never smoke."

"Oh, you don't?" he replied. Then, turning to the waiter, he repeated the order. The cigar was brought and placed before me. "You either smoke that cigar," said my host, "or the object"—

He paused. I knew what he meant, and, taking the cigar, I cut off the end, lit it and began to smoke.

"Before entering upon any other subject," the colonel continued, "I have a story to tell you. My family knows that there is something about tobacco that excites my ire. If they know the cause it would make trouble, at least between me and my wife. But I won't tell the yarn wrongside foremost; I'll begin at the beginning.

"When I went to West Point the object of my ambition was not to take high grade in my studies, but to be a cadet officer. I was very careful not to get demerits and kept my equipments well polished. I was made a corporal, which put me in the line of promotion, and I confidently looked forward to being a cadet captain when I became a first class man. Immediately after my promotion I strolled into the room of one of my classmates, where I found several cadets smoking. It was then against the rules of the academy for cadets to smoke. I was offered a cigar—I had never touched tobacco in any form—and, like a fool, took one."

The colonel grew red in the face, and there was an irritated look in his eye.

"Well, colonel?" I said, blowing a cloud.

"An inspecting officer walked in and caught us all smoking. My chevrons were stripped from my arm, and I served the rest of my term a private."

"That was too bad," I remarked sympathetically.

"It was nothing compared with what followed. That one whiff of the weed gave me a taste for tobacco that I have never got over."

"But you don't smoke."

"No, I don't, and if you'll be patient you'll learn the reason."

"Go on, colonel."

"From that time forward, feeling that I might as well be hanged for an old sheep as a lamb, I smoked like a ferryboat. I was caught smoking so often that my demerits came very near preventing me from graduating. As it was, I was put into the infantry instead of the engineers, where, when I entered, I hoped to come out.

"The course I laid out for myself was this: I vowed I would not remain in the army, marry and bring up a family of children on an officer's pay. Being poor as a church mouse, I resolved to marry a rich girl and make the army a lifelong profession.

"After tackling a good many girls who I supposed had money I met with success with one whom I will call Amelia Jones. She was the only daughter of old Jones, who had made a fortune in a patent of some kind, and his daughter told me that he would settle half a million on her the day she was married, provided he approved of her fiance. Just as soon as I proposed to Amelia and was accepted she told me that when I came to meet her father I must stop smoking till after the wedding. The old man was violently opposed to tobacco"—

"Singular," I interrupted, "that the same thing is repeated in the case of your daughter."

"Not so singular as you suppose when you have heard me out.

"Amelia said that after the promised settlement had been made I could blow a cloud in the old duffer's face if I liked—or words to that effect—for he couldn't take back what he'd given. Since I was to get a nice girl and $25,000 a year with her I thought I could manage to stop smoking during an engagement, especially since I was due to be ordered west in three months and we were to be married before the change came.

"That was the hardest three months to get through in my life. I've served on Arctic trains and in a Filipino

...ness, but I could stand it and didn't ask for. I had promised my fiance that I would take no stimulant, that I would not smoke even till the expiration of the term, or, rather, till 12 o'clock noon on the day we were to be married. At first I was so hungry for a smoke that I kept a few cigars in a bureau drawer where I could smell them, but I found it was like a drunkard smelling liquor. I had to give it up. I kept a record of the days as they passed before the wedding day and scratched off each day as it passed. And when they began to dwindle every day seemed a month—not before the wedding, but before I could smoke.

"At last the day of my emancipation came. I had received my orders to go west, and we were to take a train leaving at 3 p. m. The ceremony was to take place at 6. I bought a thousand of the best cigars I could find to have them ready and to take with me where such cigars were not to be procured. On my wedding day I had my breakfast served in my room, and after I had eaten and drank I opened a box. The odor was delicious.

"Then the thought came to me that the time of my pledge had expired at 12 o'clock. An unconscionable desire seized me to smoke just one of those cigars. I took one out of the box, put it back, took it out again, smelled of it and, as ill luck would have it, saw a box of matches within reach. I scratched the match; bit off the end of the cigar, resisted temptation till the match was nearly consumed, then, touching the flame to the cigar, drew in a long breath of delicious smoke.

"I hadn't got the thing fairly going before that old villain Jones opened the door and came into the room."

The colonel grew so red in the face at the memory of this second wrecking of his hopes by tobacco that I feared he would have a stroke of apoplexy. Finally his fire subsided, and he continued:

"The old fool had come to my quarters to ask me to sign a paper connected with the settlement. At the sight of his intended son-in-law puffing clouds of smoke, the odor of which made him sick, he turned and left the room, banging the door behind him.

"For half an hour I acted like a madman. Then, having quieted down a bit, I went over to the house where the Jones family were. I found a commotion. As soon as I was shown into the room where Amelia was and the door was closed behind me she stood looking at me, furious.

"'Fool!' she exclaimed. 'You have spoiled everything.'

"'What's the upshot?' I asked.

"'Father says that we can proceed with the wedding if we like, but there is to be no settlement.'

"'Father is an old dragon, and I'd rather not have a dragon for a father-in-law,' I snapped angrily.

"'And I'd rather have a man for a husband who is not an idiot,' she returned.

"'An idiot?' I replied. 'West Point doesn't graduate idiots.'

"'Will you oblige me by leaving me?'

"I said something more—I don't remember what, though I do know that it was under the influence of anger of the most painful kind—irritation with myself. I only succeeded in drawing more bitter retorts from the girl I was to have married, and I finally left her."

The colonel was so worked upon by the reminiscence that I was glad to see him pause again for breath and composure. Finally he went on:

"There was no wedding. The old fool was obdurate, the bride to be was disgusted with my weakness in yielding to temptation, and I was mad as a March hare. I went to my western post alone, but before going I swore a great oath that I would never again yield to the temptation of tobacco. I would drink, gamble, dissipate in any and every form, but never again would I yield to the weed.

"I know what you wish to say to me," he continued, "and you have my consent, but you couldn't please me better than by smoking yourself into your grave. As for me, a cigar is an excitant of a kind of madness. Tobacco cost me promotion in the army, and it deprived me of a fortune. I do not mean that I would exchange the woman I love, the mother of my children, for Amelia Jones, but I do mean that I have never recovered having lost a fortune by yielding to temptation.

"Now you understand why I would not for the world stand toward you in the position that old heathen Jones stood toward me. Smoke, smoke, smoke, smoke to your heart's content!"

He pushed the button again and ordered another cigar for me. I protested that I never smoked two cigars, the one following close upon the other, but dreaded to oppose him lest he fly into a passion.

My confession for my daughter's hand was perfunctory. Indeed, it was an anticlimax. I was accepted on the condition that I never should stop smoking.

My father-in-law elect is a very obliging person. His good humor, however, not to say his affection for his daughter, led him to indulge her every whim in such large measure as to risk his very life. I kept the secret that he had confided to me, but to this day my wife cannot understand why I am more of a slacker than before she married me, and that, too, without any opposition whatever from her father.—

Colonel Meehard's story is an illustration of the telling incidents that determine one's career. Had it not been for his first unsuspected meeting of the inspector at West Point he would not have been so affected by the legend. The two together gave an important direction to his life's surroundings. He was devoted to his family, but somehow never could recover from the shock of having given up half a million dollars for a cigar. I tell him that as long as the fortune was to have been his wife's instead of his own he made a wise choice.

Why He Liked Them.

"Have you ever liked the Bible from beginning to end?"

"Yes. When I was a boy my parents compelled me to read a chapter every night."

"What part must appealed to you?"

"The Psalms and the Proverbs."

"That's curious. Ordinarily a boy would not be expected to understand the Psalms and Proverbs as readily as he would some of the stories, such as the story of Joseph and that of Samson."

"It wasn't because I understood the Psalms and Proverbs. But they were cut up into shorter verses than any of the rest of the Bible, consequently I was able to get through the pages faster."—Chicago Record-Herald.

And a young-looking mother-in-law."

But justice in changing my mind."

Woman's World

Remarkable Book by Paris Society Woman.

MARGUERITE AUDOUX.

Marguerite Audoux, a Parisian sewing woman, has recently received the prize of $1,000 offered by La Vie Heureuse for the best book published in France during the year. The book, "Marie Claire," is for the most part autobiographical. It consists of incidents in the life of Mlle. Audoux, who did not begin writing until a few years ago, when she was obliged to give up sewing on account of threatened blindness. Mlle. Audoux confesses to little knowledge of French writers, but the novels of Charles Dickens and Charles Reade in their French translations were her favorite reading. She says that these novels and the Bible constituted her sole literary training. The book in France has already gone into its tenth edition and is soon to be translated into English.

Octave Mirbeau, a noted French critic, says: "Artistically it is the equal of any work by the great authors of France. Its exquisite charm lies in its dual simplicity and absolute sincerity."

Says Wife Should Aid in Business.

Lady Hope thinks a woman who helps her husband with his business is the ideal helpmate. "A man's two ambitions," says she, "are his home and his office. His home is often the mainspring of his career, if he has a devoted, restful wife, of a cheerful and happy disposition. I cannot help thinking the ideal woman should be true to the first pattern. She must be a helpmeet to the man. It is not good for man to live alone," were the initiatory words pronounced on her introduction to this sensational world. Today, though thousands of years have passed by since then, the same motto holds good, and men who have the truest views of life and its responsibilities will be found to concur in it. Woman finds her highest reward in life by maintaining her rightful position—that is, by being a good mother, a good daughter and a good sister and, above all, a good wife. Could any one estimate her influence too highly if she fills these positions well?"

"I COULD NOT LIVE"

WITHOUT "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Writes The Treasurer Of Caledonia Township

FERGUSVALE, Ont., Jan. 25th, 1910.

For thirty-five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation.

No matter what remedy or physician I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure.

About two years ago, I read the testimonial of Hon. John Costigan regarding "Fruit-a-tives" and I decided to give this fruit medicine a trial. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for "Fruit-a-tives", I am satisfied that I could not live." JAMES PROUDFOOT.

The liver controls the bowels by giving up enough bile to make the bowels move. The only possible way to cure constipation is to make the liver active and healthy and thus store up sufficient bile to move the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the liver—restores an abundance of bile—and causes the bowels to move regularly and naturally. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Trial size, 25c. At dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HELPED HORSE INDUSTRY

The Late J. P. Wiser, Prescott, Imported Some Valuable Animals

John Philip Wiser, who died recently at Prescott, was active in the stock breeding industry. The stables in connection with the Wiser distillery are capable of feeding 1,000 cattle. From these barns the first cattle were exported to Great Britain, and Mr. Wiser could claim to be the pioneer in the export cattle trade. In addition to his interests in Canada, Mr. Wiser was the President of the Dominion Cattle Company, that operated a ranch of 1,750,000 acres in the Panhandle district of Texas. When their lands were opened for settlement by the United States, Mr. Wiser acquired a ranch in Lyon and Washoe counties, Kansas, where he had as many as 4,000 cattle that were bred and fattened for the Kansas City and Chicago markets. Selling out the above business in 1905, he had since confined his attention to his business in Prescott. To the live stock industry of Canada the enterprise and intelligence of Mr. Wiser was of great value. He served as a member of the Ontario Agricultural Commission in 1880, and imported at great expense the celebrated Rysdyk Hambletonian Stallion, and other high-bred trotting stock into Canada, notably Chestnut Hill, Phil Sheridan, Hiram Woodruff, Orient, Wm. B. Smith, Barbara Patchen, and Joe Brown.

ELIMINATED THE VICTORY

Canada's Defeat of Americans in 1812 Will Not be Reproduced in London

Despatches from London state that it has been decided to eliminate from the pageants at the Festival of Empire the representation of the defeat of a large American force by a small Canadian force during the war of 1812 lest it should prove distasteful to the United States visitors. Mr. Martin Burrell, speaking of the matter in the Canadian Parliament, thought there was no force in this objection, and asked an explanation. Hon. Mr. Fisher said Canada contributed to the general expenses of the Festival. She had nothing to do with the arrangement or character of the pageants. Sir Wilfrid Laurier pointed out that in the older United States school books, at least the battle of Chateauguay was not described as a Canadian victory. But he did not think any satisfactory reason had been advanced for eliminating the true character of the Canadian victory. "History is history," observed Sir Wilfrid, "but we have nothing to do in the matter; it was not referred to us. The matter, I understand, is in the hands of a committee. If I had been a member of that committee I would have done otherwise."

HONOR THE HEROES

Colonel Merritt Would Have Monuments Commemorating 1812

Colonel W. Hamilton Merritt, for years commanding officer of the Governor-General's Body Guards in Toronto, is impressed with the example the United States capital holds out to Canadian cities in its manner of honoring national heroes. The city is decorated with beautiful works of sculpture at almost every turn, and many of these commemorate men distinguished in the military and naval history of the country. Colonel Merritt has summarized these as follows: Revolutionary War heroes, 4; War of 1812-15, 3; Mexican War, 1; Civil War, 10. "Why," he asks, "cannot Canada honor our heroes of 1812 by the erection of monuments to celebrate the centennial? 'And why are we afraid to call them 'victories'? The United States is not so considerate of others' feelings. Besides, it is due to our own self-respect."

NO ATHEISM IN COLLEGES

Dr. Graham Says They Were Never More Spiritual Than To-Day

Rev. Dr. Graham, Educational Secretary of the Methodist Church, has made the following statement: "People say that our colleges are hotbeds of sensualism and atheism. No man who is not blind can say that. Any man who knows the universities of this country and the United States will say that they were never more spiritual than they are to-day. Three-fifths of the students of the universities of this continent and five-sixths of the teaching staffs are members of some evangelical church." He pointed out that not only was the Bible now more widely read than ever before, but in his opinion it was more intelligently read, and its spiritual meaning was better understood than ever before. As further evidence that the present is a better age than a century ago, the preacher referred to the revived interest in and the progress made by missions in late years, and to the awakening and movement towards better things in the Orient and in other nations of the world.

PENNY SAVINGS BANKS

An amendment to the Penny Bank Act, provides that the Minister of Finance may fix the rate of interest to be allowed on deposits made by the Penny Banks in the Government Savings Bank or the Post Office Savings Bank. The rate is not to exceed one per cent. in advance of that paid to depositors in the Government Savings Bank and the Post Office Savings Bank.

THE LINE TO PORCUPINE

Work on the branch between Porcupine and the main line of the T. & N. O. Railway at Iroquois Falls is being rushed, and it is now quite certain that trains will be running the first week in July. Only two or three miles of grading remains to be finished. Three or four of the mines are in full swing, the Dome having 340 men on the list last pay day.

Dexter Told Her She Did Not Have A Pint Of Good Blood in Her Body.

Mrs. Dosithe P. Cormier, Middle Sackville, N.B., says:

"In the spring of 1907 I was all run down, and the doctor told me I had not a pint of good blood in my body. I took different remedies from doctors, but they did not seem to do me any good. After having taken a lot of different other kinds of medicine, and they did not seem to benefit me, I was almost in despair and did not know what to do until my husband met a lady and told her about my sickness and she told him to try Burdock Blood Bitters as she had received the greatest benefit from using it. My husband went and bought me a bottle, and after having taken it I felt better, so I kept on using one bottle after another until I had taken six in all and then I was strong and well. I am positive that my being alive to-day is due to the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. One spring since then I was not feeling very well and had a lot of work to do. I thought I would procure a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters and after I had taken two I was able to do a lot of hard work all the summer, and I never felt better in my life. In the winter of 1906 I had Pneumonia, and it left me with a severe pain in the left side. Every morning when I would get out of bed I had to sit down for a while it was so painful. After I had used Burdock Blood Bitters the pain disappeared completely. It has also cured me of bleeding piles. I have received so much benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters that you may publish this as it may help others as it has me."

PETERBOROUGH WEDNESDAY MAY 17 1911

ANNUAL MEETING OF PETERBOROUGH BOARD OF TRADE HELD LAST NIGHT

Reports Were Received From the President and Secretary and Communications Dealt With—Resolution Endorsing the Industrial Commissioner.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade was held last night in the Council chamber. About twenty members were present. The recent action of the Council in doing away with the Industrial Commissioner's office and its consequent effect, was discussed, and the following resolution was passed:

Resolution of the Peterborough Board of Trade, passed at its annual meeting on the 16th day of May, 1911.

Whereas the Board has been informed that it is not the intention of the City Council of the City of Peterborough to employ Mr. Duggan as Industrial Commissioner for the city during the ensuing year, and

Whereas Mr. Duggan has been assured by the Committee of the Board, having his office in charge, that Mr. Duggan has been a painstaking, energetic and efficient officer, and that a continuance of his services are likely to be productive of much advantage to the City of Peterborough and

Whereas we believe that to place somebody else in his position at this time would cause a break in the continuity of his work and result in much waste of the efforts already put forth by Mr. Duggan in procuring industrial concerns for the City of Peterborough.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the members of this Board feel that the industrial interests of the City of Peterborough would be best promoted by a continuation of the services of Mr. Duggan as Industrial Commissioner, if an amicable understanding can be arrived at between the City Council and said gentleman, and

Be it further resolved, that in our opinion the members of the City Council should be requested to meet a committee of this Board for the purpose of discussing the situation and hearing an expression of the opinion of the members of the Board, and

Be it further resolved, that every effort should be put forth by the members of this Board to establish harmonious relationship between the members of the City Council and the Industrial Commissioner, and

Be it further resolved, that a Committee be appointed, consisting of Messrs. J. J. Turner, Dodds, Kingan, Eastwood and O'Connell, to interview the City Council in the matter for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, and that Mr. Kingan be appointed as convenor of the said committee.

T. Q. Quartermaine, who has been secretary of the Board of Trade for the last twelve years, sprung a surprise on those present by handing in his resignation. Following is the annual report of the Board for the past year:

Peterborough Board of Trade—

Gentlemen,—I have the honour of presenting to you, as secretary, the 22nd annual report of this Board.

The past year we have held seven (7) meetings, viz.: 15th March, 1910, 5th April; 15th November; 22nd November, 20th December, 27th February, 1911, and 28th April, 1911. We have also held several committee meetings.

The following subjects have been discussed at these meetings; Municipal ownership, By-law to build and equip power house, etc., Organization of a Provincial Board of Trade, Technical Education, Municipal Government by Commission, Bonner-Worth Co. and Chas. E. Dittman by-laws, Reciprocity and Jules Motor Co.

The thanks of the Board of Trade are due His Worship Mayor Morrow and the members of the City Council for the use of the City Council chamber during the past year.

In conclusion, I beg to tender my resignation as secretary of this Board, and in doing so I wish to thank the executive officers and members of the Board for the generous support they have so unstintingly given me during the past twelve (12) years that I have been secretary of the Board.

With my best wishes for a useful and brilliant future for the Peterborough Board of Trade,

Yours faithfully,

T. Q. QUARTERMAINE.
Secretary

This was next followed by the report of the President, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, which is as follows:

To the Members of the Peterborough Board of Trade—

Gentlemen.—I have the honour, as President of the Peterborough Board of Trade of presenting to you my second annual report of this honourable body.

During the past year we have discussed many important questions relating to the welfare of our city. The discussions and resolutions passed by this board, have, we hope, to some extent, guided and helped the decision of our Municipal Council with whom

MR. W. H. DENHAM ON INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER

As A Member of the Special Committee Appointed to Look After the Office He is Able to Endorse the Work Done by Mr. Duggan During His Year Here---Commissioner Was Keen and Zealous.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While I am averse to continuing the newspaper controversy, regarding the Industrial Commissioner, Mr. Duggan, I feel that in justice to the Board of Trade and to myself, it might be well to define my position in the matter, as a reason for the activity I have shown in endeavouring to have the re-appointment of Mr. Duggan considered by the Council.

I wish to state in the first place, that I have not advocated the re-appointment of Mr. Duggan for reasons of personal friendship, although I have no reason to count Mr. Duggan as anything but a friend. At the beginning of last year, the Board of Trade appointed a committee, consisting of Mr. D. Hughes Charles, Mr. J. H. Larmonth, Mr. W. H. Moore, Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Mr. Peter Campbell and myself to engage an Industrial Commissioner, to outline and supervise his duties and to also supervise the expenditure of the money appropriated by the City Council and collected from the citizens. The fact that I was appointed on this committee led me to use my best efforts and interests towards a beneficial result for the city of Peterborough, and in doing this, I have spent considerable time and effort and I feel that I have worked as hard to accomplish satisfactory results as any committee of the Council has worked on any other subject in the line of work they had taken up, and towards the close of the Industrial Commissioner's year, we felt that Mr. Duggan had proved himself competent, that he had done a great amount of good work and that while only two industries had been located in Peterborough, still the preliminary work he had done and the prospective propositions, which are still in the course of correspondence, would result in several industries for Peterborough the coming year. This opinion was reached from the fact that we were actively engaged in looking after the office and were well posted on just what Mr. Duggan had done, and therefore, our recommendation to the Council to re-appoint Mr. Duggan was in absolute good faith, believing first, that it would be difficult to obtain a better man, secondly that the preliminary education which Mr. Duggan has received would be saved to the city, I, therefore, felt that the recommendation of this committee should have been recognized in some form, as should also have been the recommendation by the Merchants Association, the recommendation of the number of citizens, who appeared at a meeting held in the Council Chambers Tuesday, May 9th, and the recommendation from the Profession and the Manufacturers.

In all the arguments used against Mr. Duggan, nothing has been substantiated beyond the fact that he was instrumental in having Mr. Beck give an address before a number of citizens in Peterborough, and I look on his action in this matter as following out the instructions of the committee, who outlined his duties, one of which was that he was to obtain all information possible, regarding the advisability of purchasing or developing power for the municipality. In obtaining this information, he simply did as any other efficient occupant of the Industrial Commissioner's office should have done in order to make good with the organization under whose employ he was. He was keen and zealous in the carrying on of this work and if there is any blame attached to the fact that the information was made public it must attach to the Board of Trade. I feel also that certain points in connection with this Industrial Commissionership are being overlooked, one of which is that Mr. Duggan was in the employ of the Board of Trade and under their control, secondly that the Board of Trade is an organization of citizens, and while not elective, they do, to a great extent, represent the citizenship of Peterborough, and their actions have always been strictly in the interests of Peterborough, and it was not the intention in any way to detract from the dignity of the Council, whose by anything, which would embarrass them, but being an organization for the purpose, as stated above, I feel that they were strictly within their rights as citizens to obtain any information they liked on any subject, and that looking at the matter in a broad-minded way, the Council should not have felt ignored.

The fact that the Hydro-Electric report was published has not, in my opinion, prejudiced in any manner the interests of the city, inasmuch as the Hydro-Electric reports were open to inspection by the owners of the several powers mentioned therein, and in addition to this, I am informed on good authority, that the principal power mentioned, namely, the Otonabee Power Company, had previously obtained a report through Mr. C. H. Keefer, Ross & Holgate. Mr. W. J. Francis, all of whom are of the highest standing as consulting engineers, and whose opinion will carry equal weight with the engineers working in the interests of the HydroElectric, therefore, the keeping secret of the contents of this report would not have aided the Council in any manner in their negotiations for these powers.

I took the matter up with His Worship Mayor Morrow the other day, endeavouring to satisfy myself what there was against Mr. Duggan, in addition to the publication of the Hydro-Electric report and learned of several criticisms. As the matter now stands, Mr. Duggan tells me that he did not notify the people of Peterborough that the Hydro-Electric report would be read, secondly, that he did not insist on its publication, and thirdly, that the asking for the Hydro-Electric report by the City Council was a continuation of his line of work, in obtaining the information, as the only way in which he could obtain the services of the Hydro-Electric Commission, was through an application by a municipality. I advised Mr. Morrow at the time I was in conference with him, that if certain criticisms, which were made against Mr. Duggan, could be substantiated, that I would retire from his support, but until they were substantiated that I felt I had no reason to change my opinion, as to Mr. Duggan being an efficient and competent official, and well worth the support and confidence of the citizens of Peterborough. For this reason, I have continued to be active in recommending the reconsideration by the Council, feeling that their decision was made on the strength of information, which had been grossly exaggerated, and that a decision on those grounds was unfair to Mr. Duggan, was unfair to the Board of Trade, was unfair to the Merchants' Association, was unfair to the professional interests, was unfair to the Manufacturers' Association, and was unfair to those who had subscribed towards the support of the office for the past year, and also unfair to the ratepayers of Peterborough, who indirectly paid the $2,000 subscribed by the Council. I earnestly believe that on a reconsideration of the question in its full light, that the seeming dis-

LUNCHEON TO MR. BRYAN TO-MORROW

Canadian Club is Seconding the Efforts of the Y. M. C. A. in Tendering a Reception to the Famous Guest

A BIG EVENT

There is no doubt that the luncheon to be tendered to our distinguished guest, Mr. William Jennings Bryan, at noon on Thursday, will be one befitting the occasion. The men of Peterborough will not allow it to be said that this city has fallen behind her sister cities in Western Ontario in showing respect to a man who stands high in the esteem of his fellow countrymen.

The luncheon is under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. but the Canadian Club is seconding the efforts of the Association to get a good representation of business men.

Those who intend to be present ought to make the fact known to the office of the Y.M.C.A. at once so that those in charge will be enabled to make suitable preparations. If you haven't bought your ticket, but it at once.

He intimated that toward the end of this week he expected some action would be taken regarding the affair, from the Campbell Milling Co. He also intimated that the shareholders would be heavy losers. Definite arrangements regarding the disposal of the mill will likely be made later in the week, and will be given. The ony definite action taken at yesterday's meeting, was the creditors being authorized to dispose of the mill.

BRYAN.

William Jennings Bryan, thrice defeated candidate for the presidency of the United States, may have suffered this triple "turn-down" in the interests of a greater usefulness than he could have exercised as constitutional autocrat of ninety-millions of people for four years. He was won notoriety as a politician, but he has won fame as an orator in the highest interests of humanity—the peace of the world. Mr. Bryan could not visit Canada as a politician, but he can come and, with a million welcomes, to speak with an eloquence that only he can command, in the interests of an Association founded upon the teachings of Him who furnishes the subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture under Y.M.C.A. auspices to-morrow night —"The Prince of Peace". The United States is a great generator of platform lecturers and it is doubtful whether among all the great orators it has produced will be found a greater, one more renowned and respected, one higher in character, nobler in ideal, or more eloquent in utterance, than William Jennings Bryan. Mr. Bryan is at present delivering a series of lectures, or rather, perhaps, a similar lecture on a series of occasions, on the subject of universal peace. Those of our citizens who appreciate oratory, will not fail to hear Mr. Jennings Bryan, in the Grand Opera House to-morrow night.

IS IT FINALLY FINAL?

The sentences of the courts of the United States have so habitually a deliberate way of coming into effect, that there is difficulty in estimating what the result of the recent judgment of the Supreme court will be. That august body has found that the Standard Oil Company is a monopoly in restraint of trade and must be dissolved within six months. In view of the wide spread and economically vicious grasp of this trade octopus, a little history of its rise and progress of this tremendous "trust" will be of interest:

The Standard Oil Company in 1865 consisted of a single firm. In 1892 it comprised 84 corporations, with a share capitalization of $100,000,000. The Supreme Court of Ohio in that year declared it illegal, and enjoined it from operating in that state. Thereupon the nine trustees, one of whom was John D. Rockefeller, distributed the stock of 64 of these companies among the other 20, retaining control of the majority of the stock of the 20, and thus continuing to control all the 84 corporations forming the combination.

In 1899 the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which was one of these twenty corporations, was given the legal title to the majority of the stock of the other nineteen corporations, thereby succeeding to the management and control of these nineteen and of the other sixty-four corporations which the nineteen controlled.

At the same time the charter of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was amended to empower it to engage in all kinds of business and to act as a "holding company."

That is just what the Standard Oil Company is to-day—a holding company. It is a corporation holding the stock of the other 83 corporations making up the huge Standard Oil combination. But the control of these constituent companies and of the petroleum business of the country has been just as effective as under the actual trust plan.

To-day the Standard Oil Company and its subsidiary companies manufacture more than three-fourths of all the petroleum refined in the United States, market more than four-fifths of the illuminating oil sold in the United States or exported from the United States, and sell more than nine-tenths of all the lubricating oil purchased by the railways of the United States. In 1906 the par value of the capital stock of the corporations controlled by the combination was more than $150,000,000—the market value being about $750,000,000.

The present suit to dissolve the Trust was begun by the United States Government in a United States Circuit Court in Missouri in 1906. Decision against the company was given in 1909, and an appeal was carried to the Supreme Court, and argued in the early part of 1910. Two members of the latter court having died the same year, the argument was reheard in January of this year.

It is to be hoped that the decision to dissolve the Trust will be final, as it should be, the United States Supreme court, being the country's last resort. But the elasticity of the appeal machinery of the United States is so great that there may be worked an appeal, even from a finally final court decision.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

One advantage of the annexation of the Bahama Islands to Canada would be the possibility it would give us of boasting that Canada is in the banana and pineapple belt.

Mr. Borden is an iconoclast, a despiser of dignities, and a hard-hearted man. He proposes to deprive the senators of hearing the evidence in divorce cases. This is to rob the venerable gentlemen of an inestimable privilege.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux has done a good thing in advancing the salaries of post-office clerks. The duties of clerks are onerous enough without the handicap of insufficient pay, and responsible enough to be worthily rewarded. We cannot consistently growl at a postoffice clerk that puts our letters and parcels into "Jones'" box, if we know that he is working for starvation wages. But if he is well paid we can swear at his lapses with a good conscience.

Her Majesty Queen Mary is skirting dangerous ground when she decrees that ladies' skirts must be worn long enough to touch the ground. Her Majesty is over prudish and practically preaching the doctrine of dirt. Skirts that touch the ground are excellent microbe gatherers. The microbes caught on the bottom hems of skirts that "touch the ground," and shaken and brushed out in sleeping rooms, or dressing rooms, can play on as we sleep. The short skirt for the street is the sensible skirt, the hygenic skirt, the comfortable skirt. The proposal to rule out the boot-top skirt leads to the suspicion that somebody in authority has not a pretty foot and ankle.

FIGHTING THE WHITE PLAGUE.

(Victoria Colonist)

Sir Edward Cassell gave King Edward VII. $1,000,000 absolutely. His Majesty devoted it immediately to the erection of a hospital for consumptives. Recently the people of Wales started a fund for the same purpose, and a million dollars were subscribed in a short time, and this has since been increased to a million and a half.

The proposal is now made in Toronto that a million dollars shall be raised in Canada to be devoted to the erection of an Edward VII. memorial sanitarium for consumptives. The trustees desire subscriptions from the people of Canada generally, and say that the sanitarium will be open to people from all parts of the Dominion.

THE MARKET PLACE.

The merchants of Peterborough are making the Examiner the market place of the community. Each evening a great number of them carry their messages into thousands of homes through the columns of the Examiner.

In the course of each week there is represented in the Examiner the announcements of nearly every prominent merchant in this city, and the goods advertised comprise almost every article needed by the household and every member of it.

To read these announcements each night is practically the same as walking along the principal streets and seeing the bargains advertised in the windows of all the stores.

The Examiner is truly the market place of the community, and many are the men and women who profit largely by reading the advertisements from day to day and buying the merchandise they see advertised at money-saving prices.

A GOOD YEAR FOR THE INTER-COLONIAL.

(Ottawa Free Press)

The year just closed on the Intercolonial Railway is one of the best which the State-owned road has ever experienced. The income reached a total of $9,863,783.40, the highest in the history of the road. Under ordinary circumstances the surplus would have been over $600,000, after the expenditure of very large sums on the improvement of the roadbed, equipment, etc. But the Minister of Railways concluded, however, after a consultation with the Board of Management, that there were certain sums which will be taken out of the balance and used on the line, while other sums might be deducted which otherwise would have to be met out of capital. In addition there was an increase in the pay of the employees which amounted to no less than $56,000

In addition to the $300,000 which is annually put away on renewal equipment account, this year $300,000 more has been placed to the credit of that account, all of which will be spent in new rolling stock; and it is noteworthy that no railway on the continent of America has as great a percentage of new rolling stock purchased out of revenue as has the Intercolonial.

Then the big fire at Campbellton involved a loss to the railway of $76,000, and in addition the minister has established a fire renewal account to which is placed each month $5,000 for the purpose of meeting legitimate small claims for losses by fire. And $12,500 is also laid aside out of the revenue each month for rail renewal.

Yet, despite all these payments for extraordinary losses out of revenue, losses which would, if paid by other railways, be charged to capital, the Minister of Railways is able to announce a surplus for the past fiscal year of $272,712.99.

This is a distinct vindication of Mr. Graham's policy of having the government railways administered by an independent board, and proves that when business principles are applied to the Intercolonial it can be made to pay, and more than pay.

THE FLY.

(Montreal Witness.)

Some time ago the Governor-General wrote to the Mayor of Ottawa, proposing that the school boys should be enlisted in a campaign against the house fly; but the mayor, though his name is Hopewell, did not see sufficient hope in the proposal. There was a time when the house fly was considered a member of the family, a little troublesome, but familiar and cleanly in his ways. It has, however, become known that not only in his nativity in filth, but that he is one of the most effective propagators of disease germs, and that his extermination is imperative. But how to do this? The house fly is everywhere. Rider Haggard describes him as being as much at home in the middle of the Kalahari desert as in the busy haunts of men. It has been calculated that a single pair beginning in April could have a progeny of a hundred and ninety-one million million million (191,000,000,000,000,000,000) by August. We all know how hard it is to catch one fly; so that it would seem a pretty hopeless task to set the boys after them. Yet it may not be so Utopian as it looks. It is very hard to catch a mosquito; yet when it was found that the mosquito was the carrier of malaria and yellow fever, effective means were found by drying wet places, by filling them with water and stocking them with fish, or by covering ponds and marshes with oil very effectively to get rid of the criminal insector. Why should not the same line of warfare be followed with the now convicted and condemned house fly? His modes of breeding are known, and can be more or less controlled.

A professor in the United States got an idea from his little boy, who objected to the restrictions of fly netting all about the house, and who asked his father why should not the flies be put in prison and people let out. It is known that the flies find their way to garbage by smell and not by sight, and that garbage has an invincible attraction for them. The fly will find its way through any crack into an otherwise tight garbage can to deposit its eggs, and will then seek the light. Let it reach the light by way of a trap, and pretty much all the breeding flies will be caught. The garbage, when disposed of, would need to be incinerated forwith, not dumped for future house foundations. It takes only ten days for the creature to develop from the egg through all its changes to the perfect fly. It takes a fortnight more of feeding before the fly lays eggs. Were there such a fly trap near every house it is thought the fly nuisance would soon be a thing of the past. The time of the year to do it is now, for every pair slain now means a potential billion, more or less, in summer. A plan is offered for stable cellars, which are the greatest breeding places for flies. The first rule about stables is that the manure should be removed and put into the soil twice a week. This would double its value. Where this is not done, there should be a window of wire netting on the receptacle with a trap on each side of it. The flies will rise from the manure in swarms and will find their way to such window, and can be led by guiding strips of wood or tin into a hole near the top that leads to the trap. The breeding flies guided by the smell, will return to the same window, and can be similarly guided to a trap on the other side. It is thought that the hunting instincts of boys could be very well enlisted in this public service in connection with their nature study class.

WOMEN INVENTORS

A Few Patents Which Have Brought Wealth to Some of Them

A few have done so. One woman patented a contrivance for trimming the bottom of dress-skirts so they would hang evenly—a great boon to the home dressmaker. Another suggested to her husband, who was mechanically inclined, that the thermometer on the outside of an oven really told nothing about the heat inside; what the oven needed was a heat valve—some arrangement whereby an aperture in the oven would automatically open when there was too much heat, thus maintaining the correct temperature for baking bread.

He perfected the idea, patented it, and has profited largely through its sale.

Another woman, after many unsuccessful efforts to find a corset that would adjust itself to her corpulent figure, discovered the lack that had not been provided for by corset-makers, and set about designing one to suit herself. She perfected her plan, found it a great comfort, patented the idea, and is to-day at the head of a large factory where these special corsets are made. An invalid husband had reduced her to sewing by the day for a living for both before she thought of her new corset.

Another woman discovered through experiment a food mixture that made her hens lay. She gave it a name, patented it, and put it on the market with the greatest success. Another compounded a disinfectant that killed insect life in her chicken-house, and that also proved efficacious for use in hospitals and homes following infectious illness. This was patented, and is now sold in large quantities.

ALL THE DIFFERENCE

How an Old Gentleman Got Even With a Spiritualist

An old gentleman, apparently from the country, one day entered the room of a medium and expressed a desire for a "spirit communication." He was told to take a seat at the table and to write the names of his deceased relatives. The medium, like many others, incorrectly pronounced the term "deceased" the same as "diseased," sounding the s like x. The old gentleman carefully adjusted his "specs" and did what was required of him. A name and relationship having been selected from those written, the investigator was desired to examine and state if they referred to one party.

"I declare they do!" said he. "But I say, mister, what has them papers to do with a spirit communication?"

"You will see directly," replied the medium. Whereupon the latter spasmodically wrote a "communication" which read somewhat as follows:—

"My Dear Husband,—I am very glad to be able to address you through this channel. Keep on investigating, and you will soon be convinced of the fact of spirit intercourse. I am happy in my spirit home, patiently awaiting the time when you will join me here, etc. —Your loving wife, Betsy."

"Good gracious! But my old woman can't be dead," said the investigator, "for I left her at home!"

"Not dead!" exclaimed the medium. "Did I not tell you to write the names of 'deceased' relatives?"

"Diseased!" returned the old man; "she ain't anything else, for she's had the rumatis orfully for six months!"

"WINNIE'S" PAPER TRIANGLES

Little Mannerisms of Winston Churchill While in the House

Great men, like humbler folk, have their little mannerisms, and Mr. Winston Churchill's, as one would expect, is distinctive and interesting. It is really a schoolboy trick. Mr. Churchill takes a single sheet of the House of Commons Order Paper, dampens the thumb and forefinger with his lips, rolls the paper tightly, commencing at the corner, and then bends it first in the centre and next some few inches from the ends, which he intersects, and thus forms a perfect triangle. This he twirls on his finger, or sometimes on a pen or pencil, and then thrusts it beneath the Treasury Bench and commences the operation again. Sometimes he makes as many as a round half-dozen of these triangles at a time, with a rapidity of construction quite remarkable. A triangle is often made, twirled, and discarded in less than a minute.

ATE 144 EGGS FOR BREAKFAST.

Sam Miller, a resident of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, has issued a challenge to the world at large to compete with him in an eating contest. He declares that he will eat more in a given time than any other man living. Miller declares that his record as an eater has never been equalled. According to the New York Herald he once ate 144 fried eggs for breakfast. In a pie-eating contest he disposed of forty-eight ten cent pies. His latest feat was that of eating five chickens and fifty waffles, and drinking four quarts of coffee while the cooks prepared more food.

THE HOME OF THE NAVY

HALIFAX ONCE MORE COMES IN TO HER OWN.

The Ancient Port and Dockyards Made Famous as the Temporary Home of Great English Seamen Is Now Training Admirals — Days of War With France Were Busy Ones in the Naval Depot.

The Halifax dockyard, once famous in the annals of Britain's conquests, has again resumed importance as a naval base, says W. H. Dennis in The Globe. With the arrival of the cruiser Niobe, the first vessel in the east to form the nucleus of the Canadian Navy, and the fitting up of the Naval Hospital as a college for the training of cadets, this once noted naval yard has taken on a little of its old-time activity. When the American colonies that now form the United States revolted from the mother country the Halifax dockyard became the only naval base on this side of the Atlantic. But even the days of the revolution had been the rendezvous of the famous expedition that gathered for the conquest of Louisburg and Quebec.

Here Boscowen and Sir Charles Hardy refreshed their fleet and waited the coming of Gen. Amherst, preparatory to their famous attack on the Dunkirk of America, and a year afterwards Admiral Saunders and Gen. Wolfe sailed out of the harbor to the conquest of Quebec. The most celebrated names connected with the naval warfare appear in the records of this yard. On two tablets until recently in the Admiralty House, Halifax, are inscribed the names of many of the most distinguished Admirals of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

In the old troubled days when war vexed Europe and America, there were stirring times in Halifax. The harbor thronged with ships of war, or valuable prizes captured from the enemy. A great number of people found employment in the dockyard as shipwrights, sail-cars, smiths and riggers. British men-of-war and captured French frigates had to be repaired, after hot battles on the high seas, and in war times a large staff of mechanics was constantly engaged in this work.

"Halifax Yard, Sept. 3, 1806.

"Memo:

"The blacksmiths to be employed from 5 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night, (Signed) "John N. Ingleteed,

"Commissioner, H.M. Navy Yard."

And again we find a reference to the activity in the yard on Feb. 13, 1801. Elias Marshall, master shipwright, and J. Jackson, master-at-arms, report to Sir William Parker concerning the erection of buildings in the dockyard. They report that they could not be erected on account of scarcity of men, caused by employment on the hospital.

In old days the piers and jetties of the dockyard echoed to the songs of the jolly jack-tars that have made the story of Great Britain's prowess upon the seas a world-stirring drama. Famous captains have passed in and out of its pillared gates; have married and lived within its walls. Nelson's renowned captains have given their orders to the master shipwrights after hulls and riggings of their ships had encountered the storm of battle or felt the fury of the elements.

On Nov. 17, 1807, a fashionable wedding took place at Halifax which constituted one of the interests in local society circles of that time. Sir Thomas Hardy, one of Nelson's famous captains, had arrived in Halifax in October, after his ship, the Triumph, with some of the North American fleet, had been engaged watching a number of the French men-of-war shut up in Chesapeake Bay. When the gallant captain, under orders from his chief, Admiral Sir George Cranfield Berkeley, was ordered to Halifax to refit and repair he little dreamed that at Halifax dockyard he was fated to meet his future wife, in the person of the charming daughter of the commander of the North American station. The brave commander of the Triumph, then 38 years of age, was not long in port before he surrendered to the charms of Miss Louise Emily Berkeley, daughter of Admiral Berkeley, and granddaughter of Lord Fennox.

The naval hospital, which is being fitted up to receive the naval cadets, and which is to be the college, is a plain brick building situated at the north extremity of the yard. The building is not very old, being built about the early sixties of the last century. The first hospital for sick and disabled seamen was built during the period of the American revolution. It was destroyed by fire in the early years of the nineteenth century.

It is more than thirty years since the last wooden three-decker met its fate at a ship breaker's hands in Halifax. That ship was the Pyramus, and had long outlasted its companions, having served as a floating magazine at the dockyard. To what ship the figurehead at Halifax belonged is not known, and tradition says nothing of its history. It is the only remnant left of the stirring days when Great Britain's fleet fought in many parts of the world.

The naval officials in the yard, with one or two exceptions, are English naval officers. Captain Martin holds the position of Commander of the Yard, Commander of the Naval College, and Commander of the cruiser Canada. The Canada has been the flagship of the Canadian fishery protection fleet, and has always been considered on royal navy lines. She is, strictly speaking, the pioneer ship of the Canadian navy. All her officers are Englishmen.

Stops Itching Heals the Skin

And Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Skin Diseases

These Results You Can Be Sure of When You Use

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Quick and certain are the effects of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Itching is stopped almost as soon as it is applied. The sores are cleaned out, morbid growth is arrested, and the healing process is soon set in action.

Compare these results with the tediousness and uncertainty of internal treatment for itching skin disease. By all means look after the health of the blood and the system generally, but get rid of the annoying and torturing skin ailment at once by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The reputation of Dr. Chase's Ointment has been made by its marvellous success in the cure of eczema and piles. But it is just as effective in the cure of old sores and wounds which have defied ordinary treatments and been given up by doctors.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is prized by mothers as a treatment for the skin troubles of babies, such as chafing, skin irritation, scald head and baby eczema. Its soothing influence stops the itching, and it prevents the development of eczema from these lesser skin troubles.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes that Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her boy of eczema when his head was a mass of scabs, and he suffered untold agony from the itching. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Bull, Anyway.

Lord Beaconsfield is alleged to have once informed a young author "that he would lose no time in reading his book," with which statement the young man was perfectly satisfied. In the same way sometimes, says the Parliamentary reporter of The Ottawa Free Press, the Minister of Public Works, realising that "a soft answer turneth away wrath," sometimes comforts members of the Opposition with a similar double-edged statement.

It was "just the time you ought to go to bed," the other night when one of the longest-winded and strongest-jawed members of the Opposition rose to his feet and asked the Minister to promise to prepare plans for a certain postoffice. It was either a soft answer or a flood of eloquence lasting till two o'clock in the morning. The whole House waited in suspense to see whether the Minister could dam that flood.

"Ah," said Mr. Pugsley, "I can assure the honorable member that no time shall be lost in preparing these plans."

The member was satisfied and the day was saved.

There, with myriads of others, are a few of the humors of the House of Commons—the school for politicians.

Smoking Before Meals.

People will persist in smoking, even after they have read the following from that eminent authority, the London Lancet:

Smoking just before meals is to be deprecated, because the pungency of the pyroligneous products contained in tobacco smoke renders the buccal mucosa insensitive to alimentary stimulation. In fact, the effect is to dull or abolish the olfacto-gustatory reflex thus depriving us of what Pawlow calls "appetite juice."

Self Confidence.

"Do you believe in all the views you advocate?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, after some hesitation, "I do, but I doubt whether a less skillful reasoner than myself would be able to convince me of the correctness of some of them."—Washington Star.

His Conclusion.

TREATY PROGRESSING.

Draft of Arbitration Pact Approved by U. S. Cabinet.

Washington, May 17.—The proposed treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain has at last reached the stage where it is to be presented to the British Government for its approval.

Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, after the Cabinet met yesterday [illegible] his conference with President Taft, during which certain points in the treaty was thoroughly discussed. This was the first conference which these two supposing of permanent importance had since the President announced his intention of negotiating with Great Britain for such treaty.

State Department officials have been constantly at work upon the treaty and yesterday Secretary Knox presented to the Cabinet for its approval a tentative draft. Apparently it was most satisfactory to the President and his official family as a whole.

Secretary Knox, after the Cabinet meeting, announced that the tentative draft probably would be submitted to-day to Ambassador Bryce for transmission to the British foreign Office.

Exchange of Notes between the two nations will follow. When the draft is accepted by both countries, the treaty will be signed and submitted to the United States Senate for approval and ratification.

STARVED TO DEATH.

Story of Tragedy of Fitzgerald and Men Reaches Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 17.—A pathetic tale of suffering, heroic with fortitude and patience, culminating in the death from starvation in the northern wilds, of Inspector Fitzgerald and three other members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force, was related to Col. Wm. White, comptroller, in the form of a report from Corpl. Dempster of Dawson, Yukon, who was sent out to investigate the tragedy.

There is no little pathos in the report, which includes a diary of Inspector Fitzgerald for the ten days preceding the slowly and grimly approaching death. In a will of 22 words, written with a burnt twig, the inspector left all his possessions to his mother, ending the document with the words "God bless all."

The theory that the party lost their trail and were compelled to eat their dogs and eventually starved was all too true. The official diary discloses the whole story. It is heart-rending in its extreme. Inspector Fitzgerald's last words were written Sunday, Feb. 5, stating that the men were forced to eat their dogs while staring death and starvation in the face, reveals some conception of the awful outlook confronting the party on the last day.

CANNOT APPEAL.

Judge's Order for Anti-Combine Inquiry Is Final.

Montreal, May 17.—That there is no appeal from an order of a judge directing an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act of Canada, is the effect of a judgment given in the Court of Appeal yesterday by Mr. Justice Cross, and supported by the other [illegible]

It was in the case of the United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Drouin Metal; and on account of the precedent which it establishes it was awaited with interest by a host of lawyers and industrial interests.

The result of the judgment is that the investigation into the United Shoe Machinery Co.'s alleged combine may be continued, as originally ordered by a judge of the Superior Court.

It was announced later, however, that the United Shoe Machinery Co. would immediately carry the case to the Privy Council. This will mean that the three commissioners appointed to carry out the investigation into the so-called combine will [illegible] to make a move for some time to any event.

"A Storm In a Teacup."

London, May 17.—Frank Lascelles, master of the Festival of the Empire pageant, in an interview yesterday with reference to the strictures in the Canadian Parliament because of the omission of the battle of the Chateauguay, said that it was a storm in a teacup. The abandonment of the scene, he asserted, was not due to [illegible] American feeling, but the result of conclusion reached by the Canadian committee that the episode was not typical of Canadian life.

Reverse For the G.T.R.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 17.—Circuit Court Judge McDonald, yesterday rendered an opinion denying the demurrer of the defendants in the case of the State of Michigan against the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railway Co. (Grand Trunk).

In this suit the state seeks to collect about $2,000,000 alleged to be due in back taxes.

Attorneys for the company announced an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Called in the Police.

Kingston, May 17.—The police have been called on to quell a labor disturbance. Masons' laborers on strike endeavored to get a couple of men off a job at Moore's garage, but when the police arrived the men mercifully left. Union men were also ordered away from another job on a William street house. The strike has not yet been settled. The contractors declare they will not give the laborers an increase of 5 cents. They at present get 20c.

Jumped From Train Window.

Kingston, May 17.—Giving Immigration Inspector Devlin to understand he was asleep, Hugo Tschirch jumped out of the window of a G.T.R. train at Outer Junction at 3 o'clock yesterday morning and escaped. He was being deported from Montreal to St. Louis.

Almost Asphyxiated.

Kingston, May 17.—Gas escaping from a coal stove almost killed Mrs Harold Timmerman, her four children and Robert Knowles and his wife. Knowles, although deathly sick, awoke in time to get a doctor, and the others came around all right.

IT GROWS HAIR

Here Are Facts We Want You to Prove at Our Risk

Marvelous as it may seem, Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course, in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which are usually responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet necessity, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum nor permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed. If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give entire satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

DR. BOYLE'S EARLY CAREER.

His Advice to the Woman With Special Views on Discipline.

The late Dr. David Boyle, the veteran archeologist, left a splendid monument to himself in the Ontario Provincial Museum, which he brought to its present state of perfection, but he also left another similar monument which is not so well known. When Dr. Boyle taught in the little village school at Elora, he had the same enthusiasm for research and folk-lore which afterwards proved so valuable to the province. Before he went to Toronto to start his large work, he had already gathered together stories enough to make an excellent little museum in the Western Ontario village. One room of the school where he taught was then devoted to it, but it has since been enlarged and removed to more commodious quarters.

Dr. Boyle was always a most enterprising citizen, and he suggested many ways of making use of the natural beauties of the village. As a schoolmaster, he was known far and wide as a disciplinarian, but many stories are also told of his wit. Some of his old pupils recall his encounter with the village virago, who could be silenced by no one, according to general public belief. The schoolmaster had punished one of her children, and as she retained that privilege for herself, she appeared upon the scene to protest. He allowed her to run along till a great falls till her vocal chords was almost exhausted. She devoted her energy chiefly to announcing that she was strongly opposed to corporal punishment, and that she wished him to remember it.

At last Dr. Boyle got a word in, and he asked simply, "Well, how do you think I should punish children when they will not behave?"

"I send them to bed," replied the [illegible]

"All right, madam," said the future curator of the Provincial Museum with a composure which completely disconcerted her, "if you will send down a couple of bedsteads, I shall be delighted to try the form of discipline which you find most effective with your children."

The woman beat a retreat.—Saturday Night.

The Job Higher Up.

F. H. McGuigan, the ex-railway man who undertook the contract for Ontario's hydro-electric power line, is a big Irishman of warm heart and quick temper. There are probably good grounds for the rumor that McGuigan called Jim Hill something stronger than "blighter," and that he used a similar word to a member of the Ontario Cabinet who tried to meddle too much with the hydro-electric department. Mr. McGuigan probably owes much of his success to keeping an eye on "the job higher up," a trait which is illustrated by an incident of his boyhood which is frequently related with gusto by his friends.

"Mac" McGuigan was employed at the time in carrying water for a gang of men engaged in railway construction somewhere in the [illegible] Thomas neighborhood. In this humble capacity he began his career as a railroader. A stirring was threatened among the men, and one of the engineers imparted to the boy the information that he might soon be out of a job.

"No, I won't, for I'll get yours," came back young McGuigan like a flash.

The engineer laughed. "I'd just like to bet you run this engine," he said scornfully.

"I'll show you," persisted the water-carrier, and he did. There was little about the engine that he did not know. He could run it backward or forward, slow or fast. He had been simply keeping his eyes open, qualifying for "the job higher up."

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Wheat prices made free selling in the last half of the session to-day. The decline was coincident with talk by a prominent operator that crop prospects in this country might be better, and that a full 50c per bushel from present values might easily take place. Closing figures were 1¼ cents net lower to ¼ down. Corn finished ¼ off to a shade higher, and oats changed to ¼c to ⅜c higher. Provisions lost prices to 10c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d to ⅝d higher than Saturday, on spot wheat and ⅛d higher on corn. Antwerp closed firm ⅛c to ¼c higher. Berlin closed unchanged.

TREATY PROGRESSING.

Draft of Arbitration Pact Approved by U. S. Cabinet.

Washington, May 17.—The proposed treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain has at last reached the stage where it is to be presented to the British Government for its approval.

Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, when the Cabinet met yesterday, had a half-hour conference with President Taft, during which certain points in the treaty was thoroughly discussed. This was the first conference which these two gentlemen of permanent peace have had since the President announced his intention of negotiating with Great Britain for such treaty.

State Department officials have been constantly at work upon the treaty and yesterday Secretary Knox presented to the Cabinet for its approval a tentative draft. Apparently it was most satisfactory to the President and his official family as a whole.

Secretary Knox, after the Cabinet meeting, announced that the tentative draft probably would be submitted to-day to Ambassador Bryce for transmission to the British foreign office.

Exchange of dates between the two nations will follow. When the draft is accepted by both countries, the treaty will be signed and submitted to the United States Senate for approval and ratification.

STARVED TO DEATH.

Story of Tragedy of Fitzgerald and Men Reaches Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 17.—A pathetic tale of suffering, horror with fortitude and patience, culminating in the death from starvation in the northern wilds, of Inspector Fitzgerald and three other members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police force, was received by Col. Wm. White, comptroller, in the form of a report from Corpl. Dempster of Dawson, Yukon, who was sent out to investigate the tragedy.

There is no little pathos in the report, which includes a diary of Inspector Fitzgerald for the ten days preceding the slowly and grimly approaching death. In a will of 23 words, written with a burnt twig, the inspector left all his possessions to his mother, ending the document with the words "God bless all."

The theory that the party lost their trail and were compelled to eat their dogs and eventually starved was all too true. The official diary discloses the whole story. It is heart-rending in the extreme. Inspector Fitzgerald's last words were written Sunday, Feb. 5, stating that the men were forced to eat their dogs while staring death and starvation in the face, reveals some conception of the awful outlook confronting the party on the last day.

CANNOT APPEAL.

Judge's Order for Anti-Combine Inquiry is Final.

Montreal, May 17.—That there is no appeal from an order of a judge directing an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act of Canada, is the effect of a judgment given in the Court of Appeal yesterday by Mr. Justice Cross, and supported by the other judges on the bench.

It was in the case of the United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Drouin Metal, and on account of the precedent which it establishes it was awaited with interest by a host of lawyers and industrial interests.

The result of the judgment is that the investigation into the United Shoe Machinery Co.'s alleged combine "combine" may be continued, as originally ordered by a judge of the Superior Court.

It was announced later, however, that the United Shoe Machinery Co. would immediately carry the case to the Privy Council. This will mean that the three commissioners appointed to carry out the investigation into the so-called combine will not be able to make a move for some time, in any event.

"A Storm in a Teacup."

London, May 17.—Frank Lascelles, master of the Festival of the Empire pageant, in an interview yesterday with reference to the strictures in the Canadian Parliament because of the omission of the battle of the Chateauguay, said that it was a storm in a teacup. The abandonment of the scene, he asserted, was not due to lack of American feeling, but the result of conclusion reached by the Canadian committee that the episode was not typical of Canadian life.

Reverse For the G.T.R.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 17.—Circuit Court Judge McDonald, yesterday rendered an option denying the demurrer of the defendants in the case of the State of Michigan against the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Railway Co. (Grand Trunk).

In this suit the state seeks to collect about $2,000,000 alleged to be due in back taxes.

Attorneys for the company announced an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Called In the Police.

Kingston, May 17.—The police have been called on to quell a labor disturbance. Masons' laborers on strike endeavored to get a couple of men off a job at Moore's garage, but when the police arrived the men moved off. Union men were also ordered away from another job on a William street house. The strike has not yet been settled. The contractors declare they will not give the laborers an increase of 5c cents. They at present get 25.

Jumped From Train Window.

Kingston, May 17.—Giving Immigration Inspector Devlin to understand he was asleep, Hugo Tschirch jumped out of the window of a G.T.R. train at Outer Junction at 3 o'clock yesterday morning and escaped. He was being deported from Montreal to St. Louis.

Almost Asphyxiated.

Kingston, May 17.—Gas escaping from a coal stove almost killed Mrs Harold Timmerman, her four children and Robert Knowles and his wife, Knowles, although deathly sick, awoke in time to get a doctor, and the others came around all right.

DR. BOYLE'S EARLY CAREER.

The late Dr. David Boyle, the veteran archaeologist, left a splendid monument to himself in the Ontario Provincial Museum, which he brought to its present state of perfection, but he also left another similar monument which is not so well known. When Dr. Boyle taught in the little village school at Elora, he had the same enthusiasm for research and talk-less which afterwards proved so valuable to the province. Before he went to Toronto to start his larger work, he had already gathered together stories enough to make an excellent little museum in the Ontario Normal. One room of the school where he taught was then devoted to it, but it has since been enlarged and removed to more commodious quarters.

Dr. Boyle was always a most enterprising citizen, and he suggested many ways of making use of the natural beauties of the village. As a schoolmaster, he was known far and wide as a disciplinarian, but many stories are also told of his wit. Some of his old pupils recall his encounter with the village virago, who could be silenced by no one, according to general public belief. The schoolmaster had punished one of her children, and as she retained that privilege for herself, she appeared upon the scene to protest. He allowed her to run along for a great rate till her vocal powers was almost exhausted. She devoted her energy chiefly to announcing that she was strongly opposed to corporal punishment, and that she wished him to remember it.

At last Dr. Boyle got a word in, and he asked, simply, "Well, how do you think I should punish children when they will not behave?"

"I send them to bed," replied the woman.

"It right, madam," said the future curator of the Provincial Museum with a composure which completely disconcerted her, "I pon will send down a couple of bedsteads, I shall be delighted to try the form of discipline which you find most effective with your children."

The woman beat a retreat.—Saturday Night.

The Job Higher Up.

F. H. McGuigan, the ex-railway man who undertook the contract for Ontario's hydro-electric power line, is a big Irishman of warm heart and quick temper. There are probably good grounds for the rumor that McGuigan called Jim Hill something stronger than "blatther," and that he used a similar word to a member of the Ontario Cabinet who tried to meddle too much with the hydro-electric department. Mr. McGuigan probably owes much of his success to keeping an eye on "the job higher up," a trait which is illustrated by an incident of his boyhood which is frequently related with gusto by his friends.

The McGuigan was employed at the time in carrying water for a gang of men engaged in railway construction somewhere in the St. Thomas neighborhood. In this humble capacity he began his career as a railroader. A strike was threatened among the men, and one of the engineers imparted to the boy the information that he might soon be out of a job.

"No, I won't, for I'll get yours," came back young McGuigan like a flash.

The engineer laughed. "I'd just like to see you run this engine," he said scornfully.

"I'll show you," persisted the water-carrier, and he did. There was little about the engine that he did not know. He could run it backward or forward, slow or fast. He had been simply keeping his eyes open, qualifying for "the job higher up."

THE HOME OF THE NAVY

HALIFAX ONCE MORE COMES INTO HER OWN.

The Ancient Port and Dockyards Made Famous as the Temporary Home of Great English Seamen Is Now Training Admirals — Days of War With France Were Busy Ones in the Naval Depot.

The Halifax dockyrd, once famous in the annals of Britain's conquests, has again resumed importance as a naval base, says W. H. Dennis in The Globe. With the arrival of the cruiser Niobe, the first vessel in the east to form the nucleus of the Canadian Navy, and the fitting up of the Naval Hospital as a college for the training of cadets, this once-noted naval yard has taken on a little of its old-time activity. When the American colonies that now form the United States revolted from the mother country the Halifax dockyard became the only naval base on this side of the Atlantic. But before the days of the revolution Halifax had been the rendezvous of the famous expedition that gathered for the conquest of Louisburg and Quebec.

Here Boscowen and Sir Charles Hardy refreshed their fleet and waited the coming of Gen. Amherst, preparatory to their famous attack on the Dunkirk of America, and a year afterwards Admiral Saunders and Gen. Wolfe sailed out of the harbor to the conquest of Quebec. The most celebrated names connected with the naval warfare appear in the records of this yard. On two tablets until recently in the Admiralty House, Halifax, are inscribed the names of many of the most distinguished Admirals of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

In the old troubled days when war vexed Europe and America, there were stirring times in Halifax. The harbor thronged with ships of war, or valuable prizes captured from the enemy. A great number of people found employment in the dockyard as shipwrights, caulkers, smiths and riggers. British men-of-war and captured French frigates had to be repaired, after hot battles on the high seas, and in war times a large staff of mechanics was constantly engaged in this work.

"Halifax Yard, Sept. 4, 1805.

"Memo:

"The blacksmiths to be employed from 5 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night.

(Signed) "John N. Inglefield,

"Commissioner, H.M. Navy Yard."

And again we find a reference to the activity in the yard on Feb. 13, 1808. Elias Marshall, master shipwright, and J. Jackson, master-at-arms, report to Sir William Parker concerning the erection of buildings in the dockyard. They report that they could not be erected on account of scarcity of men, caused by employment on the hospital.

In old days the piers and jetties of the dockyard echoed to the songs of the jolly jack-tars that have made the story of Great Britain's prowess upon the seas a world-stirring drama. Famous captains have passed in and out of its pillared gates; have married and lived within its walls. Nelson's renowned captains have given their orders to the master shipwrights after hulls and riggings of their ships had encountered the storm of battle or felt the fury of the elements.

On Nov. 17, 1807, a fashionable wedding took place at Halifax which constituted one of the interests in local society circles of that time. Sir Thomas Hardy, one of Nelson's famous captains, had arrived in Halifax in October, after his ship, the Tri-umph, with some of the North American fleet, had been engaged watching a number of the French men-of-war shut up in Chesapeake Bay. When the gallant captain, under orders from his chief, Admiral Sir George Grinfield Berkeley, was ordered to Halifax to refit and repair he little dreamed that at Halifax dockyard he was fated to meet his future wife, in the person of the charming daughter of the commander of the North American station. The brave commander of the Triumph, then 28 years of age, was not long in port before he surrendered to the charms of Miss Louise Emily Berkeley, daughter of Admiral Berkeley, and granddaughter of Lord Fennox.

The naval hospital, which is being fitted up to receive the naval cadets, and which is to be the college, is a plain brick building situated at the north extremity of the yard. The building is not very old, being built about the early sixties of the last century. The first hospital for sick and disabled seamen was built during the period of the American revolution. It was destroyed by fire in the early years of the nineteenth century.

It is more than thirty years since the last wooden three-decker met its fate at a ship breaker's hands in Halifax. That ship was the Pyramus, and had long outlasted its companions, having served as a floating magazine at the dockyard. To what ship the figurehead at Halifax belonged is not known, and tradition says nothing of its history. It is the only remnant left of the stirring days when Great Britain's fleet fought in many parts of the world.

The naval officials in the yard, with one or two exceptions, are English naval officers. Captain Martin holds the position of Commander of the Yard, Commander of the Naval College, and Commander of the cruiser Canada. The Canada has been the flagship of the Canadian fishery protection fleet, and has always been conducted on royal navy lines. She is, strictly speaking, the pioneer ship of the Canadian navy. All her officers are Englishmen.

Steps Itching Heals the Skin

And Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Skin Diseases

These Results You Can Be Sure of When You Use

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Quick and certain are the effects of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Itching is stopped almost as soon as it is applied. The sores are cleaned out, morbid growth is arrested, and the healing process is soon set in action.

Compare these results with the tediousness and uncertainty of internal treatment for itching skin disease. By all means look after the health of the blood and the system generally, but get rid of the annoying and torturing skin ailment at once by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The reputation of Dr. Chase's Ointment has been made by its marvellous success in the cure of eczema and piles. But it is just as effective in the cure of old sores and wounds which have defied ordinary treatments and been given up by doctors.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is prized by mothers as a treatment for the skin troubles of babies, such as chafing, skin irritation, scald head and baby eczema. Its soothing influence stops the itching, and it prevents the development of eczema from these lesser skin troubles.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes that Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her boy of eczema when his head was a mass of scabs, and he suffered untold agony from the itching. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Bar, Answers.

Lord Beaconsfield is alleged to have once informed a young author "that he would lose no time in reading his book," with which statement the young man was perfectly satisfied. In the same way sometimes, says the Parliamentary reporter of The Ottawa Free Press, the Minister of Public Works, realising that "a soft answer turneth away wrath," sometimes comforts members of the Opposition with a similar double-edged statement.

It was "just the time you ought to go to bed," the other night when one of the longest-winded and strongest-jawed members of the Opposition rose to his feet and asked the Minister to promise to prepare plans for a certain postoffice. It was either a soft answer or a flood of eloquence lasting till two o'clock in the morning. The whole House waited in suspense to see whether the Minister could dam that flood.

"Ah," said Mr. Pugsley, "I can assure the honorable member that no time shall be lost in preparing those plans."

The member was satisfied and the day was saved.

These, with myriads of others, are a few of the humors of the House of Commons—the school for politicians.

Smoking Before Meals.

People will persist in smoking, even after they have read the following from that eminent authority, the London Lancet:

Smoking just before meals is to be deprecated, because the pungency of the pyrolignous products contained in tobacco smoke renders the buccal mucous insensitive to alimentary stimulation. In fact, the effect is to dull or abolish the olfacto-gustatory reflex, thus depriving us of what Pawlow calls "appetite juice."

Self Confidence.

"Do you believe in all the views you advocate?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, after some hesitation, "I do, but I doubt whether a less skillful reasoner than myself would be able to convince me of the correctness of some of them."—Washington Star.

we hope to work harmoniously for the best interests of our city.

Our membership is not as large as it should be and I would urge every business and professional man should see every possible opportunity of this city to join the Board of Trade, attend the meetings and take part in the discussions. Besides the privilege of every citizen who becomes a member of the Board of Trade. How much more good can be done by meeting together, discussing and listening to the discussions of trade, important questions, getting the information first-handed and correct, than can be obtained by staying at home and 'knocking' afterwards.

Permit me to thank you for the support you have given me during my two years as president.

In closing I wish to assist my successor, whom you will appoint tonight, of my cooperation in making the Peterborough Board of Trade a strong and useful body for the welfare of our city.

G. A. GILLESPIE,
President.

A communication was read from the Peterborough and Lake Simcoe Navigation Company suggesting that the Board of Trade might, with advantage to the city's best interests, issue a folder descriptive of the Kawartha Lakes.

It was moved by Mr. Robt. Fair and seconded by Mr. Dodds, that the letter be approved of and forwarded to the Council.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mr. Vincent Westwood, Vice-President, Mr. O'Connell. The question of appointing a new secretary to replace Mr. Quarrington, who has resigned, was left over until the next meeting. Mr. Campbell was re-appointed treasurer.

Messrs. O'Donnell, Dobbin, Dodd, Gillespie were appointed as a committee to strike committees for the ensuing year.

A resolution was then forwarded to the press, thanking them for their kindly support during the past year. Vote was graciously received.

It was also moved that the thanks of the Board of Trade be forwarded to the Mayor and Council for the use of the Council chamber.

Mr. Morris then referred to the serious difference that had arisen between the Board of Trade and the City Council relative to the dismissal of Industrial Commissioner Duggan.

Mr. Dodds in reply, drew attention to the glowing tribute that had been paid to Mr. Duggan's efficient services by C. P. R. Industrial Commissioner Timmerman, during his recent visit here, and he heartily endorsed the above resolution.

In regard to the meeting of the Board of Trade to be held in the Collegiate Institute if possible, next Tuesday night and to be addressed by Mr. Ryerson Ritchie. Mr. Fair thought that a night preceding a public holiday would not be conducive to a large gathering.

On account of Mr. Ritchie being a resident of the city, it was decided to have the president confer with Mr. Ritchie with a view to having the date changed.

The meeting then adjourned.

ECZEMA AND SORE LEGS

"My daughter suffered terribly from inflamed legs and eczema on her hands," writes Mrs. A. J. Leaf, Fort Frederick, N.S. "The child was in a bad state and suffered constantly. The doctor failed to help her, and we were recommended a trial of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which effected a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

WATROUS, IDEAL EASTERN SASKATCHEWAN TOWN SITE

WATROUS, MAY 16. — One of the most ideal townsites along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway is the town of Watrous in eastern Saskatchewan. This thriving town is but a little over three years old, having been founded when the line of railway was constructed. Watrous has grown from a thought in one's imagination to a beautiful and prosperous town of 1,500 population, in a little more than three years.

Watrous is known all over Canada and town lots in this progressive town are selling rapidly. Located as it is, in one of the richest agricultural districts of Saskatchewan, it is little wonder that its well-known natural resources are its best recommendation by investors, in its development, is the best evidence of its merits. If sales of land continue, as in the last few months, Watrous will within two years, be one of the foremost cities in Saskatchewan. Land values have increased beyond the wildest imagination, and within a few months values have risen many times their original cost.

Picturesque Location.

Watrous is located most picturesquely. Little Manitou Lake is directly to the north of the town, leaving sufficient space between the railroad and the shore of the lake, for the town to grow. Little Manitou Lake is widely renowned as a most beautiful and healthful summer resort. It is fifteen miles long and two miles wide. It contains a wonderful medicinal water. An analysis of which demonstrates that it contains a high percentage of salts, and closely resembles the famous Hunyadi Janos. It is highly valuable for the treatment of skin diseases and rheumatism, and of great value for many medicinal purposes. Some wonderful cures have been effected by the use of this water, and it is highly valued and recommended by physicians as a stimulant. Surrounding the lake at various places is a most luxuriant growth of trees, among which many cottages are erected. During the hot summer months residents of Saskatoon, Edmonton, Winnipeg and other Canadian cities seek recreation and comfort along the banks of Lake Manitou. Reports are located at a number of places along the lake and many more cottages are in the course of erection, which in a month or two will be occupied by colonies of cottagers.

Sanitarium is Proposed.

A syndicate of citizens of Winnipeg are about to erect a large sanitarium on the shores of Lake Manitou. Plans for this sanitarium are now being considered and it is hoped that the work of construction will commence soon. With the excellent railway accommodation afforded by the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, a more desirable and ideal spot for a sanitarium could not be found. With the advantage afforded by a growing town like Watrous, this site constitutes a most excellent and convenient summer resort. From the Winnipeg Telegram.

KEEPING YOUNG

Ointment to Ward Off Age—Often 30 Years

Two noted scientists, by experiments on animals, have proved that youthfulness depends on the thyroid gland. Add that something to eats seems to feed that gland.

It appears that old age can be deferred many years by caring for this gland. The main care is to feed it, and the proper food is nuts.

Nuts contain much energy food, many feed for the brain, more food for the nerves, necessary oil to give skin grace. And now it has another nerve-and-brain-power-keeping use.

But common nonsense hasn't shed enough for such an announcement. That weighty, flaky grains, plenty are used in the making of Quaker Oats. The finest oats are selected by 62 millers, and only the plumpest are considered prime enough.

Quaker Oats cost you but the extra cost of the oats alone is trifling. It costs but one-half cent per dish.

Mr. J. Irwin Is Promoted

The following from the Saskatoon Capital, concerning the promotion of Mr. J. Irwin, former transmaster for the northern division of the G. T. P. and well known locally, now superintendent of the C.N.R. at Saskatoon, will be read with interest by his many friends here. The promotion means an increase of $600 per year in Mr. Irwin's salary.

"Next week will see another change in the officials of the C.N.R. lines when Superintendent Irwin will go to Dauphin and take charge of the fifth division here.

"A new division is being created, with headquarters at Brandon, and Mr. Roberts, late chief despatcher at Winnipeg, is promoted to Superintendent of the new district, and Mr. Helston, who left here a few days ago will be chief despatcher at Winnipeg. "In the general change," caused by creating the new division, both Mr. Irwin and Mr. Fisher receive promotion, the Dauphin division will be very much enlarged.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

OF course you know that almost everybody has some favourite word or expression which he works overtime with no respect for union rules.

Very well. Now did you ever try the interesting experiment in observing study of "getting" people by that favourite expression?

Do you see what I mean?

No? Then perhaps an example will explain better than any further explanation.

I know a man who constantly uses the expression, "to a certain extent." "Does he think reciprocity will accomplish a certain thing?" you ask him.

"Yes, to a certain extent," he answers. "Has he found his new house conveniently located?" "Yes, to a certain extent," etc., etc.

Now it seems to me that the constant use of that expression is an index to the man's habit of careful thought, his practice of weighing and balancing, considerations, of looking thoroughly at all sides of any question.

I know another man who in his writing constantly uses the expression "good people" and again the word "splendid."

I consider his almost wearying reiteration of these words simply a result of his marvelous optimism. They are an unconscious expression of the attitude which I happen to know he has towards the world, as a kindly and beautiful place, stocked with people who, if you understand them rightly, are all astonishingly kind and good, even those who temporarily seem to have lost sight of that fact themselves.

Everyone knows the girl who continually uses the word "inartistic," and everyone ought to be able to know her at once as the young person of exclusiveness who is extremely proud of her aesthetic sensibilities, and who is constantly shuddering at the surprising exhibitions of lack of taste on the part of the rest of the world.

Then there is the girl to whom everything is so "interesting," for whom the final criterion of desirability is "he is so interesting," and the final word of condemnation, "but I can't see anything interesting about him."

She, of course, is afflicted with an obsession of the intellect. She thinks that character and physical outfit are mere appendages to brains. She may get over it in time, and then again she may not. Listen for the cessation of "interesting" and when you find its use waning, congratulate her. You will have reason, too.

Indeed there is—but who multiply examples?

Always are interested in character study you can hunt up some for yourself. You will find them much more amusing than mine.

And if you are not, why, you are doubtless more than ready to have me cease, anyhow.

CROPS ARE VARIED BUT SOME VERY GOOD

Department of Agriculture Has Reports of Wheat, Clover and Rye

The fall wheat and clover crops in this Province show quite a varied character, ranging from good to very poor, but winter rye is, though small in quantity, in a good condition. The Ontario Department of Agriculture has issued the following statement regarding the winter crops, based on reports of correspondents sent in on or about the 8th of May:

Fall Wheat.—The wheat sown in the fall of 1910 entered the winter in excellent form all over the Province, but its present condition is most variable. In some of the leading fall wheat counties it is described as an absolute failure, while in others it is regarded as a good crop; but taken as a whole it is much behind the average of recent years. Most of the harm done to the young wheat was caused by smothering from snow, by ice forming on low-lying undrained fields, or from the very-drying spring frosts when the ground was bare. Several correspondents point out that the unusually early and heavy fall of snow which came before the land was frozen, and which remained for a long time, was peculiarly trying to the tender wheat, in some instances practically rotting it. Injury for insects was reported in only a few instances, and these were not of a serious nature. In those sections of the Province where the crop was a failure most of it would have been ploughed up but for the fact that it was seeded down with clover, and farmers are anxious to save the excellent catch of grass by resowing the patchy spots with some spring grain—usually barley. In a number of cases, also, some inferior fields of wheat have been left unmolested in the hope that they might pick up with favourable weather. Most of the reports coming from the Lake Erie district were favourable, while in the counties of Huron and Bruce in the adjoining Lake Huron district conditions were reversed, and a considerable portion of fall wheat land had to be ploughed up or resown. The crop was also a failure in the Georgian Bay counties. In the West Midland district wheat on the whole was of fair promise, and the same may be said of the counties of Lincoln, Wentworth, Halton and Peel in the Lake Ontario district; but the other counties of this group (York to Prince Edward) give rather discouraging reports. In the more eastern parts of the Province, where but little fall wheat is grown, conditions range from fair to poor.

Clover.—Reports concerning clover are as varied as those regarding fall wheat, ranging all the way from "good" to "poor." Most of the injury has been done old fields, and has been caused chiefly from the forming on low places of spring frosts. However, but little clover has been ploughed up, and the latest reports speak of the crop as making a fair recovery. Several correspondents point out that it has suffered much more severely from the trying winter and spring weather, especially in the case of the older fields.

Winter Rye.—The acreage given to this crop is relatively small, but it has come through the winter better than either fall wheat or clover, and is reported as looking well.

"THE RED MILL"

"The Red Mill," which will be seen at the Grand Opera House, Victoria Day, May 24, matinee and evening, comes with a record of one entire year on Broadway, New York City, at the Knickerbocker Theatre, and three months each in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. "The Red Mill" stands out as the most popular musical hit of the past three seasons and one that will prove popular for many seasons to come, possessing all the elements of an enduring success, both in story and music. "The Red Mill" marks the nineteenth complete musical play by Victor Herbert, every one of which has scored an undeniable success, and have proved the vehicles for most of the distinguished musical stars of the present day. Henry Blossom, the author of the book and lyrics has already come to the front place as the American Gilbert each of his writings having, like Herbert, proved immensely successful. Starting with "Checkers" his first and only dramatic writing, he rapidly followed with the "Yankee Consul," "Miss Modiste," "The Prince Chap," and "The Red Mill." "The Red Mill," Messrs. Blossom and Herbert have worked with such intelligence that the former has succeeded in telling the adventures of a frisky pair of Americans who are "doing" Europe for the first time, but who strike a snag in one of the small villages of Holland, when their money gives out, and the most appalling complications follow, lead them to assume all kinds of disguises. The music of Herbert is of the whistleable kind, and satisfied not only only music lovers alone, but the masses, to whom song is one of the greatest delights.

The company of fifty people has been carefully selected and embraces a cast of rare individuality, particularly the six little boys and girls who impersonate the Dutch Kiddies.

The famous characters of Con Kidder and Kid Connor will be interpreted by James Crowley and Wm. Moore.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Kingston, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis."

THOMASINE'S CHOICE

And How She Became Rich

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyrighted by American Press Association, 1911.

For twenty years Aunt Lucia Morgan had boarded with Mrs. Deacon Flint, and the two front rooms she occupied in that comfortable home comprised the only home she had known since she broke up housekeeping after her husband's death. She had saved the choicest of her furniture and personal belongings and either given away the remainder or sold them. She paid $6 a week for her rooms and board and, besides, several other expenses, for Aunt Lucia lived comfortably. She was known to have a snug sum of money in the bank, for the Morgans had even to do and lived on their interest money.

When Aunt Lucia died all her relatives, who were nieces and nephews, gathered, to pay her the last respects. After the funeral they sat in the front room, which she had used as a parlor, and listened in silence to the reading of the brief will.

The lawyer, Mr. Rhodes, polished his eyeglasses and adjusted them to his long nose. "Ahem!" he said jerkily. "Of course you all participated in the generous distribution of Mrs. Morgan's household furniture some twenty odd years ago?

"All the furniture in these two rooms is bequeathed to Mrs. Deacon Flint in recognition of [illegible] kindness. [illegible] with the following exceptions: Mahogany and mattress, [illegible] bureau, [illegible] chair and [illegible] to be divided among my four nieces—Jane Martin, Ann Squires, Fanny Ray and Thomasine Weiss—and my two nephews—George Giles and Luke Hayes. In what ever manner my esteemed friend Henry Rhodes may decide upon." Once more the lawyer cautioned them to dispute the justice of his will.

"Your aunt also willed that [illegible] personal belongings shall be [illegible] among you in the same way. There is a marble clock, a pair of vases, [illegible] andirons, a china lamp, a looking glass and—her parrot—the stuffed bird. You all recollect that this faithful bird was the companion of your aunt for many lonely years and that she esteemed it highly."

Thomasine was the only one who remembered an acknowledgment of this tribute to the defunct bird. She never had liked parrots—she thought them noisy, screaming pests—but because poor Aunt Lucia was dead and had thought to mention her dead pet in the will Thomasine smiled and said they had all heard that the parrot was devoted to Aunt Lucia.

"The clothes and little personal belongings were distributed among her close friends before she died," went on the lawyer, referring to the will. "Your aunt has left a sum of money sufficient to cover all necessary expenses, and if there is a little surplus it is to go for the care of her burial plot. That's all."

"I thought there was some money," remarked George Giles, rubbing a sunburned hand over his head in a puzzled manner. He was a prosperous farmer, and he had promised himself a little pleasure trip with any legacy he might receive from Aunt Lucia.

"Here are copies of the will," said the lawyer tersely, handing around duplicates of the document. "You may keep them. You will note that Mrs. Morgan especially emphasizes the fact that each article and all it contains is to go to the one who takes it away. She also suggests that the distribution be made by choice, the oldest one having first choice. This, I think, would be very proper."

"Very well," said Ann Squires eagerly. She was the firstborn among them. The others signified assent with more or less satisfaction according to age. Thomasine Weiss felt very [illegible] somehow. She would have liked to choose the mahogany work table. It was very pretty, with glass knobs on the drawers, but it was very likely that one of the others would want that.

Thomasine was quite poor. She had been apprenticed to a dressmaker when she was fifteen, and now she served at home in the few rooms she hired in a small town fifty miles from Little River. The other heirs were well to do farmer folk who had had many opportunities to visit Aunt Lucia and shower attentions upon her declining years. Poor Thomasine had had to struggle for a livelihood, and only her occasional letters and the carefully [illegible] gifts she made kept her in touch with her old aunt. When she had been a little girl she had spent much time with Aunt Lucia and loved her dearly, and now she was grieved that the old lady had even remembered her sufficiently to mention her name in so important a document as a will.

"As Miss Weiss spent return to her home early tomorrow morning," remarked the lawyer, "I would seem best for the heirs to make their choice now, and after she will has been informed the things will be sent on to the owners. I have a list of the heirs compiled from the family Bible, and as Mrs. Ann Squires is the eldest she might have first choice of the furniture." He nodded to the lady in question.

"I'll take the [illegible] and mahogany and all the [illegible]," said Ann Squires loudly.

Fanny Ray crossed hastily and bent her head to the [illegible]. "I know which one I want. I suppose she thinks the mahogany is studded with [illegible]."

"Humph!" said Jane Martin. "Her turn next, Fanny, perhaps you already claimed your [illegible] you've always claimed you." was the [illegible] yard knew.

Mrs. Ray smiled [illegible]. "It's got to go according to the records," she said [illegible].

"Now, Mrs. Ray," said the lawyer sharply.

"I'll take the [illegible]," said Fanny quickly. The heiress afforded much space for carrying trousers, and there might also be a hidden drawer.

George Giles looked at the work table, but he was a bachelor and shook his head. Then he chose the morris chair, and Luke Hayes claimed the work table and chose a patent rocker because the covering was red. Jane Martin selected [illegible] the [illegible] they were choosing. At last her turn came.

"I wanted that [illegible] clock," she said snappy, "but as it's gone I'll have to take the vases [illegible] I've got one already." She looked very disagreeably at the rambling article, a small round cherry stand.

"I'll leave you the chair when I'm gone," grinned George Giles.

"Now, Miss Thomasine," encouraged the lawyer.

"I'll take the [illegible]" said Thomasine forlornly.

"Now, the other things, Mrs. Squires, you'd turn again."

"The marble clock," said Ann promptly. Jane took Fanny exultant action.

"The vases," said Fanny Ray.

"Lamp," said George Giles.

Luke Hayes smirked at his reflection in the looking glass and said he'd take that, much to Jane Martin's chagrin.

"Andiron," she snapped viciously, "though I don't want 'em!"

"I—I'll take the parrot," [illegible] Thomasine as each one arose and [illegible] to investigate his or her special choice. They were [illegible], [illegible] but each one was conspicuously [illegible] of gain and [illegible] of their realized [illegible] fortunes. Your poor cousin [illegible] the inheritance that had fallen to her share was the greatest of the lot. After the distribution was made they [illegible] they had [illegible] were [illegible] most at [illegible] gone up many [illegible] would forget all [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] Thomasine to [illegible] [illegible] them.

Now they were busily [illegible] investigating into their [illegible] [illegible] with little courage. There was nothing but [illegible] old vases, [illegible] bureau contained [illegible] save a little [illegible] underwear. There was a piano wrapped [illegible] cloth, while the work table contained many [illegible] articles. It did not occur to Jane that Thomasine might need the work table.

They parted then, and the next morning Thomasine went home and back to work. Two days later the legacy came by express—the cherry stand and the stuffed parrot on his perch. Thomasine placed the parrot on the stand and gazed them about the [illegible] and fought them until one day she took it to [illegible] cat, which she had [illegible] by the kitchen stove. After a while the cat [illegible] into the little sitting room, and when he saw the green, purple sitting on the perch he snarled angrily and flew at the unoffending bird. When Thomasine ran to the scene the floor was covered with bright feathers and the stuffing was protruding from the body of the bird. The cat, chagrined at this one sided battle, retired to a corner and [illegible] [illegible]

Thomasine picked up the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] if she might not repair the damage with needle and thread and glue. Then her eyes opened wider and wider, for the stuffing of that parrot was composed of light wads and rolls of greenbacks, and twisted among them was a short little note from Aunt Lucia:

Dear Thomasine—I hated [illegible] all that out the best and leave poor Polly to you, so I have made him worth while after all. You need all of this, and you can keep it without saying any thanks over it. Mr. Rhodes knows, and just mention it and anybody but your husband, if you ever have one, but I don't see how you can, handicapped with that dreadful name. With Aunt Lucia's love.

Through her tears Thomasine counted the money and found there was $5,000, and her worn little face was glorified by a smile of perfect relief. Now she could close her sewing machine and buy a farm and raise chickens! As a beginning she closed the machine with a loud clatter. Then she hugged the strange pet and adopted him on the spot, and thereafter he waxed fat and lazy and never even blinked at the young chickens that ran about Thomasine's poultry farm.

[illegible] Thomasine never told a soul about the strange way her legacy had come to her, even after she was married, and when she told her husband, for of course she got married.

Up the Spout.

Tax Collector William Hepburn of Hartford, Conn., used to keep a [illegible] tarb store [illegible] an undertaking establishment. The newspaper boys were accustomed to call there daily to secure obituary notices. One day a couple of them dropped round when the proprietor was very busy. "Any thing fresh?" asked the [illegible]. "No thing," was the [illegible] [illegible]. "No thing, hope—except the reporters."

crepancies in statements will be cleared up, leaving but the one point of the Hydro-Electric report being made public, and as regards this, I do not feel that the citizens of Peterborough will find any great fault with the fact of the report having been published. As stated above, the information read in this report was open to inspection by the owners of any of the properties, which the report affects, and therefore, the fact of its not being published, would not have aided the Council in reaching any better terms with these owners.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours truly,

GREEN GOODS SWINDLE

Some United States Crook is Operating a Bank Note Scheme

A system of swindling is being operated in various parts of Canada by men who are commonly known as "green goods men." A large number of farmers have had letters sent them by some person in the United States offering to sell bundles of counterfeit bank notes which, the writer said, he had made. The writer of these letters has represented himself to be an expert engraver, formerly employed by one of the bank note companies, and that he had produced plates duplicating one, five and ten dollar bills. He would try to make an appointment with his intended victim. Should he succeed in doing so the procedure is for the writer of the letters to meet his victim at some place over the line, and show him a genuine bank note as a sample of his work. If the victim decides to purchase a quantity of these so-called "duplicate notes," he is shown a package of genuine bills or a package faced with a genuine bill, which is afterwards exchanged for another package of worthless paper. In the event of this game succeeding, there is no redress for the victim, as it is an offence against the law for a person to attempt to purchase counterfeit money. The fact that the green goods man conducts his operations from points outside of Canada covers his trail very completely, and makes it almost impossible for the police to secure an arrest.

FASHIONABLE WEDDINGS

Family Relics Are Often Called Into Requisition

"It is very curious how many families have something which is considered indispensable at a wedding," said the verger of a West-End church. "There is a firm belief that without it—well, the couple cannot possibly be happy."

"Have you heard of the lucky Prayer-Book of the Hamiltons? That book—which is carefully preserved at Blair, near Prestonkirk—has been used at more weddings than you would imagine, including nearly every Royal wedding from the times of George III. and Queen Charlotte down to our own. The only omission, I think, was the wedding of George IV., and that was unfortunate. Dean Stanley took it with him to Russia when he went there to marry the Duke of Edinburgh and the Grand Duchess Marie. The last time it was used at a Royal wedding was in 1893, when our King and Queen were married.

"In some families the luck-bringer is a ring. The Verneys have one which has a romantic history. It belonged to an ancestor of the family who fought at Edge Hill during the Rebellion. After the conflict search was made for him, but all that was found was his gloved hand, which was still clutching the Royal Standard. On it was his wedding-ring, and ever since it has been used at all the weddings in the family. Of course, it is not worn continuously by every bride. As a matter of fact, it is taken off immediately after the ceremony and an ordinary wedding-ring is substituted.

"There are, too, many lucky bridal veils, some of them centuries old. I have seen several which have been used on occasion for more than two centuries.

"Perhaps the most remarkable of these treasures is a veil belonging to the Horners, and worn a few years ago when Miss Cecily Horner was married. It was made for Mary Queen of Scots by some nuns, who presented it to her when she was a prisoner at Fotheringay. Passing to Cardinal Yorke, it was given by him to the Horner family, and has been worn by many brides of their house. When a Horner is to be married many people try to be present at the ceremony principally to see the famous veil."

INSANE IN THE JAILS

A Scandal That They are There, Says Sir William Meredith

That the insane should be confined in jails is a most lamentable thing, according to Chief Justice Meredith when addressing a grand jury in Toronto. "The jail is no place," said His Lordship, "for persons who have committed no offence against the law. These people are suffering from an ailment, and every day that they are kept without proper treatment lessens the probability of their recovery. A law has recently been passed by the Legislature providing that insane people must be kept in some safe and comfortable place. This law seems to have become almost a dead letter, so far as the enforcement of it is concerned. The difficulty is that no proper place has been provided for the confinement of these people. It is a scandal in this age and this province that such a condition should exist."

LINE TO LABRADOR

A Railway Project from the Saguenay to Cape Charles Bay

A cable states that a syndicate has been formed in London for the construction of a railway from the Saguenay River to Cape Charles Bay, on the east coast of Labrador, a point 650 miles from Quebec. The enterprise, which will connect with the Quebec and Saguenay line, which M. J. O'Brien will build during the next 18 months to Murray Bay, 90 miles from the ancient capital. The promoters say that Cape Charles Bay is open all the year round, and from that port fast steamers will make Liverpool in 63 hours, or land mails in Chicago 2 hours before they could reach New York by any of the other routes.

HAD OUTFIT FOR MAKING COUNTERFEIT QUARTERS

A man, very much under the influence of liquor, was arrested at the Italian fruit store across the street from the Rex theatre this morning by P. C. Meagher. The prisoner was raising a racket and upsetting things around the store, when the constable arrived.

When he was taken to the police station he was searched, and a number of parcels, which he carried, were investigated. Very much to the surprise of the police authorities, the parcels contained a full equipment of stuff for making bogus quarters, including some powerful acids and other bottles of drugs. There were also several counterfeit quarters found on his person. Those quarters were simply coppers silvered over by means of the acids and other stuff that he had for the purpose. He was, it is said, trying to pass the bogus money to the fruit dealer this morning who marreaded. This afternoon he lay dead to the world in a cell at the police station. When asked his name, he said he was "Bobby Burns." He will appear before His Worship Magistrate Dumble in the police court in the morning. The police authorities are of the opinion that he is an old hand at the counterfeiting, so efficiently was the counterfeit money in his possession done.

POST CARD COLUMN

Unclaimed Bank Balances.

We shall make a big effort this season to obtain the appointment of that much delayed Select committee to enquire into this subject. If the Chancellor would only turn his attention to the hen roosts hidden in the vaults of the bankers, he could soon give us not only Old, but also Middle-Age Pensions!

May 16th, 1911.

The above, from an English paper just received, shows why annuities and pensions are required, and although the Annuities Bill may not be against the Bank, those institutions, as are almost all, are against the government and the people. Play ball!

HON. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN ENDORSES WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A.

Famous United States Politician and Orator is Entertained at Luncheon Here To-day and Makes a Telling Speech in Support of the Association.

LECTURES TO-NIGHT

Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan arrived in the city on the morning G.T.R. train from Belleville to-day and was met at the station by Mr. H. M. Gilchrist, the local Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and by Hon. J. R. Stratton, whose guest the distinguished visitor is during his stay in the city.

At noon to-day Hon. Mr. Bryan was entertained at luncheon at the Y.M.C.A., the Canadian Club, and the Y.M.C.A. uniting in the event. Over one hundred of the business and professional men of the city were on hand to welcome the visitor, who was greeted with enthusiastic applause when he arrived at the Y.M.C.A. Mr. R. J. Devey played a few strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" as he entered. Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., the President of the Y.M.C.A., presided, and at the head of the table were Hon. Mr. Bryan, Hon. J. R. Stratton, his Worship Mayor Morrow, His Honour Judge Hayche, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Mr. Vincent Eastwood, President of the Board of Trade, E. L. Goodwill, and Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's church.

Hon. Mr. Bryan was enthusiastically received when he arose after luncheon to speak. He explained that the present tour of Canada was the outgrowth of a suggestion made by the Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in Winnipeg. It had been suggested that a trip be arranged by which he would meet the men interested in Y.M.C.A. work at a luncheon during the day, and give his lecture at night, and he adopted this plan in the United States, as well, finding it most successful, as it gave him the opportunity of meeting the strong Christian men of the community, and the strong Christian men were generally the moving spirits of the community. He was glad to be in Canada just at the present time, when the bond of peace between the two countries was becoming more and more close as the centenary of the establishment of peace between Canada and the United States approached. The speaker referred to the recent speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in which the Premier of Canada said that there was a grander conception than that of one nation covering the continent; it was the spectacle of two nations lying side by side, with only an imaginary line between them, with no guns on either side, living in peace and quietness, rivals only in commerce. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had said a great many good things; he doubted if he had said anything that would live longer than this speech, as a statement of statesmanship.

Hon. Mr. Bryan felt, too, that his visit was opportune just now when the United States and Great Britain were concluding a treaty that was going to be epoch-making. It was the first opportunity he had had of expressing his gratification at the terms of this treaty, as they were set forth in the daily press to-day. He had been very anxious that the treaty should not be a disappointment. When the terms were outlined some time ago he felt that the outlook was disappointing, as they contained exceptions that nullified the treaty. As set forth now, however, there was nothing to criticise. The treaty closed the door to sudden declarations of war, as it provided that questions should be submitted for examination. If time could be

SHOT WIFE AND THEN SUICIDED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., MAY 18.—Nathaniel Self, aged 45, a cigar maker who recently served sentence for bigamy, shot and fatally wounded himself and wife this morning. He came here on the early morning train and called on his wife immediately. Mrs. Darville, of Hamilton, a daughter, was visiting her mother at the time and the latter held the baby grandchild in her arms. "If you won't live with me, we will die together," said Self and when she refused he whipped out a big revolver from his pocket and fired, the bullet just missing the baby's face and ripping through the woman's ear. She ran screaming back, followed by three bullets from his revolver and she and the baby fell in a heap on the floor. Then he went upstairs and locked himself in a room and fired two shot in his head. The baby was hurt in falling. Mrs. Self's wounds are in the neck and side and the doctors say there is no chance for the recovery of either man or woman. She had been doing well by keeping a boarding house recently.

There is no clue to the actual murderers.

They are certainly the finest produced in any country, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. We take a most thorough examination of the eyes, and are most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficient experience in refracting and adapting.

Some advertising men—experts—have told us that we shouldn't use "don't" in our advertisements. They tell us to be positive—to say "do." GRACIOUS HOSPITALITY.

Hon. William Jennings Bryan came to the city this morning. He is the city's guest, and he is receiving, and has received the hospitality due a distinguished man and a neighbour, to boot. While Mr. Bryan is a representative United States citizen, representative of the best elements of its citizenship, he is more than that; he is a neighbour, and, more than that, a fellow citizen in the unbounded realm of Christian civilization. He, and the people he represents, we, and the people we represent, have the same ideals, the same aims, the same ambition—to be forces in the world for the world's betterment, to be forces in the world in the cultivation of that peace by which alone national destinies and achievements can be worked out to the best advantage, with the fullest fruition. It is, therefore, gracious and fitting action on our part to welcome him as a brother, and treat him as a friend and honoured guest. He is worthy of such treatment as a man of outstanding eminence, intellect, eloquence, and high character, and we only do ourselves, our sense of duty and hospitality credit by translating our impulses into action.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

To-morrow night the lists in the campaign for new membership of the Horticultural Society will be closed, so that preparations for the distribution of the premiums to new members may be made.

These premiums include a choice between a dozen bedding plants and a dozen window-garden plants, or if preferred, one large Boston fern will be given. These premiums will be distributed at once, so as to be available for planting this season. In addition to these premiums, the payment of $1.00 fee for membership includes a distribution of bulbs in the autumn and a year's subscription to the Horticulturist, a splendid journal, devoted to floral and vegetable culture, and published in Peterborough. At retail rates the plants, bulbs and subscription amount to far more than the dollar paid in as fee of membership.

And that is not the full value of membership, either. An enlarged membership of the Horticultural Society, and the increased culture of flowers and beautification of premises, will be worth more than can be put down in money equivalent.

We have much to do to realise upon the natural advantages for a beautiful city that Peterborough presents. This can only be accomplished by general cooperation of all citizens, and the action of the Society in increasing its membership is only the first step.

For the first time in our history the city has given its cooperation as expressed in a thorough cleaning o fthe streets, his adds immensely to the general tidiness of our public places. Now that the city extends its cooperation, the cooperation of the citizens is called for.

And some of our citizens show an outrageous disregard for the cleanliness of the streets in front of their places. One can see in different parts of the city, examples of this indifference and outrage upon public rights. After a street has been nicely cleaned by the city and the resulting rubbish carted away, some private citizens dump the rakings of their lawns—grass, and leaves, and other rubbish, upon the cleaned street. They may not realise it, but they are acting an bad and unneighbourly an act as if they piled their rubbish upon the lawn of the next neighbour.

In respect of the tidiness of the streets, the whole public is one's neighbour, and it is just as offensive to the eye to see heaps of refuse and rubbish in the street as upon a lawn. We lay down grass, seed, mow, tend, and clip our lawns; we plant them with flowers and shrubbery—first on our own account; but they yield as much pleasure to the public, to the passer-by, as to the owner. All that the owner can do is to admire these things, and the public can do the same thing. It is, therefore, as much to the interest, as much the duty to the public, to protect lawns—especially open lawns—and boulevards, as of the owners.

We must cooperate; we must obey the golden rule. We should not like anybody to destroy or deface a lawn or boulevard, we plant; and we should, in respect of keeping those of others, in good order; do as we would wish to be done by.

A great deal of the injury done to such places is due to thoughtlessness, more than to malice; and we need our preachers, our teachers in our schools, to drop a hint and try to instill into the minds of flocks and pupils the duty of civic public spirit, respect for civic beauty, and respect for the rights, feelings, and property of others. Let us all pull together. If we plant a flower, or blade of grass, or tree, or shrub, we cannot conceal them. They become public, they become, as far as enjoyment of the beauty is concerned, public property; property that every member of the public is bound in honour, to cherish, respect, and protect.

CROP PRODUCTION AND MARKETS.

We are accustomed to regard wheat as the staple of Canadian production that sets a standard among grains, as gold among metals. The west outstrips the east easily in the matter of wheat, but in the production of other grains the east almost holds its own and could achieve a strong lead if the capabilities of soil production in eastern Canada were made, by intelligent and enterprising methods, to yield their own. The annual crop report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the year ending March 31, 1910, gives the following figures as to the relative production of grains in the eastern and western provinces of Canada, respectively:

	Bushels
Wheat—
Eastern provinces	25,504,108
Western provinces	130,487,310
Oats—
Eastern provinces	108,660,001
Western provinces	118,121,581
Barley—
Eastern porvinces	29,191,107
Western provinces	39,708,565
Flax—
Eastern provinces	35,760,306
Western provinces	3,801,221
Rye—
Eastern provinces	100,368
Western provinces	28,306
Total
Eastern pprovinces	283,369,636
Western provinces	289,869,386
	573,457,421

We have not yet, by any means, reached within a thousandth part of our crop production. With development proceeding apace in all other departments, Canada must continue to rank as a country with agriculture as its basic industry. With crop production an easy matter, much depends upon a market. As production grows, the question of finding a market grows in importance. In this connection the adoption of reciprocity, which throws open to our farmers a new market, will give a decided impetus to more intensive as well as more extensive farming operations. The farmers of Canada do not fear the competition of their southern neighbours. In the first place Canada's soil conditions are superior and there is reason to believe that Canadian farming skill can much more than hold its own as against the methods of our more southern fellow farmers. That the reciprocity agreement will be to the benefit of the Canadian farmers, is shown in a way by the fact that the latter are not dreading competition from the farmers of the United States, for it is the latter that are throwing out signals of distress. Whether United States farmers are speaking their own minds or are under the influence of certain interests, the fact remains that they are largely opposed to reciprocity, which, they assert, gives Canadian farmers the big end of the bargain.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The industrial boom all over Canada goes on at a lively pace, in face of the wail of the partizans, who say that reciprocity means the ruin of Canadian industries. When men of keen insight and foresight, men that have the brains to make money, embark in industrial ventures, they have no fear of reciprocity being a long way to spell ruin.

The Lama of Thibet, in an interview, declared that in course of time Buddhism would replace Christianity. The Lama may not be much of a prophet, but it looks as if his forecast might to some extent be realised. With the modern propagandists of the Christian religion blowing up its foundations with sugar coated bombs of agnosticism, and substituting evolution for Creation, Christianity has reason to pray, "save me from my friends" and to look to the future with some apprehension.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, but still a political force with a wide influence, speaking of the reciprocity agreement, says: "It is greatly in the interests of Canada without compensating benefit to the United States; it will result in prosperity for our Canadian neighbours, and bankruptcy for those engaged in agriculture in the United States." Yet we don't have the Canadian opponents of reciprocity quoting such sentiments as these; they only handle the foolish remarks of some spread-eagle orator, who, for party gain, or personal popularity, declares that reciprocity will lead to annexation.

THE SHORTEST ROUTE.

(Brantford Expositor.)

Sir Edward Morris, premier of Newfoundland, is discussing with a syndicate of British capitalists a proopsal to construct a railway from Quebec to a point on Cape Sir Charles on the coast of Labrador, connecting there with a proposed new line of steamships of the Lusitania type, running between Sir Charles and Liverpool, and with a ferry across the Strait to Newfoundland. This would be by far the shortest passage across the Atlantic, and the voyage from land to land could be accomplished with only three nights at sea. The route would be open all the year round — occasionally drift and floating ice would be met with, but nothing to obstruct properly-build and equipped steamship From Cape Sir Charles to Quebec is about 1,000 miles, and with a line of standard gauge, this could be covered at 60 miles at hour, which means that passengers could be landed in Lower Canada and in the United States 24 hours earlier than by the Lusitania to New York to-day.

BECOMING AFRAID OF CANADA.

(Montreal Herald)

Prominent persons in the Northwestern States wordering upon this Dominion have paid Canada the high compliment of forming a Northwest Development League, the object of which is to stem the tide of emigration from these States into the Canadian West. From the character of the men interested in it—Mr. M. S. Jones owner of the Minneapolis Journal, is a prominent mover—there is room to hope that its methods will be entirely legitimate, and will not include the deliberate misrepresentation of Canada. So long as that is the case, Canadians have no objection to raise. The formation of the League is in itself an admirable advertisement for the tide which it is proposed to stem and no Canadian—especially no Westerner—believes for a minute that any serious amount of stemming will be effected.

And to be quite frank, Canadians will not be too bitterly disappointed if some excuse for remaining in the United States is provided for those Americans who have become deeply attached to the country of their birth or adoption. There is a possibility of their coming over a little too freely even for our requirements. The Northwest Development League will provide a useful reminder for those who contemplate migration, that crossing the line involves abandoning all hope of being President of the United States or of pleading your law-suits before a judge whom you can call to order at the next election.

If anything, it has been too easy this getting of settlers to share in our glorious heritage. A little resistance will make it far more interesting.

A TRIANGE OF FORCES.

(Toronto Star.)

One of the serious aspects of the Coronation is the situation involved in the departure of Dr. J. A. Macdonald, the Hon. George E. Foster, and Col. Sam Hughes. These gentlemen are all going to England. They are to be witnesses together of a great Empire pageant. Messrs. Macdonald and Hughes left on the same boat, And—

Mr. Foster has a feud with Dr. Macdonald and Colonel Hughes.

Colonel Hughes has a feud with Mr. Foster, and Dr. Macdonald.

Dr. Macdonald has a feud with Colonel Hughes and Mr. Foster.

Supposing that Messrs. Macdonald and Hughes reach the Old Country in safety, without either having thrown the other overboard, and suppose that the Hon. George Eulas joins them there. What then?

For all anyone knows, Dr. Macdonald may be peacefully viewing the procession, when Mr. Foster creeps up behind him with a stiletto. It would be a verbal stiletto, of course. The ex-Minister of Finance would simply be preparing to leap upon the editor's back and hiss in his ear the word "Coward!" which is as hard a word to hiss as any in the English language, since it lacks sibilants. But George would do it.

Hughes, meantime, would not be idle — trust an old campaigner. At the same fateful moment, with the bands blaring and everyone supposedly paying attention to the Big Show, the Colonel would be ready to execute a sudden flank movement upon Mr. Foster and shout "Down with tyrants!" or words to that effect.

Dr. Macdonald, also, might be counted upon to think of certain parliamentary insults rather than the procession. He likewise would be preparing for a quick spring upon the shoulders of his enemy, and would be ready to snarl "Truckler!" in the Colonel's ear.

Then would come what is known as "the pychological moment." This incident, indeed, affords the best example of "psychological moment" in all history. With one accord the three men make their deadly and vindictive leaps. Mr. Foster towards Dr. Macdonald, Dr. Macdonald towards Colonel Hughes, and Colonel Hughes towards Mr. Foster. In the twinkling o fan eye, they have changed positions, while "Coward!" "Truckler!" and "Down with tyrants!" explode harmlessly in the air.

If it happens, it will be a wonderful performance, altogether the most interesting feature of the Coronation, and the correspondents will do well to keep a close watch upon the three possible participants. As each of them has an intense dislike for the other two, Colonel Hughes will hesitate to expose Mr. Foster's attack, since it will be aimed at his other enemy, the editor; Mr. Foster will hesitate to expose Dr. Macdonald's attack, because it will be aimed at his other enemy, Colonel Hughes, and Dr. Macdonald will hesitate to expose Colonel Hughes' attack, because it will be aimed at his other enemy, the ex-Minister.

And isn't that a dainty dish to set before a king?"

WHAT ARE YOU DOING

For the Old People?

It may be your father, your mother, your grandfather or your grandmother who is very dear to you, but it is sad to see them lose their interest in life because their strength is fast ebbing away and they seem doomed to the weak, feeble and decrepit condition of the aged.

Now is the time for you to come to their assistance.

Call at our store and get a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, and see what a change it will make in your dear ones.

A case is recorded in Litchfield, Ill., of a man 72 years of age who seemed to be getting old and feeble, suffered from indigestion and a nervous trouble. His druggist asked him to try Vinol at his risk. He did and says he is better and feels younger than he has for fifteen years.

We wish every feeble aged person would try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not give perfect satisfaction. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

SIR STANFORD FLEMING VS. CEMENT MERGER

OTTAWA, MAY 18.—At the morning session of the Legislature, Hon. Mr. Fielding intimated that an investigation would be taken into the charges of Sir Sandford Fleming against Cement Merger in the usual manner, as the bill came before the Private Bills committee.

It was announced in the Commons that Lieut. Granham, Midshipman Victor Brodeur, son of the Minister of Marine and Percy Nelles, will be officers of the Canadian navy at the Coronation.

"THE BLACK CROSS"

By OLIVE M. BRIGGS

How different he was! When he had played at the Marlinski, and she had tossed the violets from her loggia, he was a boy, a virtuoso. Life and fame, were before him; and he sprang out on the stage like a young Apollo, eager and daring. And now—She searched his face.

There were lines there; shadows under his eyes, and his cheeks were thin. The lower part of his face was like a rock, firm and harsh; and his brows were heavy and swollen. Before, he had played with his fingers, and toyed with his art; now he played with his heart and his soul. His youth was gone; he was a man. He had known life and suffered.

She stared at him and her hands were convulsed, clasping one another under the cloak. An impulse came over her to throw herself from the gallery at his feet, as she had flung the violets; and she crouched closer against the wall, clinging to it.

"Velasco!—Velasco!"

A roar went up from the House.

The sound of the clapping was like rain falling; a mighty volume of sound, deafening, frightening.

Kaya crouched still lower. He had taken the violin from his cheek and was bowing; his eyes scanned the House, with a nonchalant air.

"Bravo—Velasco!"

The people were standing now and stamping, and screaming his name. They hid him and she could not see. Kaya leaned forward, her gold hair gleaming in the light, her eyes fixed.

"Velasco—Velasco!"

Suddenly he started.

He looked up at the gallery and his bow slipped from his hand. He stared motionless. The first violin stooped and picked up the bow.

"Monsieur—" he whispered, "Monsieur Velasco, are you ill?"

"No—no!" The violinist passed his hand over his eyes. "No—I am not ill! It was a vision—an illusion! A trick of the senses; it is gone now!"

He bowed again mechanically, taking the bow, lifting the violin again to his cheek. "An illusion!" he muttered; "A trick of the senses! God, how it haunts me!" He nodded to the Kapellmeister.

They went on.

* * * * * *

"Let me out!" said Kaya, "I am faint—let me out! Let me—out!" She struggled to the door, through the crowd, pressing her way slowly, painfully. Her cheeks were white and she was panting.

"Ah—for God's sake! Let me out!"

"Come this way, Velasco, this way through the passage. The din in the House is terrific—you have driven them mad! Hark to your name, how they shout it and stamp! They will be rushing to the stage door presently, as soon as the ushers have turned out the lights and the hope of your reappearance is gone. No wonder, man—you played like a god! You were like one inspired! Shall you risk it; or will you come through to my room in the Opera House, where we can wait and smoke quietly until the clamour is past?"

"Anywhere, Ritter, only to get away from that horrible noise!" The musician covered his ears with his hands and shuddered: "That is the worst of being an artist—there is no peace, no privacy! The people consider one a music-box to wind up at their pleasure! A pest on it all!"

The two men quickened their footsteps, hurrying down the long corridor, and presently a door shut behind them.

"There—thank heaven!" cried Ritter, "around to the left now, Velasco, and then at the top of the stairs is my den. Let me go first and open the door."

The room was a small one, half filled with the bulk of a grand piano. About the walls ran shelf after shelf of music; opera scores and presentation copies in manuscript. A bust of Wagner stood in the corner, and on the wall behind the pianoforte was a large painting in sepia, dim, with strong lights and shadows.

The window was open, and below it lay the street, still in the darkness; above, the heavens were clear and the stars were shining. Ritter pulled forward an arm-chair and motioned the Musician towards it:

"Sit down, Velasco. Will you have a pipe or cigar? You look exhausted—man! This fasting before is too much for you; you are pale as death. Shall I send out the watchman for food, or shall we wait and go to the Keller together?"

Velasco nodded and sank back in the chair, covering his eyes with his hand:

"Is it usual for musicians to go mad?" he said.

"Heavens!" exclaimed the Kapellmeister, "what are you talking about—usual? Of course not! Some do. What is the matter with you, Velasco? You are overwrought to-night."

"No," he said, "no. When you hear themes in your head, and rhythms throbbing in your pulses—is that a sign?"

"Behute! We all have that. After an opera my head goes round like a buzz-saw, and the motives spring about inside like demons. If that is all, Velasco, you are not mad. Take a cigarette."

"Thank you, Ritter. Tell me—when you conduct, is it as if force and power were going from you, oozing away with the music; and you were in a trance and someone else were wielding the baton, interpreting, playing on the instruments, not yourself?"

The Kapellmeister shook his head grimly: "Sometimes, Velasco, but not often; we are not all like you. That is Genius speaking through you."

"Afterwards," continued the Violinist, "it is as if one had had an illness. To-night I am weary—Bosho moi! My body is numb, I can scarcely lift my feet, or my hands; only my nerves are alive, and they are like electric wires scintillating, jumping. The liquid runs through my veins like fire! is that a—?"

"Bewahre—bewahre! You throw yourself into your playing headlong, body and soul. It wrecks one mentally and physically to listen; how much more then to play! If you were like others, Velasco, you would drink yourself to drowsiness and drown those sensations; or else you would seek pleasure, distraction. When Genius has been with you, guiding your brain and your fingers, and you are left suddenly with an empty void, what else can you expect but reaction, nausea of life and of art? Bewahre, man! That is no madness! It is sanity—normal conditions returning. You are mad when the Genius is with you, you are mad when you play; but now—now you are sane; you are like other men, Velasco, and you don't recognize yourself!"

The Kapellmeister laughed, drawing whiffs from his cigar.

Velasco shook his head with his eyes: "You don't understand," he said slowly: "I see things—I have illusions! It is something that comes and dashes before me as I play, the same thing always. I saw it to-night."

"What sort of thing?"

Velasco stared suddenly at the opposite wall. "What is that painting there, Ritter?"

"The one over the piano? I bought it in St. Petersburg years ago, when I was touring; a copy of the Rembrandt in the 'Hermitage.' Don't you know it?"

"What is it?"

"'The Knight with the Golden Helmet' I call it; but it is really a 'Pallas Athene.'"

"The Knight—the Knight with the Golden Helmet! That is no knight—it is the head of a woman, a girl; look at the oval of the cheek, the lips, the eyes! That is no knight, nor is it a 'Pallas Athene'!—My God! I am going mad, I tell you! Wherever I look, I see it before me—an illusion, a trick of the senses! It is madness!"

Velasco sprang to his feet with a cry. "I can't bear it," he cried, "open the door! Damn you, Ritter, get out of the way!"

Velasco sprang forward, struggling for a moment with the Kapellmeister and then Ritter fell back. Thec lutch on his shoulder was like iron.

He fell back and the door slammed.

"Potztausend!" he cried, "what is there in my painting to start him like that? These musicians have nerves like live wires! It is true what he said—he is mad!"

The Kapellmeister went over to the painting on the wall and looked at it. "A girl's head," he murmured, "he is right. It is more like a 'Pallas Athene' than a knight; but if it were not for the helmet glittering, and the spear—"

Suddenly a remembrance came to him, and he struck his breast with his hand, crying out: "It is no knight! It is Brunnnilde, young and fair, with her eyes downcast! The light has fallen full on her face. She is standing there, and the stage is dim; her voice is still in ther throat, dying away!

Memory caught him then and he came nearer, shading his eyes with his hand, staring. "She has hung on my wall for years and I never knew it! It is she—it is her living image—her eyes and her brow—her lips arched and quivering! it is herself!"

"Brunnhild!" He lifted his arms: "Brunnhild!"

CHAPTER XXII.

The sun came shining in through the garret windows, dancing over the floor in cones of light, caressing the geraniums until they gleamed a rich scarlet against the green of the ivy; and the cobwebs glistened like silk under the eaves. About the mill the doves flew in circles, alighting on the sill, clinging to the ivy with their pink claws, cooing gently, and pecking at the worm-eaten casement.

"Dear doves," said Kaya, "you are hungry, and when you come to me for bread you find nothing but the stone. Chrr-rp!" She whistled softly and held her hands over the sill, dropping crumbs: "Chrr-rp! Come, pretty doves, and eat!"

The birds came nearer, eyeing her out of their bright eyes with little runs forward, then circling and cooing again.

"Chrr-rp!" she called, "Chrr-rp! Come!" And she held out her hands as if coaxing: "Come, my doves! Chrr-rp!"

One with fawn-coloured wings came flying and lighted on her shoulder; another followed.

"Come — chrr-rp!"

The soft little bodies huddled against one another on the sill, pressing closer; some on her arm and some eating out of her hand. She stroked their bright plumage, holding a crumb between her teeth.

"Chrr-rp—chrr-rp!"

The dove on her shoulder stretched his wings, pressing against her cheek with his breast, tipping forward on his pink feet, until his beak reached the crumb and he took it from her lips.

"Chrr-rp—chrr-rp!"

Kaya laughed softly, rubbing her cheek against the down of the bird; whistling and coaxing with her hands. The doves flew about her, lighting, struggling for footing on her shoulder and curls; and she shook her head, laughing:

"Chrr-rp away with you! Would you pluck my hair and line your nests with my curls! Pscht—away with you!" she flung out the crumbs again. "There—eat, my pretty ones—eat!"

Below, the great wheel turned and splashed in the water with a whirr, buzzing. Kaya gazed down at it, and as she gazed she forget the doves, and a strange little shudder went over her, so that the one on her shoulder lifted his wings in affright.

The water was deep in the pool, and there were little ripples under the spokes where the sun-beams were dancing. She dropped on her knees before the window and began to sing, still gazing at the wheel, the doves all about her, pianissimo—on the lower note of the scale, singing up, and then in arpeggios ,each not distinct and separate like the link in a chain, pure, soft, hardly above a breath.

As she sang, her voice rose gradually, deepening and increasing in power. The doves pecked the crumbs on the sill, huddling against her and eating from her hands. She began to trill from one note to another and in trilling, her thoughts ran hither and thither even as her voice, and her eyes wandered from the wheel, resting dreamily on the promenade, and the people walking under the trees.

The rhythm of a mazurka was in her ears, and she sang louder, trying to drown it. She was in a great hall vaulted, dome-like with marble columns; violins were playing and the scented rose and fell, invisible as from the clouds. There was the perfume of flowers, heavy and langourous, and snatches of laughter, and the gleaming of jewels. The floor was shining and polished like a mirror, reflecting the forms of the dancers as they whirled to and fro. The light was dazzling and the colour.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

A GREAT many parents take a positively unfair advantage of their little helpless babies."

"If there were fewer cute babies there would be fewer fretful and nervous children."

"The baby under a year old who can do any sort of a cute trick hasn't had a square deal."

Such are some of the statements I recently heard a mother who really thinks, make about babies.

In the course of the conversation someone had spoken of a baby who happened to be the first grandson and nephew on both sides of the family and who, at Christmas time, when he was only five months old; received nine toys, five picture books and eight rattles from admiring friends and relatives.

The mother who really thinks said she pitied both the mother and her baby.

We asked why.

"Because too many toys spoil the child," she answered promptly.

"I think this crowding little babies with toys and teaching them tricks is positively wicked. You know that a baby's brain isn't its full size until after he is a year old. Well, just think of all that growing brain has to assimilate without our distracting it with playthings or confusing it with rattles or forcing more efforts in the way of tricks upon it.

"Perhaps you've heard what a good baby my Gretchen is. Everyone thinks it's remarkable how little trouble she is and says I'm very fortunate.

"I don't think it's wholly that I'm fortunate. I think it's partly because I'm sensible. Because I've applied what I have learned from other babies to her.

"My baby is eight months old and all the toys she has ever had are two spools and a blue celluloid ball.

"I think if you don't give a child so many playthings it will be not only better off, but happier.

"You know how it is with the average child—he is put down in a chair with a tray full of playthings. He looks at them a few minutes and then there are so many that he gets confused and fretful, and begins to throw them all over the floor.

"Now this is the way I do with Gretchen. Say I'm getting dinner. I put her in her chair where she can watch me and don't give her any playthings at all. Then she is quite content to watch me for about half an hour. When she begins to get restless I give her her spools and she plays with them for awhile, and when she is tired of them she has her blue celluloid ball tied to a string and hung from the ceiling. She is happy with that at least half an hour and by that time dinner is probably gotten and eaten, and Gretchen instead of being nervous and cross and tired, as she would have been if I had plied her with playthings and talked to her and shaken a rattle at her half the time, is as good as a kitten.

"People think she is a remarkable baby. I don't. I think any baby would be just as good if its parents gave it a chance from the beginning.

"I don't think there is any excuse for those mothers who can't find time to do anything but take care of one baby. It's bad for them and bad for the baby. Except for her washing, Gretchen isn't much more bother than if she wasn't in the house at all, and I think almost any mother could have things just the same way if she would only train her baby right from the beginning."

Perhaps every mother won't agree with all these conclusions, but surely she will find this an interesting and suggestive point of view.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, chronic headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WARPLES, 228 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

"BOBBY BURNS" GETS OUT

The Air Is Germ Laden

In the Springtime—Disease is Ready to Make You a Victim When the Blood is Thin

Rich, Red Blood is the Greatest of Germicides—You Can Get the Blood Right by Using

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the blood is rich and red, when it is largely composed of red corpuscles, there is little chance for disease germs. They cannot thrive in the system which is filled with good blood.

But in the spring the blood is generally thin, weak and watery. It lacks the vitalizing red corpuscles and you become an easy prey to the germs of disease which seem to lurk everywhere at this time of year.

You can fortify yourself against the germs of disease by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great restorative treatment forms new, red corpuscles in the blood, makes the blood rich, red and healthy.

Weakness, tired feelings, stomach derangements and disorders of the nervous system soon disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

This medicine cures by the building-up process, and for this reason its benefits are lasting. Nearly everybody needs something in the spring to enrich the blood and tone up the system, and it would be impossible to get a more satisfactory spring tonic than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WE wish we could picture the Fine Qualities and Workmanship of these Undermuslins.

Then all we'd need would be an extra sales-force to make out checks and wrap parcels: For no woman could resist the charm of these beautiful goods.

But you can come and see them, which is better. And there are lots to make your visit interesting. Styles were never so attractive—and we were never better prepared to serve you. We have nothing here that is not of the highest quality—and we have nothing that isn't moderately priced. Let us prove this to you.

"MORE DANGER OF STAGNATION THAN OF SENSATIONALISM" SAYS REV. DR. CREWS

Splendid Address Marked the Closing Session of the Epworth Leagues and Sunday School District Convention—Rev. J. G. Brown of St. James' Church is Again Elected President.

While not favoured with a large gathering; the afternoon session of the 16th annual convention of the Peterborough District, Epworth League, was featured by an unusually good programme, there being a very excellent display of oratorical talent, coupled by the large hearted interest that was shown by many of those present, in Sunday school work.

The meeting was opened in the usual orthodox fashion by devotional exercises, which was led by Rev. C. H. Coon, after which the reports of the District Sunday school secretary, Rev. W. P. Rogers, B.A., and report of District Epworth League secretary, presented by Mr. Chester Frowde, were received. The above reports, while not of an extensive nature, showed both the Sunday school and Epworth League of the Peterborough to much to alleviate the above condition.

The election of the Nominating committee then took place and was as follows: Rev. Jas. Brown, Rev. G. W. Henderson, Rev. C. H. Coon, Chester Frowde and Miss Mary Collins, after which a very excellent address was given by the Rev. F. W. White, B.A., on "Personal Work."

In emphasizing the need of personal work among individuals as a whole, the speaker drew attention to the need of personal effort and the advantages to be accrued therefrom. "God always speaks to men through men," said the speaker, "and it is so in reference to personal work. In the old country, and the great mission centres, the church is advancing by leaps and bounds. I was startled by hearing the other day, a statement, to the effect that fully 75 per cent. of the people at 40 years of age are unsaved. Personal activity towards soul saving will do much to alleviate the above conditions."

The next speaker on the list was Rev. S. W. Dean, Superintendent of Toronto, and Fred Victor Mission Society. Mr. Dean proved himself to be a fascinating speaker, of dominant and pleasing personality, whose clean cut, logical expression carries with it that form of conversation which is so pleasing and reassuring as to engage the best attention of an audience. "There never was a time when the genius of man was so strenuously engaged in endeavouring to bring about the downfall of his fellow creatures," said the speaker in his opening remarks. "The priest and the Levite are ever with us. There is one Lloyd-George in England and I am sorry there are not fifty thousand more such men as he. It is not the people with the most money that are the first to help. In fact, they often lose sight of their responsibility in that respect. I am of the opinion that we have been working on the wrong end of the game, spending money on the wrong end. Eliminate this band of robbers. We are not confined to these conditions; we are too willing to allow these conditions to exist. I believe we have the grandest country on earth, and possess the foundations for one of the grandest nations. In the face of this why should we tolerate the above conditions. We should endeavour to bring about legislation that will ultimately lead to the reformation of the masses. We have conditions existing in our city at the present time that you would not find existing in China or Japan. We can find here among our own people, in what we are pleased to call a civilised country, a type of heathenism more scandalous and more reviling than you would find in Hong Kong or Canton. We have done much to alleviate the above conditions. In our own branch of the work, we annually expend in the neighbourhood of $200,000, and we are only one of them. Our chief idea is to get after the young, rescue them from the weekly payment sharks and other ever present evils. An old adage is, if you want to catch a man, get after him while he is young. In conclusion, I would like to draw you attention for a few moments to one of the most difficult evils that we have to contend with. That is the White Slave traffic. I do not know of this evil being present in an organized form in Toronto, but I do know that there were over four hundred female cases in the police court for immoral conduct during the past year, as a result of the above mentioned evil. 600 out of every 800 who are led astray by designing villains, are from the country. These are things that make us blush with shame. Let us stand for no double standard of morality, but let us endeavour to secure more drastic legislation, coupled by a more determined and personal effort.

Rev. James Brown, President of the District, made a few very complimentary remarks relative to the excellence of Rev. S. W. Dean's address. This was followed by a vote of thanks, which was moved by the Rev. C. H. Coon, seconded by the Rev I. Couch, and carried unanimously by those present.

Rev. W. P. Rogers, B.A., B.D., of Millbrook, gave a short address on the subject of "The Problem of the Cradle." We see in the child boundless possibilities for good or perhaps for evil. In most cases we lose sight of the latter and consider only the possibilities for good. We remember when we were first as small and as innocent. The introduction to the subject of this paper lies in the consideration of the question along three lyines, namely, heredity, environment and education. We have come to look upon such expressions as like father, like son, "A chip off the old block." It's as evident of our belief in respect to heredity. Environment plays an important part in the moral aspect of the child. The law of environment is stronger than heredity. Just as soon as a child is born into the world, he commences to adjust himself to his surroundings, from the earliest days of his child's life, we should endeavour to mould it along the lines we would have it go. Education is the third element. The home is not doing enough along this line. A great deal of the educating of the chil dis being relegated to the Sunday school and church. What about our Public schools? Our Roman Catholic friends tell us that our schools are ungodly schools. There is a good deal of truth in this statement. There is no better place to influence the child than the Public school. Leave out the moral and religious element in the education of the child and you will have an [illegible]

In response to the call for five papers, entitled "Best Methods in My Departments," to be given by each District League vice-president, only three responded. They were Miss Mary Collins of this city, Miss Pearl Burnham and Miss Bertha Jackson of Millbrook. The papers were of an unusually good character and contained many commendable features, which might be adopted with a large measure of success in many of our District departments.

Much credit is due to Mrs. Middleton and Mr. R. F. Downey, for the excellent solos rendered by them.

Rev. G. W. Henderson then brought a very stimulating and inspiring meeting to a close by the reading of the benediction.

The evening session of the 16th Annual Convention of the Peterborough District Epworth League, held last night, was very interesting. The only regrettable feature was the absence of Rev. S. P. Rose, D.D., of Sherbourne St. Methodist church, Toronto, who was to have given the address of the evening. The reverend gentleman wired Mr. Couch to the effect that he could not be present on account of illness. This regrettable feature was somewhat alleviated by the fact that those in charge were fortunate enough to secure Rev Dr. Cruise, a prominent member in the Sunday School paper world. Rev. Dr. Cruise needs no introduction to the public, for his numerous works have made him famous. His address contained some of the most valuable information, and extremely interesting points.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read by Mr. Chester J. Frowde, Secretary of the Convention, and was as follows:

President—Rev. J. G. Brown.

1st Vice President—J. J. Goodwin, Esq.

2nd Vice President—Miss A. Davis.

5th Vice President—Miss Bertha Jackson, Millbrook.

Treasurer — Mr. W. Smith Kelly, Bridgenorth.

Secretary—Mr. Chester J. Frowde, Peterborough.

A new department called the Citizenship Committee, was formed, and will be under the direction of Rev. W. J. N. Cragg of Lakefield. The adoption of this report was moved and seconded by Rev. W. P. Roger, of Millbrook, and Mr. Chester J. Frowde.—Carried.

The choir rendered some choice selections appropriate for the occasion, and other special music added to the brightness of the event.

Rev. Dr. Cruise's Address.

The excellent address given by Rev. Dr. Cruise was, in part, as follows:

"This is the first Sunday School and Epworth League Convention I have attended for over two and one-half years. I have spent several years attending such meetings as this but my work has drifted off into a different sphere and when I received a telephone message requesting me to be present, I was unable to withstand the temptation. My address this evening, will consist of three parts. First, the introduction; second, the Argument, and third, the Recapitulation. I wish to make special reference to the Sunday School and Epworth League. We can learn from the business world, and, I think we are quite safe in doing it. We can learn a lesson of concentration. A merchant does not waste his efforts on a number of occupations, but concentrates his mind and attention to one thing. Now, a Christian should follow this rule. He should have some special place where he can do something for his Lord and Master. We can learn a lesson of close application from the business world. I do not blame a merchant for being close and enthusiastic in his business in this age of keen competition, and, I think the Christian should be the same.

I think the church is very far behind, as compared with the business world. There are too many people that have the idea that their religious duty consists simply of going to church and sitting down in one of the pews, perhaps only once on a Sunday. The laymen are not active enough. I would like to see the laymen give their attention to the prayer meeting and to the Sunday School, and other branches of Christian work and if they would do this, it would progress far more rapidly. A church officer should feel the same as a business man, or an employee, regarding his obligation to the church. If religion means business, we should learn the lesson of attending to it punctually. A little rain will not detain you from the office, but it will often stop you from attending church service, and what is the reason? You should organise and work in a body. We are just beginning to see the value of organization in religious work. When we have got thoroughly organized, we have just got in a position to work. The organizing of Bible classes is spreading all over, and its benefit is being manifested in every district."

Economy.

We can learn from the business world a spirit of economy. We should make the best use of every man and every member. I think a great deal of the Lord's money is wasted. For instance, as an example, I was in a little Western town of only thirty houses, and in it were Anglicans, Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Roman Catholics, and I am not certain that they had not a Salvation Army. All these denominations were using Missionary money and preaching in that little town, and I submit that they were wasting the Lord's money. Let every church appear as a road to heaven, and I think it would be better to have fewer roads and more travelling on them. I have heard an old man say that it was the orchestra, which sometimes attends the services, that attracts the crowd. For my own part I prefer a pipe organ, but if the orchestra attracted the crowd, I would have the orchestra. People would say, perhaps, 'Oh, sensationalism,' but I say there is more danger of 'stagnation' than there is of 'sensationalism'. Why do we not use the modren devices in our church work, such as electricity and pictures. I don't believe I have ever seen an electric sign in front of a church; if I have it was a very modest one.

An insurance company, for another example, cannot get along without. Every member should be an agent for use the modern devices in our church recruits. We must recognize the value of personal assistance. The man with one talent, who has enthusiasm, will accomplish more than the man with ten talents, if he does not go at the thing in earnest. If we could bring more enthusiasm into the Church, Sunday School and League, it would work wonders. I believe we should also have training in our classes. The teachers should be trained. And if we have training and zeal we would be in a fair way of getting along rapidly in Christian work.

This splendid address was practically the closing of the convention.

The choir rendered a special selection, after which the benediction was pronounced, and the meeting closed.

BLOOD POISON IN HAND

Zam-Buk Works a Wonderful Cure

Mr. Jas. Davey, of 736 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, and a fireman at the Hudson Bay Company's stores, says: "A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk. I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days I was greatly alarmed as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discoloured, showing signs of blood poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home.

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned through the dust and dirt about the furnaces and boilers. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement. The pain was relieved and the inflammation lessened. In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores. It draws all poison and foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it too for cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction with the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent too for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

RHEUMATISM AND GOUT

Outcome of Sick Kidneys—Uric Acid Cause of Grinding Pains That Disturb Day and Night—Booth's Kidney Pills Remove the Cause

Backache, rheumatic joints and uric acid troubles follow in the train of sick kidneys.

There is no rest and but little peace for any person whose kidneys are out of order. Not only does backache keep up its dull throb day and night, but there are sharp twinges, cricks and stitches of darting pain, achy joints and sore, stiff muscles.

When the kidneys get congested and inflamed following a chill, a cold, grippe, fever, or from overwork, a fall or some injury to the back, they need a kidney tonic.

Booth's Kidney Pills will quickly remove uric acid troubles—rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, sciatica, gout, weak eyes, headache, etc., resulting from the weakened kidneys failing to filter the blood free from uric poisons.

When sediment, thick and cloudy, or gritty as sand, appears in the urine, and passages are too frequent, too scanty or painful, there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, gravel, stone in the kidneys and diabetes.

Booth's Kidney Pills have brought new life and health comfort to thousands of sufferers from backache, kidney and bladder troubles. They are guaranteed by the proprietor to do all they claim or they will refund your money.

BOOTH COMFORT

T. E. Foster, of 88, John street, Fredericton, N.B., says: "I have found more actual relief from Booth's Kidney Pills than in all else I have ever tried for rheumatism. The pains in my limbs have lessened greatly and I am better and stronger than in years previous. My appetite has built up and I eat and sleep better than I have in over three years. My general health is greatly improved and I can credit this only to Booth's Kidney Pills."

DIZZY SPELLS.

Mrs. Edward Calwood, of 123 S. Harold street, Fort William, Ont., says: "I suffered with dull, miserable pains, soreness across my back and in my sides, for months. I would have dizzy spells and altogether felt generally run down. After using a number of remedies without finding relief I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and I am pleased to say found them an excellent remedy."

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S CAMPAIGN TO BE CLOSED MANY NEW MEMBERS ADDED

The time has arrived when bedding plants may be placed outdoors with a reasonable degree of safety, and it has been decided to make the distribution of premiums to members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society on Saturday, May 20th. Those intending to become members should do so promptly, as the several lists will be closed on Friday night, May 19th, so as to get the complete list in shape and arrange for a prompt distribution of the premiums to the members.

All those paying their membership fee of $1.00 before Friday night will be entitled to their choice of a premium of twelve bedding plants, or twelve window box plants, or one large Boston fern, these premiums are to be distributed immediately. In addition, members will receive a distribution of bulbs in the fall, and a subscription to the Canadian Horticulturist, the horticultural magazine, published in Peterborough.

The total value received, reckoning everything at retail prices is considerably more than $1.00, so that the money spent is an excellent investment as well as serving to help on the good work being done by the Society.

Membership tickets may be secured at any of the following places up till Friday evening of this week only: The Examiner Office, Review Office, Times Office, Office of the Canadian Horticulturist, Simcoe street, F. F. Mason & Co., 420 George street, E. F. Mason & Co., corner Antrim and George streets; F. R. A large addition has already been made to the Horticultural Society, and a most successful year is assured. There are, however, still many who intend to become members, but who have not yet done so. The object of the Horticultural Society is a most worthy one, and it deserves the hearty support of every citizen of Peterborough, apart altogether from the excellent value it gives for the amount spent for the membership ticket.

Members of the society and all persons interested in the work it is doing and in the efforts being put forth for the beautifying and general improvement of our city, are urged to draw this matter to the attention of those who are likely to be interested, but who may not yet have secured their membership tickets. With the completion of our membership campaign, the season's work is just commencing. The success which will attend our efforts depends to a large extent on the support and co-operation of its individual members. All Peterborough expects you to do your share. Frank Wise, secretary.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed efforts, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

LET US FORGET IT.

What does it matter what evil tongues say?
So let us forget it.
Frowning, or smiling men all pass away.
So let us forget it.
What if our deeds are but footprints on sand?
Just let us forget it.
For Jesus will measure the lights and the grays,
And just His proportion of censure and praise;
When all meet before Him soon, one of these days;
So let us forget it.

What if the world should vote you a fool?
Why, just forget it.
Heroes are taught in Adversity's School.
So just you forget it.
In travail is born the child of the womb,
And care digs his steps right along to the tomb,
But somewhere a star thineth out of the gloom.
So let us forget it.

What if our love and our trust be betrayed?
Why, let us forget it.
Christ will remember the part that we played.
So let us forget it.
Yes, let us forget it! Let's put it aside,
Life is so large and the world is so wide;
And deeds that are godly for ever abide,
So let us forget it.

taken to separate questions of fact from so-called questions of honour, the speaker felt that very few questions of honour would be found. The two English-speaking countries were setting an example to the rest of the world, and he felt that the basis of agreement between this United States and Great Britain would be made the model for similar treaties between the United States and other countries, as Great Britain and other nations.

Hon. Mr. Bryan was glad to be here under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. He had been identified with the Y.M.C.A. for nearly thirty years and his approval of its work increased as he came to learn of its magnitude and as its work grew, because there had been a very large development in its activities. Although the idea originated in England, it had been so successfully transplanted to the United States that one half of the total membership or about 400,000 belonged to the United States. "It is a great satisfaction," remarked Mr. Bryan amid much applause, "that there are things of value that can pass from one country to another without having to go through the Customs House or wait for the ratification of a reciprocity agreement."

The speaker referred to the rapid growth of the Y.M.C.A. and in this connection explained that in the United States $8,000,000 were spent each year on Y.M.C.A. work, while the reports of the two National committees in the last presidential campaign showed that only $2,000,000 had been spent in the campaign. As the elections came only once in four years it was necessary to multiply by four to get the proper ratio and this would give a ratio that his audience no doubt had heard something of. (Laughter.) Whatever they might thing of 16 to 1 as a ratio for money when it was a question of religion and politics he felt that they must think that the sixteen should be on the side of religion. The institution was fortunate in its selection for a name, as it described exactly what their work stood for.

In the first place the word men indicated that their work was among men, and the speaker felt that there was necessity for work among men. The figures showed that the men in the penitentiaries outnumbered the women, five to one, in some cases ten to one. This indicated either that the men were called upon to meet temptation more often than women, or else that they were not as strong in resisting. The work was among young men, because the time in a man's life when he was more subject to temptation and least strong to resist it was when the boy was blossoming into manhood, when the spirit of rebellion was most apt to manifest itself; when the boy desired to use his own judgment, and become the director of his own affairs. This was the time of greatest peril and it was at this time that the Y.M.C.A. took hold of the boy and gave him the suggestion and the help that he needed. The Y. M. C. A. was vindicating its right to existence by proving that it was cheaper to save a young man than to bring him back after he had gone astray, and recompense the community for its loss. It was impossible to fail to see that the Association was a real benefit to the community, and that it brought a return in actual value in money. If it were possible to see the moral deaths, as people were shocked by the physical deaths, there would not be any difficulty in getting people to subscribe liberally towards the work of the Y.M.C.A. Then, again, the word "Association" suggested the power there was in union and cooperation. It had been said that the test of sanity was whether or not a man could work with others. One hundred men acting together could accomplish what one man would perhaps never dream of attempting. The Y.M.C.A. was doing a work that could not be accomplished if people were depending upon individual efforts.

"The word Christian" was the key-note of the whole situation. There was not a foundation broad enough for the work of the Y.M.C.A. unless it was a religious foundation.

The Y.M.C.A. paid attention to the development of the body of a young man, because they realized the value of this department, but they understood that there was something more necessary than to have men physically perfect, because a man might be perfect physically and yet be a perfect brute. The Y.M.C.A. paid attention to education, realizing the value of a trained mind, but the Association had a higher ideal, knowing that a man might be perfect in his mental training and yet be a perfect scoundrel. Back of this work, to make a perfect man, physically and mentally was the desire to benefit his spiritual welfare and it was this spirit that was responsible for the progress by the Y M.C.A..

The Association was one of the greatest single factors in the moral progress of the world. He was proud to be a member of it, glad to be present under its auspices, and gratified to meet those associated in Peterborough with its work.

The luncheon was brought to a close with the honouring of the toast to the King and three cheers and a tiger for Hon. Mr. Bryans.

The latter is the guest of the city this afternoon and is being entertained on a trip around the city and over the Lift Lock. To-night he gives his famous lecture, "The Prince of Peace" in the Grand Opera House.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., the president of the Y.M.C.A., in introducing Hon. Mr. Bryan, expressed his pleasure at the honour of being president of the Y. M. C. A., which was a live, healthy organization, appealing to the best citizenship of the community. Two things were needed in carrying out its work—men and money—and there was a lack of the latter so far as the Peterborough Institution was concerned.

Mr. Turner read a letter from Mr. F. J. Might, expressing regret at his inability to be present, and enclosing a donation of $50 towards the work of the Y.M.C.A.

CROP OUTLOOK

It was ascertained through conversation with a number of farmers from the Cavan and Manvers districts, that the prospects are particularly bright for a bountiful harvest. While the above statement does not apply to the winter crops, such as fall wheat, clover, etc., a considerable area of which was badly damaged by frosts and had to be plowed under, nevertheless the present bright outlook for the spring crops will tend to counterbalance the loss sustained by the damage to the fall wheat and clover.

The majority of the farmers have finished seeding and are now devoting their attention to the preparation of their root ground.

Your druggist and grocer would not sell Tiger if they did not think it a good hand cleaner.

United States Senate Receives Report on Paper Prices—Canada Can Produce Paper Cheaper

WOOD COSTS LESS

Washington, May 16.—President Taft yesterday sent to the Senate the tariff board's full report of its investigation of the pulp and news print paper industry in the United States and Canada.

Summarized briefly, the report says that a ton of news print paper is made in Canada for $5.35 less than it is made in the United States. The average Canadian cost is given at $27.58, and the average cost in the United States at $32.93. The duty upon a ton of news print paper under the present tariff is $3.75.

Several factors entering into the increased cost of manufacture in the United States are taken up exhaustively in the report. The principal increases are said to be due to the fact that a ton of pulpwood costs nearly twice as much in the United States as it does in Canada, and that many of the American mills have much older and much less efficient equipment than the Canadian mills, which is said to be responsible for a large increased manufacturing cost.

The total average cost of a ton of ground wood pulp in bulk at a mill in the United States is $16.50; in Canada it is $9.56.

The total cost of a ton of sulphite fibre in the United States is $31.89; in Canada it is $20.47. The total materials entering into the manufacture of a news print paper in Canada are shown as $16.89 and in the United States as $22.74. The labor cost of a ton of paper in the United States is shown to be $3.27, and in Canada $3.19. All other allowances for manufacturing costs in the United States are $6.27, and in Canada $7.45. Labor costs in all the items concerned run very closely alike.

One feature of the report shows that the cost of manufacturing news print paper in the United States varies widely. The lowest cost recorded is $24.50 a ton; the highest is $43. From this the tariff board strikes an average of $32.93.

At the Canadian mills the lowest price recorded for producing a ton of newsprint is $24.97, and the highest is $30.13. Average, $27.53.

In accounting for the increased cost of the pulpwood, it is shown at an American mill the average cost for a ton of wood for ground wood pulp is $10.23; in Canada, $5.70. The average cost of the ground wood pulp entering into a ton of newsprint paper in the United States is given at $13.27; Canadian value, $8.63. The average cost of the sulphite fibre in a ton of paper at a mill in the United States is given at $9.83; Canadian valuation, $7.31; manufacturing labor in the United States, $3.75, in Canada, $3.19.

To the question of how far American mills are on an equal basis for competition with the Canadian mills in the matter of equipment, the reports present the answer that the total average of equipment and efficiency is slightly better for Canada than for the U. S.

It is declared that in 44 per cent. of the American mills investigated, a condition exists as to machinery and equipment, which would force them, if obliged to meet really extensive competition from Canada, greatly to curtail other expenses, greatly increase their investment for equipment or shift to making other kinds of paper.

In treating upon the subject of labor efficiency in Canada, the report says: "It would seem then that with modern mills, American machinery, American trained managers and superintendents and American skilled operatives, together with lower rates of wages for unskilled men, the Canadian manufacturing labor costs per unit of production in the modern and well equipped mills of Canada would be considerably lower in the U. S.

Tables show, however, that the Canadian labor cost per ton of news print paper is only slightly lower on the average. The 41.8 per cent. of the tonnage reported in the U. S. carries a manufacturing labor cost of less than $3 per ton, while 54.7 per cent. in Canada falls under $3. The total average for the U. S. is $3.27, as against $3.19 in Canada, notwithstanding Canada's advantage in equipment. This indicates that there is greater efficiency and experience in the first-class mills of the U. S.

Arbitration Treaty Drafted For Three Powers—Senate Has Last Word—Some Surprise is Evidenced

INQUIRY COMMISSION

Washington, May 15.—The principle of arbitration of practically all disputes between nations, including even questions of vital interest and national honor, assumed vitality yesterday when Secretary of State Knox submitted to the British and French ambassadors at Washington the draft of a convention to serve as a basis of negotiations. The fact that this world movement would be inaugurated with France as well as Great Britain came as a great surprise, as it was generally understood that only the U. S. and England were concerned in the initial steps.

When President Taft enunciated the doctrine of comprehensive arbitration, he received a quick response from Ambassadors Bryce and Jusserand that Great Britain and France were willing to begin negotiations with this country for the peaceful settlement of practically all differences that may arise.

Secretary Knox has evolved a document, which has received the approval of the President and other members of his Cabinet, providing that all differences which are internationally justiciable shall be submitted to arbitration. It expands the scope of the existing arbitration treaties by eliminating the exceptions referring to "questions of vital interest and national honor." This elimination is the real accomplishment of the proposed treaty. The exceptions mentioned are found in the arbitration treaties the world over, and have constituted the chief obstacle to the negotiation of the

C. N. R. Bond Measure Gets Its Third Reading—The House Will Adjourn on Friday it is Expected

CONSIDERABLE WORK

Ottawa, May 15.—The question of the terminals in Montreal and the proposed interchange of traffic with the T.C.R. was a fruitful subject of debate in the House tonight when the C.N.R. guarantee bill was under discussion in committee.

Mr. Fielding announced last night that the House would adjourn on Friday. He intimated the program of business that the Government would endeavor to have passed before adjournment. It was as follows: Amendment of the Railway Act, the Banking Act bill, the Quebec Savings Bank bill, the forest reserve bill, the Grain Act, the water carriage bill, the Quebec battlefields bill, the resolution regarding the Japanese treaty, and the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. bill. Besides that he said there was the question of supplying, in addition to several items which the Government desired to have passed for the whole year, and a vote on account for such a sum as would make five-twelfths of the estimates of the year would be asked for. He said he realized that to permit adjournment on Friday such legislation as proved to be contentious would have to be withdrawn, and promised that this would be done.

The leader of the Opposition said the Government could terminate its agreement with the Grand Trunk for the interchange of traffic at any time, but was bound by a ninety years' lease to the the G.T.R. terminals. He declared that the present terminals of the I.C.R. were unworthy of a road which covered sixteen or seventeen hundred miles of territory.

Mr. Graham said he was cognizant of the difficulties of the problem. However, the agreement with the G.T.R. might not be annulled unless it would be in the interest of the country to do so, if at the same time the Government were released from its terminal obligation to the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Graham stated that the route of the railway had been approved from Montreal to North Bay by the Railway Department, but not by the Railway Commission. From Sudbury to Fort Arthur the route had been approved by both.

F. D. Monk protested against putting this bill through before adjournment, describing it as a public scandal. He asked if the City of Montreal would have anything to say regarding the terminals.

The procedure, Mr. Graham replied, was for the city and the government on the site, and the agreement to be approved by the Railway Board.

Geo. Porter insisted that there should be some check on the C.N.R., to see that the railway was not built out of the proceeds of the Government guaranteed bonds.

Mr. Graham commented that no engineer who knew the country would think the road could be built for $35,000 per mile.

Mr. Porter declared that the owners of the C.N.R. had grown wealthy in building their railways out of the bond issues, at least this was the opinion of the country.

F. B. Lalor said the whole thing had the appearance of an enormous election fund being got ready for a general election in the fall.

Geo. Porter asked how the Minister knew that the road would cost $40,000 per mile, when the Minister could not state definitely where it would be located.

Mr. Graham said that a large portion of the line had already been approved by the Board of Railway Com-

OBJECTED TO SIGN.

Montreal, May 16.—The following despatch to the Evening Telegram from Vercheres says: A demonstration unique in its kind in the history of that village has just been held. The post-office was indicated by a notice bearing the English sign "Postoffice." Our population, wholly French-Canadian, decided to protest against this state of affairs. The pupils of the college and the schools formed in procession before the church and, headed by a banner, assembled in front of the postoffice, under the direction of Brother Regis, singing patriotic songs. A board bearing in gilt engraved letters the words "Bereau de post" was carried by a number of the procession. Father Dulude, the vicar, and the brothers of the Christian schools, also took part in the demonstration.

At the postoffice the whole parish had assembled. Father Baillargeon, curate of the parish, welcomed the processionists and delivered a stirring speech in favor of the French language. The French signboard was then placed in front of the postoffice amidst the acclamation of the crowd.

COMMUTATION ASKED.

Appeal Sent to Hon. Mr. Aylesworth to Save Woman.

Toronto, May 16.—A letter from the Toronto Suffrage Association has been sent the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, at Ottawa, earnestly pleading for a speedy commutation of the death sentence passed upon Angelina Napolitano, "since every additional hour spent by her in the condition of terror anticipating her execution on August the 9th, cannot but react in a deleterious manner upon her unborn innocent child."

They further held "that the woman's condition at the time at which she committed the crime, aggravated the sense of provocation received."

The association hope that all societies and individuals throughout the country, who feel that unfortunate foreign woman should not suffer the extreme penalty of the law, in some way make their desire known to the Minister of Justice as soon as possible.

Saved Life of Mother of Nine.

New York, May 15.—Weak from repeated internal hemorrhages, Mrs. Sarah Wynn's life has just been saved by Dr. Arthur J. Savage, who allowed a quart of his virile young blood to be pumped into her veins. Dr. Savage, who is a Rhodes' scholarship graduate of Oxford, is a son of the dean of McGill University, Montreal, and was captain of their famous football team four years ago. He is now in-terns at the Volunteer Hospital here, and a fellow-physician declares that his sacrifice of blood has never been equalled in New York. Dr. Savage declares the matter is nothing to talk about, for he says: "The woman had a husband and nine little kids waiting at home for her. I haven't got a soul that depends on me. It was little enough to do for her."

MIDLAND LEAGUE SEASON OPENS HERE ON VICTORIA DAY

Fast Cobourg Team With McKinnon, Turpin and Other Old Favourites Will be Here as Holiday Attraction and the First Baseball Game of the Season is Sure to Draw a Big Crowd of Fans.

The local baseball season will open on May 24th, Victoria Day, when the fast Cobourg team will clash with Manager Quinlan's Peterborough team in a Midland League fixture at Riverside Park. That there will be a big crowd on hand for the oepning battle goes without saying. The fans in the Midland District have been clamouring for years for a League on an amateur, homebrew basis and now that this has been arranged at last, there seems every reason to expect good patronage all around the circuit. Reports from Cobourg, Port Hope and Bowmanville, the other teams in the League, state that these towns will be represented by classy teams, who will take a lot of beating. As far as the local end goes, Peterborough will have the strongest team in action that this city as had in some years. In addition to the pick of last year's City League players, there is a big squad of new player here and the only difficulty will be in making the selections, so keen is the competition for places. The practices are being attended by over a score of players, and they are keenly anxious for a chance to have their names placed on the batting order. The line-up for May 24th will be announced after to-night's practice and on Saturday the team selected will line-up against a nine from the other players for a practice game. The ball game with Cobourg on Victoria Day will be the only local attraction of the holiday and will undoubtedly attract a bumper house. The Peterborough team is showing fine form in practise and will show themselves worthy of the liberal patronage of the fans. Join the procession of fans across the river on the holiday afternoon and see the best game of ball you have seen for years. Cobourg will have McKinnon, Turpin, Bentley and other old favourites in line.

BASEBALL

The executive of the Peterborough Club met last night at Trehilcock's store and made final arrangements for the big holiday game here with Cobourg which marks the opening of the Midland League season.

Jimmy Ahearne, the old St. Mary's captain is going great guns at the bat. Last night in practice he drove one over the left field fence and a few seconds later tried to drive a plank off the fence with another vicious smash.

Manager Quinlan will pitch the opening game against Cobourg on the holiday. He is in the pink of condition, the first on the grounds to practise and the last to leave.

The Peterborough team has a dressing room in the club house at Riverside Park now and the players appreciate the improvement.

The new blue and white uniforms of the Peterborough team are expected to-day.

Dick Turpin and his big black bat will be a strong feature for the holiday game. The big Cobourg slugger is a prime favourite here, provided of course he does not get too busy with his waggon tongue.

Glenn, who pitched against the T.A.S. last season, may be on the firing line for Cobourg against the Petes in the holiday game.

Gill Shaw, the erstwhile demon outfielder of the Strathconas, is covering acres of ground in left field and has more ginger than a first class drug store.

Murphy was tried out at third base last night and looks like the find of the season in that position. He is fast on his feet, handles bunts accurately and quickly and shoots them across the diamond like Bill Bradley.

Cresswell will be on the slab for the Yannigans against the Regulars on Saturday. The young portside twirler was very stingy with his hits last week.

The Juvenile Baseball League opens for the season to-night. The youngsters are taking great interest in the league and the competition for first place promises to be very keen.

An exciting game was played in the senior division of the Collegiate Institute Baseball League yesterday afternoon when Manager Craig's team defeated Manager Hill's aggregation by 12 runs to 11. The game was a see-saw affair. Hill's team took the lead at first, but were overhauled and passed by the opposition. In the fourth Hill's nine had the bases full with none out, but did not score, two men being forced at the plate and the third going out by a pretty catch by Eastwood. The batters were: Craig's team—Craig and Hayes; Hill's team, Owens, Smith and Hill. All the pitchers were wild, but were not hit hard.

The admission to the games of the Peterborough Midland League team has been placed at 25c. for gentlemen and 15c. for ladies. The grand stand fee will be 10c. for gentlemen, while ladies will be admitted free. There is a possibility that bleachers may be erected at Riverside Park this summer, if the crowds warrant it and there is every reason to expect that they will.

The diamond at Riverside Park is becoming very fast now and by the holida ywill be in first class shape.

All Midland League players are expected out to-night as close to 6 o'clock as possible. The line-up for the holiday game will be picked to-night so that it is important that every player should be out in uniform.

The foreign demand for oats was much quieter, but bids in some instances were in line and sales of a few loads were made. The local market was quiet and steady. The local and outside demand for flour was good at firm prices. Mill feed is still somewhat scarce and is demanded.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 17.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings of live stock were 850 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and [illegible] calves. There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle since Monday, prices being firmly maintained at the advance noted on that day. The gathering of buyers was large and as they all wanted some beef to carry them over for the balance of the week the demand was good and an active trade was done. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c, good at 6¼c to 6c, fairly good at 5¾c to 6¼c, fair at 5½c to 5¾c and common at 4½c to 5½c per lb. Cows brought from 3½c to 5½c, and bulls from 3½c to 5½c per pound.

Owing to increased supplies of hogs a weaker feeling prevailed in the market and prices were off another decline of ½c to ¾c per cwt. At this reduction the demand from packers was good and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.65 to $6.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Supplies of calves continue to come forward very freely and in consequence the tone of the market is weaker and prices are lower, the range being from $3 to $8 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep and lambs was more active and prices ruled steady at $4 to $5 for the former, and $6 to $9 for the latter.

At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the supply of live stock consisted of 250 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs, and 150 calves. There was a good demand for hogs at the above decline and sales of selected lots were made at $6.65 per cwt., weighed off the cars. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $3 to $8 each. The prices realized for the cattle were much the same as those quoted above.

Insufficient Fire Protection.

Montreal, May 18.—Chief Tremblay appeared before the Board of Control yesterday and deposited his report upon the inspections the fire captains have made of all the apartment houses in the city and moving picture shows.

In regard to the apartment houses, the chief states that "in nine cases out of ten the houses are not provided with proper or sufficient protective apparatus against fire, and in many instances there are no fire escapes at all."

The reports show need for improved fire protection in many of the moving picture shows in the city.

FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. MURRAY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Murray, who died early yesterday morning, took place this morning from the home of her son, Wm. Murray, 378 McDonnel street. There were no pall-bearers.

The deceased was born in the United States in 1824. When her first husband died Mrs. Murray crossed the border and lived with her sister in the vicinity of Norwood for about two years. When she married Mr. Murray, of Norwood, they lived on a farm close by. On the demise of her second husband, Mrs. Murray moved to Norwood and lived there for some years, coming to Peterborough some 12 years since.

During the major portion of the winter the deceased lived with her son, Mr. W. D. Carl of Stirling, returning to Peterborough a week or so ago. Though declining under the burden of her ripe old age, she did not appear to be ill until Friday last, when she grieved [illegible] weather and never recovered.

Her son, Mr. J. D. Carl came from Stirling on the night of her demise and was at the bedside when she passed away.

FISHERMAN TELLS INTERESTING STORY

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured His Rheumatism and Lumbago

Strain and exposure brought on troubles that caused five years' suffering, but Dodd's Kidney Pills fixed him up.

Clam Bank Cove, Bay St. George, Nfld., May 17.—(Special.)—Among the fishermen here Dodd's Kidney Pills are making a name for themselves as a remedy for those ills that the cold and exposure bring to these hardy people. The kidneys are always first to feel the effects of continued strain on the body, and as Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the Kidneys they are gaining a wonderful popularity. An example is the case of Mr. J. C. Greene.

"My trouble," Mr. Greene states, "was caused by strain and cold. For five years I suffered from rheumatism and Lumbago. I was always tired and nervous. My sleep was broken and unrefreshing and the pains of neuralgia added to my distress.

"I was in very bad shape indeed when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, but I am thankful to say that they gave me relief. It is because I found in them a cure that I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to my friends."

Others here give the same experience. They were racked with pain and feeling that life generally was a burden. Dodd's Kidney Pills made new men and women of them.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Spanish Statesmen Predict Another Algeciras Pact—Claim That Germans Are Fomenting Feeling Against France

THE RELIEF COLUMN

Madrid, May 19.—Statesmen here are talking of the necessity of another international conference to settle the Moroccan affair, which is becoming more disturbing and more confused each week. Diplomatic observers believe that Germany is using her influence to add to the international feeling regarding French action in Morocco.

The Spanish Ministers are not satisfied, it is understood, with what it seems the result is likely to secure.

Not Necessary, Says France.

Paris, May 19.—It was denied at the French Foreign Office yesterday that any thought existed there of the necessity arising for another Algeciras conference. The French plans in Morocco, it was stated, include nothing outside of the Algeciras engagement. Consequently all the suggestions concerning another international conference to consider the Moroccan situation were untimely and untrue.

Within Sixty Miles of Fez.

Tangier, Morocco, May 19.—Wireless telegraph messages received here yesterday from the French column to Fez for the purpose of relieving the besieged capital indicate that Col. Brulard, in command of the troops, bivouacked Wednesday night within about 60 miles of Fez.

Additional French forces form an intermittent chain behind Col. Brulard and within easy reach of El Knitre. Of the three principal French commands, Col Brulard has the advance position, Major Simon holds a force holding an intermediate post, while Col. Goursaud is keeping up communication with the French base.

Gen. Moinier, commander-in-chief of the French forces in Morocco, has joined the expedition outside Fez, personally directing the movement. It is understood that he alone knows the wishes of the French Cabinet Ministers as to what shall be done when the column reaches Fez. The actual date of its arrival at the southern capital is uncertain, since its progress is precautionary and also slow because of the summer heat. Immense trains of animals are accompanying the troops, the column including 2,000 camels and several thousand mules, largely brought from Algeria.

Moorish horsemen are always in sight observing the Frenc movements and slight skirmishes occur now and then between the tribesmen and the distant patrols.

Sent to Asylum.

Brockville, May 19.—William Albert Vandusen, the hermit, taken into custody after a stiff fight at his island home near Long Point, Township of Lansdowne, was given a hearing yesterday. Several witnesses were on hand, but on the evidence of two doctors, who made an examination, Vandusen was committed to the asylum.

Found Body in River.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 19.—Geo. Clark yesterday found the body of an unidentified man floating in the river near Queenston. The body is that of a man about forty-five years old, five feet nine inches in height and stoutly built. It had evidently been in water about three months and had but little clothing on. A ring found on the ring finger of the left hand bore the inscription "Hustler John Fay, April twenty-fifth, nineteen two." The ring was such as is worn by organisers of the Woodmen of the World.

WAR SECRETARY HALDANE SAYS THAT THE RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT IS A GOOD ONE

Comments on the Pact and States That It Will Improve British Trade—Tory Noblemen Assail the Government.

THE LORDS CRITICIZE

London, May 19.—The Government was sharply criticised by the Earl of Selborne in the House of Lords last evening for what he termed "Their extraordinary suppineness in failing to safeguard the interests of the United Kingdom in the American-Canadian reciprocity agreement." The earl referred to President Taft's "very remarkable speech," and declared that when Mr. Taft said the annexation talk was bosh all accepted the President's word; nevertheless the agreement formed a precedent capable of very large extensions. It was the first time in the history of the Empire that one part had obtained better terms from a foreign country, than had the United Kingdom, and the step between receiving and giving better terms, the earl continued, they might come to think that it was natural to give foreign countries better terms than they gave the United Kingdom or the other dominions of the Empire.

Ratification of the agreement, the earl said in conclusion, would place this country in a position of extraordinary difficulty.

Baron Lucas, Parliamentary Under Secretary to the War Office, replying on behalf of the Government, declared that the Earl of Selborne greatly over-estimated the damage to the trade of the United Kingdom and the difficulties that might arise as a result of the reciprocity agreement. Canada was perfectly within her statutory rights, and the Government could not interefere. The United Kingdom, the baron said, could never offer Canada the same advantages as could the United States. Canada and the United States were complementary to one another in a degree to which Canada and Great Britain never could be. If Canada and the United States wanted a reciprocity agreement this country could not prevent it. Great Britain must give Canada a fair field for promoting her own prosperity in whatever way she thought best, and it was on these lines, Baron Lucas concluded, that the Government was watching the reciprocity negotiations now going on.

War Secretary Haldane, who recently was elevated to the peerage, said that it was the policy of the Government to give the people of Canada every facility to do the best they could for themselves. The Government held that it was not to the disadvantage of the United Kingdom that Canada should develop trade relations with the United States.

"We hold," continued the Secretary, "that Canada, with a great trade of this kind, cannot fail to be a more prosperous Canada, affording a better market for our goods and able to do more trade with ourselves. Therefore, from every point of view we look upon the step she is taking as probably a very good step in our interest, as well as in the interests of Canada. It is not for us to intermeddle in her policy. We do not think it a good thing to attempt to guide or influence the policy of our great dominions in matters of trade. We are free traders, and we intend to remain free traders."

Speakers for Borden Tour.

Ottawa, May 19.—The speakers who will accompany Mr. R. L. Borden on his political tour of the west are: Andrew Broder of Dundas, the chief agricultural expert of the Conservative party; Dr. Roche of Marquette, the leading Manitoba Conservative in the House; and Arthur S. Meighen of Portage la Prairie, a youngster who has already distinguished himself as a Parliamentarian of a high order. It is probable that the party will be joined by one of the leading Quebec Conservative orators.

Besides those mentioned, Mr. Borden will be assisted in Manitoba by W. H. Sharpe, W. D. Staples, Glen Campbell, G. H. Bradbury, Dr. Schaffner and Alex. Haggart.

Investigation Falls Flat.

Kingston, May 19—The investigation into alleged irregularities on the part of the property committee of the Board of Education have come to a sudden halt. A special committee has been endeavoring to secure evidence, but so far none has been secured. The committee placed an advertisement in the press asking for information, but with no result. The entire affair is now looked upon as street gossip.

The investigation was brought on when Trustee Wallace alleged that he had been told that a member of the board had been offered $100 for his vote and influence for the purchase of certain property for a school site.

Montreal, May 19.—The Springhill coal strike, which has been on for 22 months, is practically at an end, the men making an unconditional surrender, accepting the cut rate as well as dropping the claim for recognition of the U.M.W.A. They ask, however, that there shall be no discrimination shown by the Dominion Coal Co., compared with those who have not been on strike.

YOU NEEDN'T DESPAIR

Here's an Offer That Should Interest Sufferers of Skin Irritation

First of all we want to explain that the remedy we are about to tell you of carries our promise of money back for the mere asking to anyone not thoroughly pleased with its use. That should unquestionably establish the sincere faith we have in it.

Parasites or germs cause eczema, and eczema is probably the most prevalent cause of all skin ailments. To overcome them the remedy must of necessity destroy the parasite or germ before relief can be obtained.

Possessing remarkable antiseptic, germicidal, cleansing, soothing and healing power, the curative value of Rexall Eczema Ointment is very pronounced in the treatment of eczema and allied skin diseases, whether of the dry scaly sort, the weeping type, where there is a flow of ill-smelling excretion, or the intermediary kind, such as pimples, blotches, discolourations, ringworm or acne. It is very useful for treating hives, nettle rash, insect bites and wounds. It is ideal for the skin ailments peculiar to children.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is grayish-white in colour, has a pleasant odour, and is very cleanly for use. If you are a sufferer of skin irritations or eruptions in any form whatever, we urge you to try a box at our risk. At the mere hint of dissatisfaction, you may have your money back. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, it is only sold at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

MAKES AMENDMENT.

Senate Committee Refuses to Admit Pulp and Paper Free.

Washington, May 19.—The Senate will refuse to concede immediate free entrance from Canada pulp and paper from the unrestricted lands, as proposed by the amendment of the House of Representatives, and with this and a few other minor changes it looks as if the Senate Finance Committee would report the reciprocity bill pleasing. The amendment to the paper clause, which will make free trade in paper an event of the indefinite future, was proposed by Senator Root of New York yesterday, and at once caused a flutter in the committee. The manner in which it was received suggested that it had hearty support there, and subsequent inquiry from several Senators showed that it seems predestined to adoption. Paper manufacturers present also shared this confidence.

The effect of making an amendment to the bill is taken to mean, even by members of the committee opposed to reciprocity, that the bill as amended will be favorably reported. Senator Gallinger said as much yesterday afternoon, while Senator Smoot said in an interview that it was proposed to add this amendment and a few other slight ones, which, he said, were necessary to make the bill conform to the agreement with the Canadian Ministers, and then report the bill, probably about a week from Saturday.

LEAVES MONEY TO POOR.

Gustav Meurling's Estate Amounts to $118,500.

Montreal, May 19.—"I will and bequeath all the moneys realized on my properties in France and Germany, England and America to the mayor and corporation of the City of Montreal, to be employed by them for such charitable or other purposes for the benefit of such inhabitants of the said City of Montreal as the mayor and corporation shall in their absolute discretion think fit."

Such are the terms of the last will and testament, dated Oct. 14, 1910, of Gustav Meurling, a typewritten copy of which will was received by Mayor Guerin yesterday from Messrs. Duncan and Gibson, lawyers, of 21 Leadenhall street, the English executors of the estate of the late Mr. Meurling, as far as his English properties are concerned.

In the accompanying letter the lawyers inform the mayor that the exact value of the deceased's estate in England amounts to $118,500.

"We have not yet received any particulars of the deceased's property in France, but we will let you know all details as soon as the particulars are to hand," add the lawyers.

Nothing is said of the properties in Germany and America beyond their bare mention in the deceased's will.

Found Blind Pig.

Chatham, Ont., May 19.—License Inspector Thomas M. French, assisted by Officers Henry Darr and James McGregor, raided the house occupied by E. Termote, a Belgian, at 33 Forsythe street yesterday morning and found it to be a "blind pig." In the back shed of the place they found a number of empty and two full beer cases. In an ice box in the house and in a boiler they discovered 25 bottles of beer on ice. There were a woman and a man in the house at the time, the former being Termote's wife and the latter a man named Desupre, who boarded at the place. The house at 33 Forsyth street is reputed to be a hangout for Belgians, and some complaints were entered against it. Six Belgians have been boarding there. Charges have been laid.

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

British Columbia Members Assails the Japanese Treaty Measure and is Also Against Immigration

MR. FIELDING'S REPLY

Ottawa, May 19.—That Canada should abandon her efforts to develop a large trade with Japan and China, adhere to the new treaty between Great Britain and Japan, and restrict or prohibit Japanese immigration was the policy enunciated by Martin Burrell, of Yale-Cariboo, in the Commons yesterday, when Hon. W. S. Fielding moved the House into committee to consider the resolution extending for two years the existing trade agreement with Japan.

Mr. Burrell declared that Oriental trade was a chimera. During the last three years Canada exported less to Japan than during the preceding three years. It was expected at one time that Canadian wheat would find a large market in Janpan, but, owing to the heavy tariff maintained by Japan, Canada's exports of wheat to that country during the past three years was to the value of only $23,000. It would not be of any commercial advantage for Canada to adhere to the new treaty, Mr. Burrell said in conclusion, but because we could keep out oriental immigration and have the backing of the British navy.

Mr. Fielding, by way of reply, read the letter he addressed to the Japanese consul-general, setting forth the reasons of Canada's Ministers for desiring to continue the present arrangement for two years, as set forth in a Parliamentary return made public on Wednesday.

While admitting that trade with the Orient had not developed as rapidly as expected, he said Canada did not desire to be worse off in regard to Japan than other nations, and for that reason it was proposed to continue in the favored nation class. As to immigration he pointed out that our arrangement with Japan was not by treaty. The Japanese Government had faithfully lived up to its promise to restrict emigration to Canada, with the result that only 1,993 Japanese had come in during the last three years. Therefore it was the desire and the intention of the Government to maintain the present agreement governing immigration. If this were done there would be no possibility of further unpleasant incidents on the Pacific coast.

George H. Cowan (Vancouver), discussed the question of emigration from Japan. He argued that, under the arrangement entered into, the power to restrict the emigration from Japan to Canada was in the hands entirely of the Japanese Government. Canada had nothing to do with the matter. The vice of the treaty, he said, was that it gave a preference to Japanese immigrants over the immigrants from every other country. The arrangement was over and above the Immigration Act. Under the act there were restrictions on English, Scottish and Irish immigrants, but under the arrangement there was none on immigrants from Japan. He declared there was no necessity for the making of a treaty at all at this time.

"Why not," he asked, "exercise the power of a self-respecting nation and keep the restriction of our immigration in our own hands?"

The debate on Hon. G. P. Graham's amendments in the Railway Act was resumed in the Commons yesterday morning. It lasted all afternoon and into the evening. It was a fight on behalf of the farmer. The clause prescribing new conditions in regard to the killing of stock by railways, and which provides that railways are responsible for animals slaughtered, unless the farmer leaves his gates open, was strongly opposed by A. E. Lancaster, Arthur Meighen and other members of the Opposition, who argued that the striking out of the provision fixing onus of proof on the railways would leave the farmer in a worse position than he is to-day.

Mr. Lancaster said that it would be better to allow the law to stand as it is.

ALL-RED CABLE.

Resolution Commending Idea Passed by Royal Society.

Ottawa, May 19.—Officers were elected at the concluding session of the Royal Society in the Carnegie Library yesterday afternoon and a number of resolutions passed; one, moved by Sir Sandford Fleming, advocated the all-red system of state-owned cable.

The new officers of the society are as follows: President, Dr. W. F. King; vice-president, Dr. W. D. Lesueur; honorary secretary, Duncan Campbell Scott; honorary treasurer, Lawrence M. Lambe.

A memorandum prepared by Sir Sandford Fleming, approving of an imperial system of state-owned cables on British territory and recommending an alternative route from Australia through the Indian Ocean, instead of depending on one line, was adopted and will be issued in the form of pamphlets to be sent to every member of the Imperial Conference. In the report of the section on English literature was included a suggestion that the Minister of Mines be asked for permission to establish the library of the Royal Society in the new Victoria Museum. A motion for the establishment of a Canadian National Library was also moved, and passed.

A resolution of regret was passed at the termination of office of Earl Grey, and another at the retirement from the Royal Society of John Reade of Montreal, a well-known newspaper man.

Strathcona Offers $10,000 to Y.M.C.A.

Brantford, May 19.—The Y.M.C.A. officers were surprised and elated over the receipt of a message yesterday from Lord Strathcona, stating that when Brantford has raised $60,000 for the new Y.M.C.A. building he would gladly contribute $10,000 more. The campaign closed last week and Brantford raised $117,000, but is likely the contribution will be accepted. Lord Strathcona has already donated $20,000 each to Winnipeg and Vancouver, $10,000 to Halifax and $5,000 to Guelph.

The announcement was made here yesterday of the resignation of J. H. Crocker, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in this city. Through the efforts of the international committee Mr. Crocker has been induced to take up work in Shanghai, China, and will leave next September. Mr. has just closed a most successful two years in Brantford, having been formerly, physical director at Toronto. He recently refused secretaryships at Montreal and Kansas City.

Mere Money Growing Fruit.

Cornwall, May 19.—Farmers in this part of Ontario are waking up to the fact that there is more money in the growing of fruit than in the dairy business, to which most of them have devoted nearly all their attention in recent years. D. A. McIntosh of Harrison set his neighborhood a good example last week by setting out 225 fruit trees, 200 of which are McIntosh Red, Mann, Mongoe and Ben Davis apples, and 25 Montmorency large cherries. The trees have been planted in rich well-drained soil and in a few years Mr. McIntosh will have a wealth producing orchard. The demonstrations of fruit culture carried on by representatives of the Department of Agriculture in this district is having good results in causing farmers to pay more attention to their orchards, which had been neglected.

The inside of the house, with all the furniture, was burned; $6,000 damage was done. An inquest will be held on the victim.

Saving Up For the Big Show.

Ottawa, May 19.—Ottawa's Board of Control would not, yesterday afternoon, grant $1,200 to celebrate the coronation locally. They considered it better to await the arrival of the Duke of Connaught and spend the money available on a royal welcome.

THE BLACK CROSS

By OLIVE M. DRIGGS

She was dancing. Her feet flew in time to the rhythm. . . Now it was dark and she was lying back on a divan, faint, helpless. The voice of the Prince was in her ears and he was bending o'er her; his eyes were crossed. . . Ah, the clock was striking! It was midnight and someone had opened the door! Someone was crossing the room and bending over papers on the desk! . . .There was the sound of a shot! She was holding the pistol in her hand. . . . It was smoking and through the vaguoury wreaths she saw on the floor a body lying . . . a man on his face with his arms outstretched!

She shuddered again and the doves rose uneasily, circling about her, and lighting with fluttering wings.

"I have tried to atone," she whispered to the birds "Come back! God knows—I have tried to atone!"

Then she went on trilling high up in the scale, her eyes gazing dreamily and her hands amongst the doves—stroking them, playin gwith them.

Suddenly the door opened.

"Is it you, Maria?"

"No, it is I."

The voice was that of a man, deep and hoarse, and the foot heavy firm. They crossed the room and stopped behind the kneeling figure.

"Hush!" said Kaya, "not too near, dear Master! You will frighten the doves! See, how they press against me with their breasts and their wings—and how they flutter! They were hungry this morning, but they have eaten now and are happy. Once they came to me and I had nothing for them. If they knew better, poor doves, it is you they would fly to, and your hands they would eat from; since it is you who have fed them, not I."

"You were practising," said the Kapellmeister, "That is well, Kaya. I heard you from the promenade and I saw you. Your curls were like a halo of gold in the sun, and the doves circled, cooing. One was on your shoulder. Ah, it has gone now—I have startled it! It was close to your cheek, and you were feeding it from your lips."

"Yes," said Kaya, "yes. It is sweet to be able to feed them. You have fed us both, dear Master."

She turned her head slightly, smiling up at him.

"Turn your head further, Kaya: let me see your face."

"The dove has come back. How can I? There—move a little, my dove—chr-rp! Go away! No, he clings! See—I cannot! The down on his breast is so soft and his feathers so warm. He presses so close."

"Tell me, little one, how is your voice to-day? The same—full and strong as it was that night? Are you Kaya to-day, or Brunnhild?"

The girl smiled again.

"Look at me, child. I have come to talk to you. There is a rehearsal this morning for Siegfried."

"Ah—yes!"

"The performance is advertised for to-morrow."

"—Yes?"

"Are you listening, Kaya? Your voice has a dreamy sound. What are you thinking about?"

She started. "Nothing!"

"What are you thinking about? Tell me."

"Russia!"

The Kapellmeister gave a sharp exclamation: "That is why you would not turn your head! It was not the dove, I knew. Are you still—"

"Yes," said Kaya, "yes, it never leaves me. The curse, the curse of the—Cross!"

She pressed her cheek against the dove, hiding her eyes.

"It must leave you!" said the Kapellmeister roughly, "there is work for you to do! Rouse yourself, Kaya. Drive away the doves now, or I will do it myself. If you brood, you will ruin your voice—do you hear me?"

"Pisch!" said Kaya, "now they are gone! I will not think any more of Russia to-day."

The Kapellmeister went to the window and laid his hand where the dove had been, pressing the slender shoulder an forcing her to turn.

"I want you," he said, "now—this morning! I have come for you!"

Kaya rose to her feet slowly: "To sit aloft in the flies and sing while Siegfried seeks me?" She smiled up at him: "You have come for your bird?"

"No."

Her eyes searched his. "No," she faltered, "did I sing badly? I—I thought—"

"Kaya, the Schultz is ill."

The colour rushed to the girl's face and then fled away again, leaving her pale. "Ill!" she stammered. "you look at me so strangely, dear Master!"

"The Directors have authorized me to wire to Dresden for another soprano."

"Yes—?"

"I refused."

Kaya arised her blue eyes.

"I told them I had a Brunnhilde here on the spot. Can you do it? I have taken the risk. Can you do it? If you sing as you did that night—!"

"I will," cried Kaya, "I will!" She pressed against him like the doves, clasping her hands together. "It is only the one scene, Master: I know it so well, every note! Many times I rehearsed it with Helmandoff, many times. Bring me the helmet and the spear—bring me Siegfried!" Her eyes were shining.

"Then come with me now," cried the Kapellmeister, "As you are! Is that your hat on the nail? Put it on. The placards are out—and the orchestra sits in the pit, waiting. I have promised them a Walkure with a voice like a bell! Come, Kaya—come! You are not nervous, little one, or afraid?"

Kaya ran lightly to the peg and took down her hat. She was laughing, and her face was alight as if the sunbeams had touched it; her lips were parted and the dimples came and went in her cheeks:

"Now—my cloak!" she cried,—"quick! Help me—the right sleeve, dear master, can you find it? Yes—yes! And my gloves—here they are!"

"Kaya, your face is like a rose, and your feet are dancing."

She blushed. "You don't know," she said, "I have dreamed all my life of being Brunnhilde. When I feel the helmet and the shield on my breast, and the touch of the spear—it is like wine!" She stopped suddenly and passed her hand over her face.

"What is it, Kaya?"

"I forgot," she said, "I forgot—! Take my cloak; take my hat! I can not sing. I forgot!"

Ritter stared at her: "What do you mean, child; what are you talking about? Is it fright? Tschut! It will pass." He took the colak gain and laid it about her shoulders: "Come now, the orchestra will be growing impatient. It is ten o'clock past."

"I cannot," said Kaya, and her lip trembled: "Telegraph to Dresden, dear Master—quickly!"

She backed slowly away from him and the cloak fell to the ground.

"Kaya, you shake as if you had a chill!"

"Can Brunnhilde sit aloft in the flies?" she said: "she is there in front of the footlights and everyone sees her. Oh—I forgot!"

"Donnerwetter! Of course she is seen! Is it the sight of the audience that will frighten you?"

"No," she said, "not the audience.

Ritter made an impatient movement forward: "What then? Sacrement! You were full of joy not a moment ago; there was no fear in your eyes, and now—it is as if someone had struck you!" He followed her to the corner where she had retreated step by step; and when she could go no further, he laid his hands on her shoulders.

"Look at me," he said, "straight in the eyes, Kaya, straight in the eyes. You must."

"I—cannot!"

"I tell you you must.'

He bent over her, and she felt his hands bearing heavily on her shoulders; his eyes were flashing, insistent, determined: "You must."

"I cannot."

"Come."

She shook her head.

"Kaya—! You have been like my child! I—I love you as my own daughter! Your career, your success is dear to me. I have ventured more than you know on this chance—that you might have it. The town is crowded with strangers. The House will be full. They will hear you and your fame may be made in a night! What is the matter with you, little one?"

"I cannot," said Kaya.

His grasp grew heavier. "If you throw away this chance—listen to me—it may be years before you have another. You are young, and managers are hard to approach; you found that yourself. It is the merest accident of fate that the Schultz should be ill just now, while no other soprano is on hand, and you know the part. You sang it for me, Kaya, that night, and your voice was Brunhilde's own. Would you be a coward now? Come, and let me cover you with the shield and the helmet; when you feel the spear in your hand the fright will leave you the part. You sang it for me, Kaya. Your eyes are like a doe's! Don't be frightened, little one."

She looked at him and tried to speak, but no words came.

"If I yielded to you, Kaya, if I let you be conquered by the stage-terror once, it would be a rock in your path forever. Come with me! My will is strong, stronger than yours, and I swear you shall come! If I have to carry you in my arms to the stage, you shall come; and you will thank me for it afterwards when the terror has passed."

"No—no!" The girl pressed closer against the wall, "don't dear Master, take your hands from my shoulders. I cannot!"

"Come."

"No."

He stared down into the blue eyes "I tell you you shall come. You are throwing away the chance of a lifetime; do you understand? If you have no care for your own future, I shall care for it for you. Kaya!"

"No."

"Come, I tell you!"

His eyes were hard and cold, and her form was slight; it reeled in his grasp. She gazed at him and her chin was set like his own.

"If you care for me, Kaya, if you are grateful—" he hesitated, "ah, come with me, Kaya! It is not fear I see in your eyes; it is something else. What is it? Tell me!" He put his arm about her shoulders, suddenly, and the harsh look left his face: "Confide in me, little one, I won't try to force you. You are slight and frail, but your will is like iron; it is useless. If I carried you it would be useless."

Kaya took a quick breath. "Dear Master," she said, "it is not the audience I fear, not the audience, but it is someone in the audience. If that someone should see me and—and recognise me!"

"You forget, Kaya; did I recognise you?"

"No, but the foot-lights were not in my face. When the House is crowded and the curtain is up, and the glare is full in my eyes, then"—

"You are disguised by the hair red-blonde, and the helmet covering. No one could tell! At a distance you are not Kaya, you are Brunnhilde. Brunnhilde is always the same. When your eyes are hidden, Kaya, and your curls—the House is large—no one could tell!" He was drawing her slowly toward the door.

"You did not," said Kaya, "but—if he were there he would know."

"Who?"

She looked at him mutely, and he took his hand from her shoulder.

CARS WILL RUN DAY AND NIGHT

Traffic Will Be Continuous in London on Coronation and Following Days

For two days this summer—that of the Coronation and the day after—London will be a wide-awake modern city, for instead of all traffic and life disappearing from the streets after midnight, tubes, buses and street cars will run day and night.

At the close of the evening traffic on June 21st the underground lines will shut down for an hour. At 5 a.m. on June 22nd the trains will start again, and the service will continue without intermission until 2 o'clock the next morning, the trains being lengthened and accelerated. On June 23rd the service will be continued until 2 o'clock in the morning, and again on the following Thursday, when the State Procession takes place.

In connection with the elaborate arrangements made for the protection of Westminster Abbey from fire during the Coronation period, a party of firemen have just made a tour of inspection. The 31 hydrants in the building—all connected with a huge tank in one of the towers—were tested and found in perfect order. Special telephones, connected with the nearest fire stations, have been installed.

While the Coronation ceremony is proceeding special firemen will be placed at fixed points in all parts of the building, each being within reach of an electrical fire alarm signal attached to the regular fire alarm pedestal on the ground floor.

CORONATION CUPS BY THE THOUSAND

The King Has Ordered 100,000 of Them for His Little Guests on June 20th

The great Coronation order for the King is rapidly nearing completion at the Royal Doulton Potteries, Burslem. The order was for 100,000 cups, which are to be presented to his Majesty's child guests at the great Coronation fete at the Crystal Palace on June 20th, and for some weeks past, several hundred pottery operatives at the Burslem pottery have been helping to make the royal gifts.

About half a pound of clay, from which all impurities have first been removed, is required to make each beaker, over twenty-two tons of clay being needed for the 100,000 pieces.

The cups are being decorated, not with ordinary cheap "lithos," but by transfers from copper-plate engravings. They are of fine ivory porcelain, and on each appears a special portrait of the King (in Admiral's uniform) and the Queen, with their Majesties' autograph beneath. The portraits were specially taken and the autographs specially written for the purpose of these beakers. In addition the gifts bear their Majesties' monograms, with the inscriptions: "Coronation of their Majesties King George V. and Queen Mary, June 22, 1911" and "Presented by their Majesties, Crystal Palace, June 20, 1911."

No duplicate can possibly be obtained, consequently their value will speedily appreciate. The cups which Messrs. Doulton made for the Coronation of King Edward nine years ago, under similar circumstances, have already brought as much as 7s. 6d. each in the sale room.

OSTRICH FARM IN WEST

German Will Raise Big Birds in British Columbia

He has been engaged in ostrich farming in Africa, and after a thorough investigation of East Kootenay has decided that conditions are admirably adapted for ostrich raising. Ostrich ranches are successful in California, Arizona, Texas and Florida. The land near Wardner has been purchased from the C.P.R.

Could Not Rest at Night.

Back Was So Weak.

Weak, lame and aching backs are the primary cause of kidney trouble. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning from the kidneys that everything is not right with them.

Heed the warning: cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of Kidney Trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go to the seat of the trouble and strengthen the kidneys, thereby strengthening the back.

Mrs. John Pugh, Parkdale, Man., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and find nothing to beat them. I could not rest at night my back was so weak. I tried everything, but could not get anything to do me any good until I was told by a friend to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I tried them and I am not the same weak woman I was before. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

THE SPEED OF FLIGHT

Hints as to Shooting Ducks When on the Wing

If you have any doubt as to the swiftness of the canvasback on the wing where business calls, just fire at the leader in a string some time when you've the chance. Duck shot, when propelled by the proper quantity of [illegible] itself, but if your charge [illegible] any member of that string of ducks at all it will be the fifth or sixth bird back of the leader. If you would have a chance of dropping the leader, you will have to aim not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he will more than likely run plumb against your shot. When he drops it will be a quarter of a mile or so further off, for he can't stop short of that distance even after he is dead. On the other hand, I have found that the mallard duck is lazy, as wild duck activity on the wing goes. He seldom cares to cover more than a mile a minute, but he can if he wants to, for I have timed him when he was hitting the wind at a good 75-mile clip. The mallard's every-day style of getting over the country takes him along about a 50-mile-an-hour rate. The black duck can show about the same speed as the mallard.

The wild goose is an automobile on the fly. It has a big, heavy body to carry, and to see one of these fowl waddling on the ground you wouldn't suppose it could get away from you very fast on the wing. But the way it manages to glide from one feeding-place to another on occasion has a suddenness to it that is aggravating to the best of wing shots.

To see a flock of honkers moving along so high that they seem to be sweeping the cobwebs off the sky, you probably wouldn't care to bet that they were travelling at the rate of 90 to 100 miles an hour in the day, for the wild goose never fools any time away. His is always a business gait.—Rod and Gun.

A SWISS VILLAGE

One Will be Built About a Mile South of Golden, B.C.

With the increase of Swiss guides in and around the Canadian Pacific Railway resorts in the mountains it has been decided to erect a Swiss village in the valley of the Columbia about a mile south of Golden, B.C., and name the village Edelweiss. Each little home will be placed upon a rocky promontory, and a start has been made with six chalets. Later on it is intended to increase this number to twenty, and with development a big Swiss village will likely be the outcome. Here the guides will live when not engaged in actual work during the tourist season, and the village itself will no doubt become a point of attraction for many people. These Swiss guides are in great demand and it was felt that to induce them to settle in the country steps must be taken to make them contented. There is nothing that will do this like giving them homes of their own amid surroundings that will make them feel as if they were back in Switzerland.

HAREM SKIRT ADVERTISING

Hotel Proprietor at Lucerne Uses It to Attract Custom

The harem skirt, often facetiously alluded to as the "scarem" skirt, has at least one staunch friend in an hotel proprietor at Lucerne, who, far from considering it likely to scare anybody, has adopted it as an up-to-date device for advertising his restaurant. All his waitresses, who are pretty Swiss girls, have to wear the new garment, and although some of the other restaurant proprietors in Lucerne look askance at this unorthodox method of attracting custom, the believers in the efficiency of the harem skirt as a means of increasing trade reports that they are only jealous of his originality.

A curio which it is hoped will eventually find a resting place in the British Museum, has been acquired by James Fleming, of the American Hotel, Medicine Hat. MARRIED AT 82

Walkerville Woman Gets Fourth Husband at Great Age

Many women get no husbands, but Mrs. Linda Cross, of Walkerville, Ont., has had four. The blushing bride, who is 82 years old, was married recently to her boarder, Thomas D. Nichols, 68, by a Detroit Justice of the Peace. Both are Spiritualists, and went to Detroit to be wedded to avoid the ceremony by a minister of an established church.

Mrs. Cross, who has been a well-known figure in Walkerville for many years, became a Spiritualist about 25 years ago, when her third husband, Oscar Cross, was converted to that faith. He died about three years ago.

Mrs. Ward Hunt Cross Nichols grew more fervent in her faith as she drew past the four-score mark, and she found a congenial soul in her boarder. Thomas Nichols is as intense a Spiritualist as she.

"The winter crops have come through very well, all through the province," said Mr. Squirrell, assistant to Professor C. A. BRUTAL TO HIS CHILD

Terrible Conduct of a Miner, Who Has Been Sent to Prison

Sentence of six months' imprisonment for brutality to his 14-year-old daughter was passed at Doncaster on a Denaby miner named Thomas Birmingham. He was said to have beaten the child with a broom and pick shaft, and when he left her for his work, locked her in the house, sometimes fastening her in the bedroom. When he allowed her out of the house he fastened a strap round her arm, and led her about by the strap. She fled from him when they lived at Rotherham, and took refuge in the police office. For one week she never went to bed, and had been kept for two days without food. The girl had scars and bruises on her arms, legs, and thighs, and several of her teeth had been knocked out. DYSPEPSIA

Can Be Cured.

This disease is the all prevailing malady of civilized life, and one which oftenest baffles all ordinary treatment. It gives rise to a great variety of distressing symptoms, such as distress after eating, rising and souring of food, wind in the stomach, heartburn, etc.

Nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant; hence the great difficulty of effecting a cure.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

B.B.B. regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, stimulates secretion of the saliva and gastric juice to facilitate digestion, purifies the blood, and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. Herman Pitcher, Buctouche, N.B. writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia, and could get no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. I took three bottles and became cured, and I can now eat anything without it hurting me. I will highly recommend it to all who are troubled with stomach trouble."

THE SPEED OF FLIGHT

Hints as to Shooting Ducks When on the Wing

If you have any doubt as to the swiftness of the canvasback on the wing where business calls, just fire at the leader in a string some time when you've the chance. Duck shot, when propelled by the proper quantity of powder, travels pretty quickly itself, but if your charge brings down any member of that flight of ducks at all it will be the fifth or sixth bird back of the leader. If you would have a chance of dropping the leader, you will have to aim not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he will most likely run plumb against your shot. When he drops it will be a quarter of a mile or so further on, for he can't stop short of that distance even after he is dead. On the other hand, I have found that the mallard duck is lazy, as wild duck activity on the wing goes. He seldom cares to cover more than a mile a minute, but he can if he wants to, for I have timed him when he was hitting the wind at a good 75-mile clip. The mallard's every-day style of getting over the country takes him along about a 50-mile-an-hour rate. The black duck can show about the same speed as the mallard.

The wild goose is an astonisher on the fly. It has a big, heavy body to carry, and to see one of these fowl waddling on the ground you wouldn't suppose it could get away from you very fast on the wing. But the way it manages to glide from one feeding-place to another on occasion has a suddenness to it that is aggravating to the best of wing shots.

To see a flock of honkers moving along so high that they seem to be sweeping the cobwebs off the sky, you probably wouldn't care to bet that they were travelling at the rate of 90 to 100 miles an hour in the day, for the wild goose never fools any time away. His is always a business gait.—Field and Gun.

A SWISS VILLAGE

One Will be Built About a Mile South of Golden, B.C.

With the increase of Swiss guides in and around the Canadian Pacific Railway resorts in the mountains it has been decided to erect a Swiss village in the valley of the Columbia about a mile south of Golden, B.C., and name the village Edelweiss. Each little home will be placed upon a rocky promontory, and a start has been made with six chalets. Later on it is intended to increase this number to twenty, and with development a big Swiss village will likely be the outcome. Here the guides will live when not engaged in actual work during the tourist season, and the village itself will no doubt become a point of attraction for many people. These Swiss guides are in great demand and it was felt that to induce them to settle in the country steps must be taken to make them contented. There is nothing that will do this like giving them homes of their own amid surroundings that will make them feel as if they were back in Switzerland.

HAREM SKIRT ADVERTISING

Hotel Proprietor at Lucerne Uses It to Attract Custom

The harem skirt, often facetiously alluded to as the "scarem" skirt, has at least one staunch friend in an hotel proprietor at Lucerne, who, far from considering it likely to scare anybody, has adopted it as an up-to-date device for advertising his restaurant. All his waitresses, who are pretty Swiss girls, have to wear the new garment, and although some of the other restaurant proprietors in Lucerne look askance at this unorthodox method of attracting custom, the believers in the efficiency of the harem skirt as a means of increasing trade reports that they are only jealous of his originality.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"HELLO! Dad! where's mother. Gee; but it's hot out. Dad, I bet I walked that last mile in two-forty—that means twelve minutes, you know. Hello, mother, I met Mrs. Savory down town and she says the twins have got the mumps. How soon is dinner going to be ready? Whatever earth are you doing with that watch, Dad?"

In the degree of this outburst, sixteen-year-old Marjorie, who had come into the living room glowing and enthusiastic from a walk to town, had stripped off her gloves, cast them upon the centre table, donated her hat pins to the mantlepiece and her hat to a sideboard, somehalanic-shaped her coat over the back of the Morris chair, dumped five bundles of assorted shapes and sizes into a second chair and was just about to oast herself into a third when she caught sight of her father, his open watch in his hand, evidently timing something.

Dad closed the watch and then, without answering Marjorie, waved a warning hand at Marjorie's mother, who had come into the room during the hetangue, and with the mechanical movements of habit was starting to remove the coat from the Morris chair. "Wait a minute, mother," requested Dad.

Then to Marjorie, "I've been timing you. It took you just twenty seconds to strip your things off the way you did. Now, I want you and your mother to try an experiment for me. First, I want you to put your hat and coat on and take those bundles and come into the room again. I want you to put your hat and coat in the closet and everything else where it belongs—yes, I'm not joking—try it to please me. Fly around just as quickly as you did before; only put things in their proper places and let me see how long it takes you."

"Oh, Dad, what an idea; well, all right, if you want me to," pinning on the hat and gathering unto herself again in the wreckage which her cyclonic entrance had spread about. "You know I always mean to put things away, only I forget sometimes, and mother just loves to pick up anyway, don't you mother? All right, Dad; ready, on your mark, set, go."

This time the gloves went into the secretary drawer, the hat pins into a pincushion, the hat hung up in the hall closet, two of the bundles were delivered to mother and three taken out into the kitchen—then Marjorie stood before her father and saluted solemnly.

"Forty seconds," said Dad, "and now for the rest of the experiment. Bring all those things back and throw them around the way you did before and let mother pick them up and see how long it takes her."

"What an absurd idea, Edward," from mother.

"Go ahead and be a sport, mother; I was," from Marjorie.

"Well," said mother reluctantly, "as long as you silly children insist."

This time when Dad clicked the watch together, "one minute and twenty seconds' was the verdict. "That means, Marjorie, that at the expense of twenty seconds for yourself you can save your mother four times as long. Of course, I don't suppose that seems very much, but when it happens four or five or six times a day, well—"

"Mother," interrupted Marjorie, "I'm a villainess and Dads a scientist and a diplomat all rolled up together. Youve shown me, Dad, and it's never again truly."

"Until the next time?" inquired Dad, quizzically.

"Better make it hardly ever; you might get somewhere near that," advised mother.

"I'm dead sure it will never," insisted Marjorie, "but if it isn't, just open your watch at me Dad and see me jump."

Spring Finds the Human System

Loaded With Impurities Which Cause Pains, Aches and Feelings of Fatigue

When the Liver and Kidneys Are Overworked and Break Down Get Them Right by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

In the spring the human system is loaded with poisons which has accumulated as a result of artificial winter life. There has been too much breathing of poisoned indoor air, too little outdoor exercise, too much eating of heavy, indigestible food, especially too much meat and too little fruit.

The liver and kidneys struggle to overcome this condition, but the task is too great for them and they get sluggish and torpid, fail in their work and often become diseased themselves.

They must have help, such as is given by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no great mystery of how these pills purify the blood and take away the acuse of tired, spring feelings, backaches, headaches, bodily pains or derangements of the digestive system.

If the blood is to be purified the liver and kidneys must do it. And they will if you awaken their action by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It will not take long to get these blood filters into working order if you use this treatment. A few hours will bring improvement and you will learn how to keep these organs healthy and active. One pills a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

ALMONTE, ONT., MAY 19.—During an electric storm about seven o'clock this morning, Mrs. Mathews Lang was seriously injured by an electric bolt which struck the chimney, going down the pipes, throwing the door and lids off the stove and splintering the bedposts in which Mrs. Lang was sleeping, leaving her with loss of speech and temporary paralysis. Her condition is precarious.

MOTOR CAR ACCIDENT

WOBURN, MASS., MAY 19.—A big touring car turned turtle, slipped down a hill when the tire burst. One man was killed, two fatally hurt and two others seriously. All were bound for Boston.

WE DARE NOT SHOOT THEM.

One might as well try to prevent Reciprocity by closing the gate as to attempt to prevent the sure and certain advance of 20-day Shorthand. Moon College graduates, it seems, insist on talking to their friends.

In bidding him good-bye last night, the choristers expressed a hope that he would return some day with his mother, for they have made many friends in Canada.

THE WEATHER

That warm weather has at last arrived is shown by the daily upward climb of the thermometer. On several days it has almost touched 80 degrees in the shade, but yesterday succeeded in doing so, for the first time this season. The refreshing showers of late should cheer the farmers heart, and with the warm weather now prevailing conditions should be ideal for rapid growth.

ELOQUENCE OF GREAT ORATOR HELD AUDIENCE SPELLBOUND

Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan Delivers His Famous Lecture on "The Prince of Peace" in Peterborough—1200 People Heard His Address in Opera House.

A FEAST OF ORATORY

Hon. William Jennings Bryan, the famous Democratic politician and orator, held an audience of twelve hundred Peterborough people, including many ladies, spellbound with the magic of his eloquence and the clearness of his logic for nearly two hours last night at the Grand Opera House as he gave his celebrated lecture, "The Prince of Peace," under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. His smoothness of speech, his clearness of enunciation and his wonderful flow of language, left no doubt as to his deserving of the title he has been accorded by his countrymen, "the silver-tongued orator" and no greater indication of the appreciation of his audience could have been given than the absolute stillness that prevailed throughout his address, an even more noticeable tribute than the outburst of applause at its perboration.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., was the chairman of the evening, and in his introductory remarks expressed his pleasure not only at the honour and responsibility of acting as chairman, but also for the opportunity of saying a few words in behalf of the institution under whose auspices the guest of the evening was present. Peterborough had perhaps one of the best Y. M.C.A.'s in the Province of Ontario. It had been well housed, well endowed and received the well-deserved support of the citizens generally. In this, however, Peterborough was only doing what other cities throughout the world were doing. People had come to realize that the better a young man became, the better it was for himself and for all concerned. Business men were beginning to appreciate the value of such an institution.

The speaker referred to the work that was being done in other cities where Hon. Mr. Bryan had visited. In Brantford, in forty-eight hours, they had subscribed $100,000 for the erection of a new Y.M.C.A. building, and other similar campaigns had been successful in Galt and Guelph.

It was not necessary for him to make any extended remarks of introduction to the guest of the evening. They were all well informed as to Hon. Mr. Bryan. He came to Canada, bringing with him, he was sure, the best wishes of the people to the south. Canadians knew Mr. Bryan as a man who had contended honestly and fairly for principles that he believed to be right.

Hon. Mr. Bryan in acknowledging his reception, said that he appreciated the hearty welcome, more as a token of their interest in the country of which he was a citizen than of interest in himself. He had thought in looking over the beauties of Peterborough and on hearing of the advantages she possessed in the way of summer resorts, that a new reciprocity agreement might be arranged by which Canada could supply the United States with summer resorts, while on the other hand the United States would furnish this country with winter resorts. He was glad to be present to have an opportunity of meeting the distinguished citizen who represented them in Parliament, and he appreciated the honour Mr. Stratton conferred by presiding.

Before commencing his subject proper Hon. Mr. Bryan paid a tribute to the work of the Young Men's Christian Association in which he took a deep interest. He believed that the work was only at the very beginning of its greatness.

Civilization.

Mr. Bryan declared that he had found no adequate definition of civilization, and so he had prepared one. He would define civilization as the harmonious development of the human race, physically, mentally, and morally. That civilization would be the highest that succeeded in developing these threefold attributes of man to the highest degree of perfection. No other organization did that better than did the Y.M.C.A.

"I have made many political speeches," he declared, "and I shall make more. (Laughter). It does not require much provocation to compel me to make such a speech. However, I prepared this lecture on 'The Prince of Peace' to shame young men out of the conceit that it is smart to be skeptical. Religion is the great fact of life, and it is with that intention in mind I have arranged this lecture.

"Religion is not superstition," continued Mr. Bryan. "It does not rest upon any superstitious beliefs or anything of that nature; but it does rest upon the consciousness that man's powers are limited, that he stands in the presence of the Infinite One, that he does sin, that he does look to the Sinless One for pardon for his sins.

Morals and Reason.

"There never was a system of morals built upon reason. It would be impossible in the present age to prepare any system of morality that would not be coloured by the Sermon on the Mount.

"The man who never does any good until he figures how it will return to him, spends his time doing mathematics, when he should be doing good," declared Mr. Bryan.

"Religion is the dominant note in every life. That life is succeeded only as the dominant note rings true. Religion is the most practical thing with which man has to deal.

"If a man does good only when he thinks people are looking, he will some day think that people are not looking, take a vacation and fall. I have seen any number of them go that way.

"There are difficulties in religion that must be overcome. The religious man has not half so many difficulties as the skeptical man. You cannot get away from difficulties in the church or out of it."

The Creation.

Mr. Bryan then took up the theories of creation, dealing first with the nebular hypothesis. This theory assumed many things, but proved nothing. Behind it was the law that matter was attracted by other matter, that there were processes at work that themselves needed explaining.

"I believe that there is a Designer behind the Design," he continued.

"I believe that there is a Creator behind the Creation. The Christian always begins with God. I care not how long you draw out the process of creation by your theories, so long as God is behind it."

Mr. Bryan did not believe that man descended from the lower creation. He would not quarrel with any person who wished to trace his ancestry back to the monkey.

"That is a dangerous theory," he declared. "There is some doubt whether the average man is travelling to or from the monkey. I have seen them going both ways."

Man has a mind as well as a body, a soul greater than either. He was not willing to trace his pedigree to one-third of his being. These theories explained no mystery. The Darwinian theory made no pretence to explain the mystery of life.

The spontaneous generation theory of creation was next taken up. Mr. Bryan dismissing it with the statement that the world and man were not created by accident or chance. There was infinite power, infinite intelligence, infinite love, behind creation.

Man's Ideal.

"More is to be expected of mankind, if he believes he is created in the image of God and live up to that ideal, than if he believes he is creeped from lower life and lives down to it. Man must inevitably turn back to the beast, if the law of love is substituted for the law of hate."

Mr. Bryan believed in miracles. They cannot be escaped, whether a man is a Christian or not. There are many laws of the universe discovered. Christ in His miracles might have been operating under laws that some day will be disclosed to man's view. The great discoveries of electricity and wireless telegraphy would have startled humanity twenty centuries ago. People should not attempt to solve the mysteries of religion before obtaining the benefits.

"We know as little of the mystery of life as they did at the creation, and so, behold what man has wrought!" declared the speaker.

The Mysteries.

Love was a mystery, but how great was its influence for good. Patriotism was a mystery, but how great its power over men.

"Mystery does not bother us in the dining-room, only in the church," said Mr. Bryan, after showing that the mystery of vegetable life did not interfere with man's appetite for lettuce and the rest.

Mr. Bryan gave an illustration of his point when he explained the growth of the watermelon. The seed was planted, and when developed it had used up 200,000 times its own weight in producing the fruit. What power had made the plans, and the architecture. Until the watermelon could be explained, no man should ask for an explanation of the mysteries of religion.

"I cannot explain everything in the Bible," he stated. "If we lived up to what we do know in the Bible we would be so busy doing good that we would have no time whatever for mysteries."

He then dealt with the mysterious change in the lives of men which turned them from selfish, self-centred careful boys, into centres of radiant influence, doing good to mankind everywhere.

Many could not believe in religion because its basis was vicarious atonement. Mr. Bryan showed that this principle was everywhere in human life. The life of a mother was vicarious.

The Prince of Peace.

"No child ever paid its mother back—no child can ever pay its mother back for the suffering undergone for it," he said. "No step in human progress but has behind it sacrifice and suffering—some for others."

"The world is full of quarrels because of what men tried to get out of the world," he said. "What peace there will be when all endeavour to see what they can put into the world. Life is too often measured by income. Christ measured it by its out-go. The Christian life is the unanswerable argument of Christianity. There is no question, domestic or international, that cannot be settled upon the platform of the Prince of Peace. The emphasis of religion was formerly placed on immortality, now it is placed on life."

Mr. Bryan concluded his lecture by showing how the life of Christ, followed closely, would result in great peace for the individual and for the nation.

The appreciation of the audience was conveyed to the speaker by the passing of a very hearty vote of thanks, eloquently moved by His Honour Judge Hoyles, and ably seconded by Mr. D. O'Connell, K.C., the speakers expressing their delight with the address presented by Mr. Bryan, whom they referred to as one of the most prominent, if not the most prominent, men in the United States.

During the evening Mr. W. Mellroy contributed two solos, "The Village Blacksmith," and "The Palms."

METHODISTS OF PETERBORO' DISTRICT UNANIMOUSLY FAVOUR CHURCH UNION

Resolution to This Effect Carried by Standing Vote at the Annual District Meeting Held Yesterday—Interesting Discussion Follows, Report From the Committee on the Re-adjustment of Fields—Lay Delegates to Conference.

The annual meeting of the representatives of the Peterborough District of the Methodist church took place yesterday in the lecture room of the Methodist church, when there was a fair representation of the district, both lay and clerical. At the morning session, which was purely ministerial, two young men were nominated to be received as probationers for the ministry, and later the Rev. Coon was appointed to represent on the Stationing Committee, a worthy recognition of his faithful services in the district. The Stationing Committee is perhaps, the most important in the conference. Rev. C. W. Anderson presided.

Reports of the different charges were received and reviewed, and were of a very encouraging nature. The membership of the District was found to have increased, while the support given to the different church schemes ran hundreds of dollars ahead of the amount contributed in any other year.

An interesting discussion was brought about by the report from the Committee on Readjustment of Fields, presented by Rev. M. E. Wilson of Pontypool. The committee had met during the year conjointly with a similar committee from the Peterborough Presbytery, with a view to the mutual readjustment of some charges, which seemed to be necessary and feasible for the common good. The report showed that the ministers in five charges, not far from Peterborough, were required to drive on Sundays 700 miles every year more than they were needed to, for stipends which were scandalously below what they should receive and which could be increased by readjustment without adding to the personal givings of the people. The readjustment was desirable, too, on account of the better ministrations to the needs of the congregations which could be secured. A very strong case was presented, in presenting the report, but, in spite of the benefits suggested the District found it impossible to [illegible]

Church Union.

A resolution favouring the union of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational brethren was also presented by Revs. Wilson and Coon and carried unanimously by a standing vote. The resolution expressed the hope that the movement might be brought to an issue without delay. The scheme of Church Federation brought forward in some quarters, does not seem to meet with much favour here.

George Street, Peterborough — D. W. Dumble, Peterborough.

Charlotte Street, Peterborough — H. E. Hawley, Peterborough.

Mark Street, Peterborough—Joseph Sucee, 169 Hunter street, east.

FEARFUL WRECK ON THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, MAY 19.— It was a mistake in the reading of signals which caused the collision of freight trains on the Jacques Cartier branch of the Canadian Pacific, and so fearful was the wreckage, that auxiliaries have not yet been able to raise the engine under which, it is thought, Brakeman Miller is crushed to death. Engineer Ouellard, of Ottawa, who was under part of the wreckage, was badly crushed, but may recover.

ADJOURNING DAY MARKED BY DISTURBANCES IN THE HOUSE

OTTAWA, MAY 19.— According to the schedule, this is the last day of the Commons before the Coronation adjournment, but judging from the belligerent mood of the members at this morning's session, it is a day which may last all week. Everybody was nervous. The fight was made by the Conservatives against the government's grain bill which, according to some members, was introduced at the 11th hour to avoid discussion. The members called each other buffoons, the speaker was appealed to on several occasions and there was an uproar many times. Finally it went to the committee. In the Railway committee Messrs. Lancaster and Bickerdike had a fracas and passed a warm and unparliamentary challenge across the room.

MAN IS KILLED

John Cummings of Dacre, Loses His Life in the Electrical Storm To-day—Lightning Struck Barn in Which He Was Working

NO RELATIVES HERE

The first death as a result of lightning this season is reported from Dacre, where [illegible] was killed this morning. John Cummings, the unfortunate young man, has been in the employ of Mr. Martin Coughlin, lot 13, con. 5, Dacre, about 2 1-2 miles from Dacre church, for a year past. He was working in the barn which was struck, and killed instantly. The barn was not burned but was very badly shattered.

Cummings was a young fellow and had no relations in this country that are known to Mr. Coughlin. Father McGuire is communicating with the officials of the St. George's home at Ottawa, from which institution the young man was adopted.

The storm was not an exceedingly severe one, with the exception of the lightning, which caused considerable anxiety, but was thought to have no fatal results until the body of young Cummings was found.

GUEST AT DINNER

Hon. William Jennings Bryan, who gave his famous lecture on "The Prince of Peace, was the guest of Hon. Mr. Stratton while in the city. After his address at the luncheon in the Y. After the return of the party from the trip over the Lift Lock, Mr. Stratton's unicorn met Mr. Bryan at the boat. He had dinner at Mr. Stratton's. There were also present His Honour Judge Huyoke, His Worship Mayor Morrow, Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Y.M.C.A. and Mr. Gilchrist, Secretary, and Mr. T. F. Matthews.

FRIDAY, MAY 19, 1911

A BOOMERANG ARGUMENT.

The London (Eng.) Post and Viscount Milner are opposing the reciprocity agreement in the interests of Chamberlainism, which aims at keeping Canada a producer of Canadian products for the consumption of British manufacturers. They contend that the effect of reciprocity upon Canada will be bad. They concede that, through reciprocity, western farmers will get "fully 10 cents per bushel, and sometimes as much as 15 cents per bushel" more for wheat than in corresponding sections of Canada. But they assert that the name of Canadian hard wheat will be injured by mixing softer kinds of American wheat and selling the product—necessarily inferior—a Canadian flour. Whatever harm can be done by reciprocity is already done under the existing conditions. The London Post and Viscount Milner, do not know, or ignore, the fact that Canadian wheat now enters the United States practically free so far as milling operations are concerned. The United States miller can now use Canadian wheat, but the United States' law gives him a drawback of 99 per cent. of any duty (25 cents per bushel) paid on Canadian wheat milled for export. So that now the duty on Canadian wheat is really only one per cent—next thing to nothing. Thus disappears another bogie raised by the "tariff reformers" of the old country and some of their allies in this country. They set out to blacken reciprocity, but furnish argument in favour of it by admitting that reciprocity will add "10 cents and sometimes 15 cents" to the price of the Canadian farmers' wheat shipped to the United States.

CORONATION VIEW PRICES.

The cost of a ticket across the ocean and back is the smallest part of seeing the coronation pageant. One can get only a glimpse of it for the price of travelling privileges, as seen by the following schedule of the prices of view-points as set worth by an advertisement in the London Times:

Two days' use of a "first floor suite of chambers," with three large windows, almost adjoining St. James' Palace, is offered at 1,000 guineas. Two days' use of second floor room facing Pall Mall and St. James' street, 200 guineas for the first day, 100 for the second. A third floor room with three windows is offered for two days for £750. On St. James' street rooms others range from 150 guineas to 500 guineas for the two days. Off Pall Mall a third floor chamber with four small windows may be had for the two days for 85 guineas, although others range fro m150 guineas to 500 guineas. You can have a fine furnished house with 16 windows overlooking Piccadilly, for three months, for 1,000 guineas, or a first floor suite of rooms and balcony for the two days for 800 guineas. If your purse is not a long one you can get a fourth floor window, which, it is said, will accommodate 12 people; for 150 guineas for the two days. Remember, in looking over these figures that a guinea is worth $5.00.

With these figures in mind one can very easily see how how the best filled purse can be emptied. Even for a fourth floor window a few minutes' view of the coronation procession costs $65 per head. An ordinary citizen by selling his house and lot and travelling steerage may have the chance of seeing the coronation pageant for a few minutes.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is stated that the German newspapers are hostile to the proposed international peace treaty. Great Britain, France and the United States entering into the pact. Germany's alcofness is of minor significance. If it can't raise a fight with either of the three great powers, it will have to fall back upon Russia.

The measure for guaranteeing $35,000,000 of Canadian Northern bonds was announced on May 8 and received its third reading on May 17th. This marvelous celerity and smoothness in legislation contrasts strongly, says the Toronto Star, with the slow and arduous path traveled by reciprocity. There is no protest from discontient Liberals; Mr. Borden and the Opposition use no obstructive tactics, and there is hardly any discussion. It is when a proposal is made to remove taxation and enlarge the liberties of the people that the fighting spirit of the Opposition is aroused. Nine days for Canadian Northern legislation, indefinite obstruction for legislation for the farmer.

WHERE POLITICS ARE RED HOT.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In that hot-bed of politics, Nova Scotia, they are at it again. The Legislative Assembly is going to the country, and the elections take place on June 14.

Liberalism in Nova Scotia has had a long and consistent record for good government. Liberals there have held office for nearly thirty years, and the party seems to-day just as strong and vigorous as ever. On the other hand the Opposition has been busy for a year preparing for the contest, but apparently with precious little hope for success. In the House just dissolved there were 33 Liberals and 8 Conservatives, or just about the same ratio the other way as there are in the Ontario House.

As the Halifax Chronicle points out June is an auspicious month for Liberalism in Nova Scotia. The old Conservative Government was routed on June 13th, 1882, the Liberal party, under Mr. Fielding's leadership, won a sweeping victory on June 15th, 1886, and Premier Murray won his third great victory on June 20th, 1896. Then, of course, there was June 23rd, 1896, a day that will always be memorable in Canadian history for the overthrow of the corrupt Tory regime in the Dominion and for the dawn of a new era for Canada. June, in short, is all roses for Liberals.

A CONTRAST.

(Toronto Star.)

Strange things are said in the heat of controversy. For instance, it is asserted that the reciprocity agreement is being forced upon the people, while the Canadian Pacific bargain was submitted to popular vote. The people pronounced neither upon the details nor upon the principle of the Canadian Pacific Railway arrangement. Until June, 1880, it was supposed that the Government would construct the railway. Then it began to be hinted that a syndicate would undertake the work; and in October, 1880, without authority from Parliament or people, the Macdonald Government made its bargain with the syndicate.

Parliament was assembled in December to ratify the agreement, but it was well understood that this was a mere matter of form. Mr. Blake tried to have the beginning of the Parliamentary discussion postponed until January, "in view of the magnitude and gravity of the question presented," but his amendment was defeated by a party vote, and the agreement was rushed through at breakneck speed. All the Liberals could do was to make use of the Christmas vacation to explain the terms to the people. By the first of February, 1881, after six weeks' discussion, the legislation had been passed through all its stages. The country had been committed to a grant of $25,000,000, an enormous sum in those days of small things, a grant of twenty-five million acres of land, a gift of completed Government railways worth at least $28,000,000, a monopoly of gigantic proportions, and the exemption of all the railway lands from taxation.

On January 26, 1911, it was announced in the House of Commons that an agreement had been made, not giving away the lands or the money of the people of Canada, but relieving the people of Canada from taxation; not imposing a monopoly, but removing restriction in trade; not exempting a railway from its fair share of taxation, but removing a little taxation from the shoulders of the people of Canada; not imposing burdens and restrictions on the Western farmers, but allowing them to sell their wheat and oats where they please; not imposing burdens and restrictions on the people of Eastern Canada, but allowing them to buy and sell food where they please. This agreement—a simple measure of liberty for Canadians—has already been twice as long before Parliament as the Canadian Pacific Railway bargain, with its gifts of land and money and privileges to capitalists. And yet the Mail and Empire raises the cry of "Liberty in danger," and Mr. Borden is placed on a pedestal as a new kind of Hampden—a Hampden who will fight to the death for restriction and taxation.

It may be that this outcry is due to a genuine conversion to democratic ideas; that the same people who were willing to put fetters on the people without their consent, have now become so sensitive about liberty that they will not even knock off the fetters without the consent of those who bear them. But it also looks a little bit like humbug and very rabid partizanship.

Details Of Lloyd George's Scheme Of General Social Amelioration

The British mail this week brings full particulars of Lloyd George's latest and greatest scheme of social amelioration. There has been no such beneficent activity on the part of any British ministry since the days of Gladstone's first premiership, when the Irish Church Disestablishment, the Irish Land Act, and Foster's Education Act were passed in rapid succession. As champions of the people, Asquith, Churchill and Lloyd George form a triple succession to "the people's William." There have been the Old-Age Pensions Act, the organisation of the labour exchanges to work against unemployment, the shop assistants' bill, the fixing of fair wages in sweated trades, and now comes the greatest measure of all from the standpoint of constructive statesmanship and as regards the magnitude of the issues, the bill for insurance against sickness or invalidity and against unemployment.

It was introduced by the Chancellor himself, speaking in the House for the first time since his illness, and the members of both parties en masse were divided between pleasure at his return to the front in good voice and almost entire satisfaction with the bill. As the London Nation says, "the Achilles bears the marks of the ablest and keenest investigation of the gigantic problem which it grasps, pursued through pain and weakness." Under the doctor's care himself, the Chancellor could feel a particular sympathy with the incapacitated workingman. Speaking at one point on the condition of sick benefits, he explained that "the disablement allowance is conditional in every case on the patient obeying the doctor's orders—a very difficult thing to do."

The bill falls into two altogether separate parts, the first dealing with the problem of suffering due to sickness of wage-earners, the second insuring against unemployment in the building and engineering trades. By the first part it is estimated that nearly 15,000,000 of working men and women between the ages of 16 and 65, practically the whole industrial population of the country, will be affected, and by the latter part, some 2,500,000. There will be two classes of insurance against sickness, the compulsory and the voluntary, the former applied to the main bulk of the 15,000,000. There are about 800,000 voluntaries whose employments are of a casual character, e. g. cabdrivers, waiters, who have no actual wage, those who drive petty occupations of their own, small tradesmen, etc. The compulsorily insured, the great mass of the working population, are those who work under an employer, receiving regular wages. The men will be called upon to pay a flat rate of fourpence a week each, the women threepence a week each, the employers threepence a week to each worker, and the state will contribute twopence. Those receiving a wage of less than 15 shillings a week will pay less, in a sliding scale from threepence to one penny, the employers' paying proportionately more to make up the sevenpence a week. This is no encouragement to the sweating system.

In case of sickness, a worker's family is to receive a flat benefit of 10 shillings (about $2.50) a week for three months; after that 5 shillings weekly. In case the allowance should be more than two-thirds a man's ordinary wage, it will be reduced, but the amount subtracted will be applied towards the treatment of his health. However, a free doctor is to be one of the benefits guaranteed to all. Another feature of the benefits system is the provision for maternity cases, working women to be paid 30 shillings a week on condition of not returning to work for four weeks.

The bill provides for the prevention as well as for the curing of sickness. One and one-half million pounds will be set aside by the state as an aid to local charities and local authorities in building sanatoria throughout the country, particularly for the purpose of stamping out consumption. A very striking passage in Mr. Lloyd George's speech was his notice of tubercular disease. "We propose to do something to deal with the terrible scourge of consumption. There are, I believe, in this country, about 400,000 or 500,000 persons who are suffering from this disease. From the friendly society point of view this is a very serious item, because of the dragging length of the illness. There are 75,000 deaths a year in Great Britain and Ireland from tuberculosis, and a much more serious fact is that if you take the ages between 14 and 55 among males, you will find that one out of three dies of tubercular disease. These are the ages of strength, vigour, and service. It kills as many in this Kingdom in a single year as all the zymotic diseases put together, and a very terrible fact in connection with it is that the moment a man is attacked and conquered by it he becomes a recruit of a destructive army—a moral injury to those to whom he is most attached, and scattering infection and death in his own household." The bill will fight this demon with all the strength of the British state.

The unemployment scheme is very tentative; two industries being selected, building and engineering, the latter of which does not suffer from the characteristic evils of unemployment. Other industries may come in later, having "liberty to apply," as the Chancellor said. The workman and the employer will each pay 2½d. a week, and the state will bear one-quarter of the cost; the benefits will range from 7 shillings a week. A great encouragement is given to employers to keep their men in steady work by allowing them to pay about one-third less per workman, if they pay by the year.

So one might go on to expatiate on the wonderful skill in detail manifested by the intricate yet lucid clauses of the bill. The far-reaching effects of such a measure need no comment. Those who sneered at the "Welsh attorney" a year or two ago are now joining in the general chorus of acclamation for his splendid statesmanship. The insurance bill will rank as one of the capital achievements of the twentieth century in British history, a measure bearing all the marks of a new era.

Couldn't Agree on Chairman.

Fernie, B.C., April 28.—The two members of the conciliation board, now being formed to enquire into the industrial dispute in this district, after meeting twice Thursday, came to the conclusion late in the afternoon that it was not probable that they would agree on a third person to act as chairman, and notified Mr. Macniven, the representative of the Labor Department. Mr. Macniven at once wired the result to his chief officer at Ottawa.

What "Hamlet" Lacked.

In a mining camp town "Hamlet" was one evening given by a strolling company, and this is the criticism that appeared next day in the local papers, written by the miner dramatic critic:

"There is too much chinning in this piece. The author is behind the times and seems to forget that what is most nowadays is hair raising situations and detectives.

"In the hands of a skillful playwright a detective would have been put upon the track of Hamlet's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a manner that would have lifted the audience out of their cowhides.

"The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet accuses his mother is a very bad example to the rising generation.

"Our advice to the author is more action, more lovemaking and plenty of specialties. The crazy girl scene should be cut out altogether and a rattling good song and dance substituted."

Charles V. at Table.

Emperor Charles V. of Austria, by far the most powerful ruler of his day, was thus described as he appeared at table by Roger Ascham, secretary to the English ambassador, in 1550: "I stood hard by the emperor's table. He had four courses; he had sod beef—very good—roast mutton, baked hare; these be no service in England. The emperor hath a good face, a constant look; he fed well of a capon; I have had a better from mine hostess Barnes many times in my chamber. He and Ferdinando, king of the Romans, ate together very handsomely, carving themselves what they list, without any curiosity. The emperor drank the best that ever I saw; he had his head in the glass five times as long as my self or any and never drank less than a good quart at once of Rhenish wine." It was notorious that the emperor ate and drank immoderately, and as a natural result he suffered terribly from gout from the time he was thirty years old.

A BOOMERANG ARGUMENT.

The London (Eng.) Post and Viscount Milner are opposing the reciprocity agreement in the interests of Chamberlainism, which aims at keeping Canada a producer of Canadian products for the consumption of British manufacturers. They contend that the effect of reciprocity upon Canada will be bad. They concede that, through reciprocity, western farmers will get "fully 10 cents per bushel, and sometimes as much as 15 cents per bushel" more for wheat than in corresponding sections of Canada. But they assert, that the name of Canadian hard wheat will be injured by mixing softer kinds of American wheat and selling the product—necessarily inferior—a Canadian flour. Whatever harm can be done by reciprocity is already done under the existing conditions. The London Post and Viscount Milner, do not know, or ignore, the fact that Canadian wheat now enters the United States practically free so far as milling operations are concerned. The United States miller can now use Canadian wheat, but the United States' law gives him a drawback of 99 per cent. of any duty (25 cents per bushel) paid on Canadian wheat milled for export. So that now the duty on Canadian wheat is really only one per cent—next thing to nothing. Thus disappears another bogie raised by the "tariff reformers" of the old country and some of their allies in this country. They set out to blacken reciprocity, but furnish argument in favour of it by admitting that reciprocity will add "10 cents and sometimes 15 cents" to the price of the Canadian farmers' wheat shipped to the United States.

CORONATION VIEW PRICES.

The cost of a ticket across the ocean and back is the smallest part of seeing the coronation pageant. One can get only a glimpse of it for the price of travelling privileges, as seen by the following schedule of the prices of view-points as set worth by an advertisement in the London Times:

Two days' use of a "first floor suite of chambers," with three large windows, almost adjoining St. James' Palace, is offered at 1,000 guineas. Two days' use of second floor room facing Pall Mall and St. James' street, 200 guineas for the first day, 100 for the second. A third floor room with three windows is offered for two days for £780. On St. James' street rooms others range from 150 guineas to 500 guineas for the two days. Off Pall Mall a third floor chamber with four small windows may be had for the two days for 85 guineas, although others range fro m150 guineas to 500 guineas. You can have a fine furnished house with 16 windows overlooking Piccadilly, for three months, for 1,-000 guineas, or a first floor suite of rooms and balcony for the two days for 800 guineas. If your purse is not a long one you can get a fourth floor window, which, it is said, will accommodate 12 people, for 150 guineas for the two days. Remember, in looking over these figures that a guinea is worth $5.00.

With these figures in mind one can very easily see how how the best filled purse can be emptied. Even for a fourth floor window a few minutes' view of the coronation procession costs $65 per head. An ordinary citizen by selling his house and lot and travelling steerage may have the chance of seeing the coronation pageant for a few minutes.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is stated that the German newspapers are hostile to the proposed international peace treaty. Great Britain, France and the United States entering into the pact. Germany's aloofness is of minor significance. If it can't raise a fight with either of the three great powers, it will have to fall back upon Russia.

The measure for guaranteeing $35,-000,000 of Canadian Northern bonds was announced on May 9 and received its third reading on May 17th. This marvelous celerity and smoothness in legislation contrasts strongly, says the Toronto Star, with the slow and arduous path traveled by reciprocity. There is no protest from discontinent Liberals; Mr. Borden and the Opposition use no obstructive tactics, and there is hardly any discussion. It is when a proposal is made to remove taxation and enlarge the liberties of the people that the fighting spirit of the Opposition is aroused. Nine days for Canadian Northern legislation, indefinite obstruction for legislation for the farmer.

WHERE POLITICS ARE RED HOT.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

In that hot-bed of politics, Nova Scotia, they are at it again. The Legislative Assembly is going to the country, and the elections take place on June 14.

Liberalism in Nova Scotia has had a long and consistent record for good government. Liberals there have held office for nearly thirty years, and the party seems to-day just as strong and vigorous as ever. On the other hand the Opposition has been busy for a year preparing for the contest, but apparently with precious little hope for success. In the House just dissolved there were 33 Liberals and 5 Conservatives, or just about the same ratio the other way as there are in the Ontario House.

As the Halifax Chronicle points out June is an auspicious month for Liberalism in Nova Scotia. The old Conservative Government was routed on June 13th, 1882, the Liberal party, under Mr. Fielding's leadership, won a sweeping victory on June 15th, 1886, and Premier Murray won his third great victory on June 20th, 1896. Then, of course, there was June 23rd, 1896, a day that will always be memorable in Canadian history for the overthrow of the corrupt Tory regime in the Dominion and for the dawn of a new era for Canada. June, in short, is all roses for Liberals.

A CONTRAST.

(Toronto Star.)

Strange things are said in the heat of controversy. For instance, it is asserted that the reciprocity agreement is being forced upon the people, while the Canadian Pacific bargain was submitted to popular vote. The people pronounced neither upon the details nor upon the principle of the Canadian Pacific Railway arrangement. Until June, 1880, it was supposed that the Government would construct the railway. Then it began to be hinted that a syndicate would undertake the work; and in October, 1880, without authority from Parliament or people, the Macdonald Government made its bargain with the syndicate.

Parliament was assembled in December to ratify the agreement, but it was well understood that this was a mere matter of form. Mr. Blake tried to have the beginning of the Parliamentary discussion postponed until January, "in view of the magnitude and gravity of the question presented," but his amendment was defeated by a party vote, and the agreement was rushed through at breakneck speed. All the Liberals could do was to make use of the Christmas vacation to explain the terms to the people. By the first of February, 1881, after six weeks' discussion, the legislation had been passed through all its stages. The country had been committed to a grant of $25,000,000, an enormous sum in those days of small things, a grant of twenty-five million acres of land, a gift of completed Government railways worth at least $26,-000,000, a monopoly of gigantic proportions, and the exemption of all the railway lands from taxation.

On January 26, 1911, it was announced in the House of Commons that an agreement had been made, not giving away the lands or the money of the people of Canada, but relieving the people of Canada from taxation; not imposing a monopoly, but removing restriction in trade; not exempting a railway from its fair share of taxation, but removing a little taxation from the shoulders of the people of Canada; not imposing burdens and restrictions on the Western farmers, but allowing them to sell their wheat and oats where they please; not imposing burdens and restrictions on the people of Eastern Canada, but allowing them to buy and sell food where they please. This agreement—a simple measure of liberty for Canadians—has already been twice as long before Parliament as the Canadian Pacific Railway bargain, with its gifts of land and money and privileges to capitalists. And yet the Mail and Empire raises the cry of "Liberty in danger," and Mr. Borden is placed on a pedestal as a new kind of Hampden—a Hampden who will fight to the death for restriction and taxation.

It may be that this outcry is due to a genuine conversion to democratic ideas; that the same people who were willing to put fetters on the people without their consent, have now become so sensitive about liberty that they will not even knock off the fetters without the consent of those who bear them. But it also looks a little bit like humbug and very rabid partisanship.

Details Of Lloyd George's Scheme Of General Social Amelioration

The British mail this week brings full particulars of Lloyd George's latest and greatest scheme of social amelioration. There has been no such beneficent activity on the part of any British ministry since the days of Gladstone's first premiership, when the Irish Church Disestablishment, the Irish Land Act, and Foster's Education Act were passed in rapid succession. As champions of the people, Asquith, Churchill and Lloyd George form a triple succession to "the people's William." There have been the Old-Age Pensions Act, the organization of the labour exchanges to work against unemployment, the shop assistants' bill, the fixing of fair wages in sweated trades, and now comes the greatest measure of all from the standpoint of constructive statesmanship and as regards the magnitude of the issues, the bill for insurance against sickness or invalidity and against unemployment.

It was introduced by the Chancellor himself, speaking in the House for the first time since his illness, and the members of both parties en masse were divided between pleasure at his return to the fray in good voice and almost entire satisfaction with the bill. As the London Nation says, "the scheme bears the marks of the ablest and keenest investigation of the gigantic problem which it grasps, pursued through pain and weakness." Under the doctor's care himself, the Chancellor could feel a particular sympathy with the incapacitated workingman. Speaking at one point on the condition of sick benefits, he explained that "the disablement allowance is conditional in every case on the patient obeying the doctor's orders—a very difficult thing to do."

The bill falls into two altogether separate parts, the first dealing with the problem of suffering due to sickness of wage-earners, the second insuring against unemployment in the building and engineering trades. By the first part it is estimated that nearly 15,000,000 of working men and women between the ages of 16 and 65, practically the whole industrial population of the country, will be affected, and by the latter part, some 2,500,000. There will be two classes of insurance against sickness, the compulsory and the voluntary, the former applied to the main bulk of the 15,000,000. There are about 800,-000 voluntaries whose employments are of a casual character, e. g. cabdrivers, waiters, who have no actual wage, those who drive petty occupations of their own, small tradesmen, etc. The compulsorily insured, the great mass of the working population, are those who work under an employer, receiving regular wages. The men will be called upon to pay a flat rate of fourpence a week each, the women threepence a week each, the employers threepence a week to each worker, and the state will contribute twopence. Those receiving a wage of less than 15 shillings a week will pay less, in a sliding scale from threepence to one penny, the employers paying proportionately more to make up the sevenpence a week. This is no encouragement to the sweating system.

In case of sickness, a worker's family is to receive a flat benefit of 10 shillings (about $2.50) a week for three months; after that 5 shillings weekly. In case the allowance should be more than two-thirds a man's ordinary wage, it will be reduced, but the amount subtracted will be applied towards the treatment of his health. However, a free doctor is to be one of the benefits guaranteed to all. Another feature of the benefits system is the provision for maternity cases, working women to be paid 30 shillings a week on condition of not returning to work for four weeks.

The bill provides for the prevention as well as for the curing of sickness. One and one-half million pounds will be set aside by the state as an aid to local charities and local authorities in building sanatoria throughout the country, particularly for the purpose of stamping out consumption. A very striking passage in Mr. Lloyd George's speech was his notice of tubercular disease. "We propose to do something to deal with the terrible scourge of consumption. There are, I believe, in this country, about 400,000 or 500,000 persons who are suffering from this disease. From the friendly society point of view this is a very serious item, because of the dragging length of the illness. There are 75,000 deaths a year in Great Britain and Ireland from tuberculosis, and a much more serious fact is that if you take the ages between 14 and 55 among males, you will find that one out of three dies of tubercular disease. These are the ages of strength, vigour, and service. It kills as many in this Kingdom in a single year as all the zymotic diseases put together, and a very terrible fact in connection with it is that his moment a man is attacked and conquered by it he becomes a recruit of a destructive army—a moral injury to those to whom he is most attached, and scattering infection and death in his own household." The bill will fight this demon with all the strength of the British state.

The unemployment scheme is very tentative; two industries being selected, building and engineering, the latter of which does not suffer from the characteristic evils of unemployment. Other industries may come in later, having "liberty to apply," as the Chancellor said. The workman and the employer will each pay 2½d. a week, and the state will bear one-quarter of the cost; the benefits will range from 7 shillings a week. A great encouragement is given to employers to keep their men in steady work by allowing them to pay about one-third less per workman, if they pay by the year.

So one might go on to expatiate on the wonderful skill in detail manifested by the intricate yet lucid clauses of the bill. The far-reaching effects of such a measure need no comment. Those who sneered at the "Welsh attorney" a year or two ago are now joining in the general chorus of acclamation for his splendid statesmanship. The insurance bill will rank as one of the capital achievements of the twentieth century in British history, a measure bearing all the marks of a new era.

What "Hamlet" Lacked.

In a mining camp town "Hamlet" was one evening given by a strolling company, and this is the criticism that appeared next day in the local papers, written by the miner dramatic critic:

"In the hands of a skillful playwright a detective would have been put upon the track of Hamlet's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a manner that would have lifted the audience out of their cowhides.

"The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet censors his mother is a very bad example to the rising generation.

"Our advice to the author is more action, more lovemaking and plenty of specialties. The crazy girl scene should be cut out altogether and a rattling good song and dance substituted."

Charles V. at Table.

Emperor Charles V. of Austria, by far the most powerful ruler of his day, was thus described as he appeared at table by Roger Ascham, secretary to the English ambassador, in 1550: "I stood hard by the emperor's table. He had four courses; he had sod beef—very good—roast mutton, baked hare; these be no service in England. The emperor hath a good face, a constant look; he fed well of a capon; I have had a better from mine hostess Barnes many times in my chamber. He and Ferdinando, king of the Romans, ate together very handsomely, carving themselves where they list, without any curiosity. The emperor drank the best that ever I saw; he had his head in the glass five times as long as any of us and never drank less than a good quart at once of Rhenish wine." It was notorious that the emperor ate and drank immoderately, and as a natural result he suffered terribly from gout from the time he was thirty years old.

Peterborough Line-up For Holiday Game Chosen

Manager Quinlan Announces His Team After Last Night's Practice and the Squad Will Have a Game To-morrow in Final Preparation for the Big Victoria Day Game

Manager Quinlan has announced the line-up for the Peterborough team in the opening Midland League game against Cobourg here on May 24th, the team having been selected after last night's splendid practise at Riverside Park. The list for Wednesday's game will be as follows:

Wilder—catcher.
McFadden—catcher.
Quinlan—pitcher.
Rahmel—pitcher.
M. O'Brien—first base.
O'Hearne—Second base.
Wettlaufer—short stop.
Murphy—third base.
Shaw—left field.
W. O'Brien—centre field.
Craig—right field.
Bryde—utility.

The above team will play the Yanigans a practice game at Riverside Park Wednesday afternoon at 3.30. These players and all the rest of the squad are expected to be on hand in uniform, sharp on time to-morrow.

There is a great deal of interest, locally, in the opening of the Midland League on the holiday and there will undoubtedly be a big crowd of fans on hand to see the clash between Dick Turpin's Cobourg outfit and the Petes. The local team is the strongest that has represented the city in some years, and are confident of starting the season by putting a crimp in the Lakeshore bunch. Cobourg has an annoying habit of turning out a strong team every season, and it is said that the 1911 proposition will be an awkward task for any team in the Crawford circuit. The holiday game is called for three o'clock and as it is the only sporting event of the day will undoubtedly attract a big crowd to the pretty park across the river.

The Standard of Clothes Value

A good many men have the notion that because a suit is made-to-order it must necessarily be good. They never seem to take into account the variations in quality that price-makes. Gold is gold, yet we know that gold can be had in any degree of quality varying from the commercial 10k to the pure 24k. It's the same with made-to-order clothing. A suit that's worth the same will stand you, in custom tailoring, about twice as much as you'd pay for the same fine fabrics, rich patterns, exact fit and expert tailoring of Sovereign Brand Clothes. The reason we are able to offer the same sound value for less money is due solely to our modern and efficient clothes-making organization.

The leading clothes shop in your town handles Sovereign Brand Clothes. Ask to see the newest Spring and Summer styles. You'll find some of the "tailless" patterns you ever saw, made up in styles that have that style and smartness seldom seen outside the big fashion centres.

ROAD RACE A FEATURE OF ENNISMORE PICNIC

Ten Mile Event Starting at the Examiner Office and Finishing at the Ennismore Picnic Grounds—Valuable Prizes Are Offered and the Contest Furnishes Good Competition for the Long Distance Men of the County.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore, is announcing a big road race as one of the features of the celebrated Ennismore picnic, which takes place this year on June 13th. The distance will be ten miles and the course will be from the Examiner office to the Ennismore picnic grounds, the race being billed to start from Peterborough at 1.30 p.m. For first prize a valuable gold watch will be given, while to the second man across the line will be presented a handsome silver watch. The race will be open to all amateurs who are bona-fide residents of the county of Peterborough, and as it is the first long-distance event of the year, will undoubtedly prove a very attractive competition for the runners of the district. A number of local men who have been in training for some time will, it is expected, take part, while there are runners outside of Peterborough who will be glad of the opportunity of taking part. It has been a big drawback to road racing in this district, that there have not been enough events to make it worth while for the runners to keep in training.

The Examiner road race covers the field in the autumn, but during the spring and summer there have been no events in which the long distance men could compete and the sport has not grown in favour among athletes on that account. The race announced by Rev. Father Fitzpattrick for June 13 will therefore fill a long felt want, and if it is made an annual event, and there is reason to expect it will if it is a success this year, the distance men will be grateful to the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and those connected with him in the Ennismore picnic.

Further particulars of the race will be given from time to time in the Examiner.

A BENEFIT FOOTBALL GAME HAS BEEN ARRANGED

A benefit match has been arranged between the C.G.E. Football Club and an eleven from the Church Football League. The beneficiary is a young man who came to Canada last year, and was injured in a practice at the commencement of the season. The doctor is uncertain as to whether he will be a cripple for life, and by the way of giving the young man a little assistance the C.G.E. offered to play the pick of the church league. The date of the match is fixed for Wednesday evening, June 21st. This will be a good match. The C.G.E. team's reputation is well known, and the team they meet is as follows:

Goal, Callandine, (Knox.)
Backs—Marsh (Park St.); Fitzgerald (Y.M.C.A.)
Halves—Hopper (All Saints), Simmonite, capt. (St. Johns), Pitcher (Park St.)
Forwards—Sharman (St. Johns), Williams (Cold Springs.) aGsh. (St. James), Turner (St. James), Dawson (All Saints.)
Reserves—
Goal—Taylor (Cold Springs.)
Back—Braun (St. James.)
Half—Hardy, (Knox.)
Forward—Curtis (All Saints.)

This team will make the C. G. E. exert themselves and will settle the question as to the ability of the respective centre halves. No lover of good football should miss this match.

Church League Teams' Line-ups For To-morrow

All Saints meet St. John's to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 on the ground opposite Park Street Baptist Church and both teams are out to win, so a good, hard game is looked for. Mr. H. Relton, who gave such good satisfaction in the St. John's-Park Street game last week, will handle the game.

All Saints will line-up as follows: Goal, Moraity, backs, Rew and Robinson, half-backs, Hooper, Dawson and James, forwards, Willis Edwards, Curtis, Abbott and Downes, spares, Cornwall and Vickers.

The Park Street line-up against Y. M.C.A. for tomorrow's game will be —Goal, Webb; left back, Reay; right Marsh; half-backs, Pitcher, Marks, McDesmid; forwards, King, Thorne, Kennedy, Tooley, H. Smith; reserves [illegible] and Stephens.

Kingston; Miller, Outline. Kick-off, 2.30.

St. Andrew's meet Knox church on Saturday at the Exhibition grounds, (George St. entrance) when a good game is promised. Kickoff at three o'clock, promptly. St. James' are asked to be at the church by 2.30.

Following will be St. James' line-up: Leader, goal; Grobb, Braun, (Capt) backs; Sandiford, Hudson, Sparrow, half-backs; C. Hotston, Farr, Turner, Gash, E. Hotston, forwards; reserve, C. Barrett.

The Y.M.C.A. football team will meet Park street Baptist church team in a church league game at Riverside Park on Saturday and every man is requested to be on hand ready to play at 2.30 p.m. The team will be selected from Fleming, Doris, Fitzgerald, Hampton, McPherson, Adams, Bowness, Flowers, Miller, Lane, Tarte, Kerr, Ingram, Carniff.

The local "Y" will likely be represented at Bellaville on Victoria day in the Pentathlon contest, and also the several other events on the programme. The Pentathlon team will be selected from E. Wood, H. Hill, C. Bartlett, S. Canniff, W. Willis, H. Smith. There will also be a workout held on Monday evening at Riverside Park. Commencing Friday, May 26, the first events in the Stratton Cup contest will be run off, and will be the 100 yards dash and running high jump.

Those playing in the "Y" tennis tournament are requested to arrange for their games at the earliest possible date.

FROM MONTREAL TO PORT ARTHUR

Government Aid to the Canadian Northern in Building 450 New Line

The Government will ask Parliament to guarantee the bonds of the Canadian Northern Railway Company to the extent of $35,000 per mile for the whole distance from Port Arthur to Montreal via Sudbury and the Ottawa Valley. The new line will, with the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, give practically all eastern Ontario points three competing lines to the West, and to the West it will give three competing lines to Canadian seaports. It will open up an immense stretch of rich agricultural and mineral country in northern Ontario and the Ottawa Valley. It will run through the clay belt of the Ontario hinterland at distances varying from 30 to 50 miles from the line of the National Transcontinental Railway, which skirts the northern part of the clay belt. In addition the company proposes to construct a line from the Georgian Bay north to the main line, tapping a country now unserved by railways. The company has now a through line from Ottawa to Quebec. It is proposed to begin at once the construction of a line branching off from this at Hawkesbury to Montreal. From Ottawa the road will run on the south side of the Ottawa River to the Chats, about thirty miles west of Ottawa. From there it will cross the Ottawa River and run along the north shore to Portage du Fort, where it will again cross the Ottawa, and proceed thence nearly in a straight line to Sudbury, and thence along the route now surveyed to Port Arthur.

A WESTERN PIONEER

W. H. Elford, a Durham Farmer Who Went West Years Ago

Away back before the middle of last century W. H. Elford, now of Carman, Man., was born on a farm in Durham county, Ont. In 1843 he went to the Canadian West. He had a few hundred dollars and some effects. He took with him three horses, a cow and a wagon, and located near Carman, renting the farm he now lives on and owns along with surrounding acres. Forethought led him to bring along a seat. In this he lived for some eight months while a house was being erected. Lumber had to be hauled twelve miles, and although the teaming was done in July, it was necessary to build brush portages across some low places. Mr. Elford now has three half-sections instead of a small rented farm. Bluffs have been allowed to stand here and there for shelter, and the home is well surrounded by trees. He has five daughters and three sons. His advice to newcomers to the West is to keep out of debt, unless absolutely unavoidable if possible, he says, keep out of obligation in regard to implements, and do not discard a machine because it does not work well. He also urges the advisability of clean, pure seed, and the cropping of a moderate acreage under thorough cultivation rather than a greater number of acres half done. Then, he says, begin seeding down early to keep humus in the soil and get stock as soon as possible.

FIRE IN HISTORIC CHURCH

The historic Gordon Church at St. Elmo, near Cornwall, Ont., made famous by Ralph Connor's "Man from Glengarry," recently has a narrow escape from destruction. As the people were assembling for worship smoke came pouring out of the vestry into the church. Investigation showed that fire had started at the door and had made some progress under the floor, which was chopped so as to get water on to the flames. It is thought that the fire was caused by someone carelessly dropping a lighted match.

TEN STOREYS THE LIMIT

The City Council of Calgary, Alberta, has passed a by-law prohibiting the erection of buildings more than ten storeys in height. The feeling in Calgary is that the overpoweringly tall edifice is not a beauty spot, but rather an architectural eyesore. Hence that tabooing of the "scraper."

VANDALISM OR ROBBERY

Unknown Persons Tried to Wreck Statue of Maisonneuve

Montreal authorities were greatly exercised recently when they found that an effort had been made by some unknown persons to wreck the famous statue of Maisonneuve, opposite Notre Dame Church. It was noticed by the caretaker that a large statue of Jeanne Mance, at the base of the pedestal, was out of plumb, and examination showed that the bronze statue, weighing over a ton, had been pried over eight inches off its base, and was nearly toppled over into the fountain around the statue. It was evident that whoever was responsible for the mischief had been disturbed, as they had left behind them a large iron crow bar with which they had pried the statue over.

It is not known whether robbery or mere vandalism was the motive.

TO BLOW UP SCHOOL

Vancouver Boys Wanted to Emulate Los Angeles Miscreants

Four small boys of Vancouver, the eldest only thirteen years of age, confessed that they were only waiting to obtain a full two-minute cap before blowing up the school which they attended.

With two sticks of dynamite and the end of a fuse placed in holes in the basement of a two-roomed school on Wilson Road, South Vancouver, the lads were found.

They stated that they had been fired to attempt the deed through reading of the explosions at Los Angeles and other cities. The boys claimed, however, that they had no intention of lighting the fuse when school was in progress, but meant to wait until there was no one in the building.

RIEL REBELLION RECALLED

Adam W. Graham, St. Thomas, who lost his property at Fort Garry in 1870, has been given $642 by the Government. In the troublous times in the Canadian West in 1871 Mr. Graham and a number of others were captured by the rebel, Louis Riel, and imprisoned for ten weeks at old Fort Garry. About three years ago Mr. Graham started a movement to secure compensation for the losses incurred while a prisoner at Fort Garry, including loss of clothing, ten weeks' time and travelling expenses. Although it is over forty years since that loss was incurred, Mr. Graham received no interest, the amount representing about his actual loss at the time.

OBITUARY

J. M. DONOVAN.

There passed away last night a well-known and highly-respected citizen, in the person of Mr. J. M. Donovan. Deceased, who was in his 53nd year, was born in this city in the year 1859 and with the exception of twelve years that he spent in New Orleans, and other points in the United States, has been a resident of this city the remaining portion of his life. After his return from Michigan, Mr. Donovan opened up a grocery establishment on Charlotte St., where Lilleo's store is now located. A few years ago ill health forced him to retire, but subsequently he opened up business at the present stand.

Mr. Donovan was a Liberal in politics, a member of the local T. A. S., and of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Deceased had been in ill health for some time, but the nature of his illness was not considered to be serious. On Thursday he suffered a relapse and sank rapidly. Death occurred last night at 11.30.

The late Mr. Donovan was well known for his sterling integrity and strict honesty in all matters pertaining to business. His many estimable qualities won for him a wide circle of admiring friends.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, one sister, Mrs. N. Tromley, of this city, and two brothers, James of Toronto, and William of Seattle.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

EULOGIES OF GREAT ORATOR HELD LARGE AUDIENCE SPELLBOUND

in his usual splendid voice, and with his usual expression and feeling. Mr. J. H. Renwick, organist of the George Street Methodist Church, played the accompaniments sympathetically.

The stage was very appropriately decorated with the flags of the United States and the British Empire, the Stars and Stripes being entwined with the Union Jack.

MR. RENWICK HONOURED

(Port Hope Guide.)

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Renwick, who have been staying the past few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. Grandy, were pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening. A number of their friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grandy, and presented Mr. Renwick with a well-filled purse and the following address:

Respected Sir,—On behalf of your many friends in Port Hope, whose personal regards, sympathy and respect you have merited by the very satisfactory discharge of all the duties devolving upon you, not only as organist and choirmaster of the Methodist church, and the efficient leader of our Citizens' Band, but in the exercise of the best of moral qualities so characteristic of you as a man, that have stamped you as a good citizen of our town for a period of nearly twelve years, that we thus present to you this address.

Now, sir, we may say that since your advent among us as time has rolled on you have left a marked impression on the minds of all for good. By your gentlemanly deportment, calm demeanour and uprightness, you have been a pattern for the youth, the worthy associate of those of your own years and have lent inspiration to men of maturity.

And as this is the eve of your departure, many are our regrets that you are leaving us and fervent are our prayers for your success in life.

In order to more fully manifest our appreciation, we ask you to be good enough to accept this small token of our favour as a memento of our esteem for your worth as a man of honour.

We therefore, bid you, Mrs. Renwick and Jack, an affectionate farewell, and may your mantle fall on your successor here.

Mrs. Renwick was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

A very enjoyable time was spent in music and games and a dainty lunch served at the close.

Mr. and Mrs. Renwick left on Tuesday for Peterborough.

THE "RED MILL" COMING BIG HOLIDAY ATTRACTION

Fresh from its triumphs of a year's run at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York City, followed by engagements of three months each in Chicago, Philadelphia, and Boston, Martin & Emery Co's. complete production of the Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert comic opera masterpiece, "The Red Mill," will be seen at the Grand on Victoria Day, Wednesday, May 24, matinee and night.

In collaborating, Messrs. Blossom and Herbert have had the contrasting good fortune of not only duplicating their former success "Mlle. Modiste," but have in "The Red Mill" one that will far exceed it in many ways.

The story is to the point, describing the trouble in which two American tourists find themselves after spending their money too recklessly, after which they unconsciously prove heroes in rescuing a persecuted maiden from an obdurate parent by entering the mill on the blades of a revolving fan, in which manner they escape with the girl on to the ground, and restore her to her lover.

Victor Herbert has composed a score of the whistleable kind of music which has already gone through the country with telling effect. Messrs. Martin and Emery have provided an admirable company of some fifty people and have faithfully reproduced scenes and costumes of quaint and picturesque Holland.

Funeral Of Mrs. Cameron

The funeral of the late Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron was held this morning from the family residence, corner of Stewart and Charlotte streets and was private. The services at the Chapel in the cemetery were conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. Chas. Carpenter. The ball-bearers were six members of the medical profession of the city, Drs. Halliday, Neal, McCulloch, McCullough, Young and Amys. Many floral tributes were received from people living outside of Peterborough.

¶ Now it's all changed!

¶ Every year we've made progress, but, in the last few years we have been a conquering force of irresistible power in the tailoring of good clothes.

¶ Years ago we started out to make clothes "just as good" as retail tailoring. To-day we can proudly prove that Semi-ready garments are tailored "better than the tailor's best."

¶ If you are one of the men who came, who saw, and went away, it's worth money to you to come again now.

¶ The man we want to see is the man who can say "I have always had my clothes made to order by a tailor."

¶ If you cannot surmount that idea at one jump then I can make you to order a special order Semi-ready garment from any one of 350 samples which I can show you.

POST CARD COLUMN

RE BEAUTIFYING THE CITY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Now that the Horticultural Society and the City Council are working harmoniously together to one end—beautifying the city—I would like to appeal to the good graces of the above mentioned bodies to ameliorate the conditions of Smith street, between Harvey street and the new bridge. The ratepayers on this street would like to have the old, wooden sidewalk, now in use, removed, and a cement walk placed outside the tree line. The City Engineer, at the present time, has staked out a line inside the tree line for a new walk, but the people are very much dissatisfied with this idea and claim that a walk placed inside the tree line would spoil their plans of helping to beautify the street. A number of useless poles are an eyesore to the people on this street, also, and they ask that every effort be made by those in authority to see that these alterations are carried out. Thanking you for space, etc., I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Smith Street Resident.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

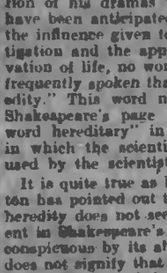
TO publicly call attention to another's deficiencies is unpardonable.

Of course, that's no news. Everyone knows that.

[illegible] awkward.

That, I think, must be news. So many people seem not to know it.

There is an otherwise well-bred young girl among my acquaintances who is forever talking about how homely her nose is. Now the nose is not Grecian, neither is it anything so startling that people would think about it if they were not so frequently reminded of it.



Indeed, the nose itself is not half so bad as her habit of talking about it. It is perpetually, "What would you do if you had a nose like mine?" or "I really think I nose." Her friends looking if it were not for my would be almost da are kept continually protesting and comforting until they learn to steer carefully clear of the subject of noses in particular and personal appearances in general.

Aside from the fact that this habit of running one's self down is bad policy, because it concentrates other people's attention to deficiencies they might otherwise not have thought much about, it is also bad taste because it holds people up for compliments and reassurances at the pistol point of common decency.

And people as a rule somehow seem to resent such hold-ups.

The girl who is always referring openly to some deficiency in herself probably thinks she deserves praise for frankness, but as a matter of fact, she deserves blame for indulging in frankness at the expense of making other people feel awkward and uncomfortable.

She wants people to know that she is not conceited and that she fully realizes that she is decidedly plain or overgrown and awkward, or that her nose is too large or her skin is sallow, but since this opportunity to prove her own self-knowledge and lack of conceit involves the discomfort of others, she would do well to forego it.

To know one's deficiencies is desirable.

To keep quiet about one's knowledge is equally so.

Improve your deficiencies when you can.

Ignore them—that is, don't think about them and don't force other people to, when you can't.

Admit your deficiencies if you are ever taxed with them, but never unnecessarily drag them into the limelight.

There seem to me some pretty [illegible] to follow in this matter.

Ruth Cameron

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

Some vicious mole of nature in them. As, in their birth, wherein they are not guilty.

Hamlet, Act 1, Sc. 4.

Shakespeare, like every other genius who has written, or played his part for the good of the race, was much in advance of his age. He was a modern man in the highest sense of the word. There are few scientific discoveries or theories that an examination of his dramas will not show to have been anticipated by him. Under the influence given to scientific investigation and the application of observation of life, no word has been more frequently spoken than the word "heredity." This word never appears on Shakespeare's page but he uses the word hereditary" in the same sense in which the scientific expression is used by the scientists.

It is quite true as Prof. R. G. Moulton has pointed out that "the force of heredity does not seem to be prominent in Shakespeare's world—that it is conspicuous by its absence;" but this does not signify that Shakespeare was not fully aware of the operation of the law of heredity. The passage which serves us as a text and many other equally significant would indicate that the idea contained in the word "heredity" was quite as familiar to Shakespeare as to even such a specialist on the subject as the author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

Physical and mental peculiarities, qualities and diseases are transmitted from one generation to another. Shakespeare has on Hamlet's lip crystallized into a single phrase this twofold nature of heredity. How common it is to see physical marks or defects such as moles, etc., inherited by children from their parents. Physical blemishes are propagated and tendency to crime and vice likewise. These are the "vicious moles" for which the guilty are often to be pitied rather than blamed. It is as true now as it was four thousand years ago that 'the iniquity of the fathers" is visited 'upon the children unto the third and fourth generations." There is nothing new under the sun, and the modern scientist has merely elaborated and buttressed by illustration the idea of herself.

Marc Antony was one of Shakespeare's favourite characters. He is portrayed as valiant, fearless, a genuine friend and an inspirer of affection in others, yet he has vicious moles of nature in him that in the end utterly destroyed the man. There were in Antony hereditary tendencies to vice so powerful that his will was unable to control them. The following words, placed on the lips of Lepidus, show how emphatically Shakespeare, took the matter of heredity into consideration when developing the character of Antony:

"His faults, to him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness: hereditary Rather than purchased (acquired)
what he cannot change
Than what he chooses."

These examples are sufficient to show that Shakespeare thoroughly understood the influence of heredity in human history.

Individuals are morose, passionate, modest and self-willed largely as a result of the character of their ancestors. Mental and physical aptitudes for work are inherited. The watchmakers of Switzerland, the linen-weavers of Ireland, the steel-workers of Sheffield have their skill largely through the accident of birth. Good and evil traits of character are beyond question inherited. These facts, however, do not excuse any individual to excuse himself for his folly. The magistrate will not give the thief freedom because his grandfathers were pilferers.

While the law of heredity shows that there are tendencies in individuals to definite courses of action there is also a force that the individual can call into play to eliminate or foster tendencies. Will is that force! A self-conscious being can stand apart, as it were, from his love, his hate, the labour of his brain and his hand and say, "This will I do or will I not do." He can cultivate righteousness or unrighteousness. He has it in his own hands to become a criminal or a benefactor of society. While Shakespeare made Hamlet speak of the "vicious mole," the inherited devil in man, he likewise saw that the devil may be cast out. In Hamlet's appeal to his mother to change her course of life he said:

"For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either lay the devil or throw him out
With wonderous potency."

A trained dog or tamed lion may consider man either God or devil. To a man's passions and appetites will is either God or devil according as he voluntarily surrenders himself to his good or evil tendencies. It takes hard [illegible] to [illegible] triumphant the servant of man and when passion and appetite are strong they cannot be easily controlled. A perfect will can only be attained by absolute surrender to the principle of good in the universe, to the Divine Will.

INDIGESTION QUICKLY CURED STAYS CURED

Not by Treating the Symptoms but by Toning up the Stomach to do Nature's Work

Indigestion should not be neglected for by depriving the body of its proper nourishment it grows steadily worse. Neither stimulating medicines, which ruin the already weak stomach by making it work beyond its strength, should be used, nor predigested foods, which do not excite a flow of the digestive fluids, and by disuse cause the stomach to grow weaker. Nowhere is the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills more clearly useful. Its principle is to enable the stomach to do its own work by building up the blood and giving tone to the nerves. When these are once more restored to their normal health indigestion disappears and the cure is permanent. In proof of these statements we give the experience of Mrs. Frank Gannon, Star City, Sask., who says: "For more than a year I suffered with all the terrible pains of indigestion, and my life was one of the greatest misery. It did not seem to make any difference whether I ate or not, the pains were always there often accompanied by a severe bloating and a belching of wind. I did not even get relief at night, and sometimes hardly got a bit of sleep in my misery. I tried many remedies said to cure indigestion; but they did me not one particle of good and I fully expected that I would always be afflicted in this way. At this time my brother came home on a visit and he urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got six boxes for me. By the time I had taken four boxes I began to improve and could eat with some relish. I was greatly cheered, and continued taking the Pills until all traces of the trouble had disappeared and I could once more eat all kinds of food without the smallest inconvenience. We have since used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in our family for other troubles. I am so firmly convinced of their virtue as a family medicine that I have no hesitation in recommending them to all weak, ailing people."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

It is not a favourable omen to see a man smoking a sob pipe while his wife milks a cow.

If you have a bitter pill to take gulp it down, don't chew it. So many people chew their pills, and oh how bitter.

It has been said that to have the children in your power would be to control the destiny of the world, but give us the mothers and let them realize their power, and we will have the children.

Every honest prayer that is breathed, every cross that is carried, every trial that is well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little task that is conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make Christian character beautiful, and to load its boughs with "Apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."

Parents, keep your boys off the street, especially after dark. You know not what annoyance these little fellows are, besides, they learn all kinds of meanness, picking up all the slang phrases uttered by older boys who have forgotten the prayers taught them at their mother's knee when they, too, were innocent little tots like your own boys now. If you have nice, beautiful yards, allow your boys to play in them, never scolding them for their merry laughter, for 'tis better far to be annoyed at home than to have them mixed up in an ugly affair on the street of which you know nothing until it has grown cold on every one's tongue. If you value their education as you should, you will keep your boys off the street, where no evil association will corrupt their morals.

Courtesy at Home.

Good breeding, like charity, should begin at home. The day is past when children used to rise when their parents entered the room where they were and stand until they had received permission to sit. But the mistake is now made usually in the other direction in allowing to small boys and girls too much license to disturb the peace of the household. We think the best way to train children in courtesy would be to observe toward them a scrupulous politeness. We would go so far as to say that we should make it as much a point to listen to children without interrupting them and to answer them sincerely and respectfully as if they were grown up. And, indeed, many of their wise, quaint sayings are far better worth listening to than the stereotyped commonplaces of the morning callers. Of course, to allow uninterrupted chatter would be to surrender the repose of the household here is to [illegible] scrupulously respected, to teach them in turn scrupulously to respect the convenience of others, and to know when to talk and when to be silent.

If a child is brought up in the constant exercise of courtesy toward brothers and sisters and playmates, as well as toward parents and uncles and aunts, it will have little left to learn as it grows older.

The best brought up family of children we ever knew were educated on the principle of always commending them when it was possible to do so, and letting silence be the reproof of any wrong doing which was not really serious. We have heard the children of this household, when their mother had failed to say any word of commendation after some social occasion, ask as anxiously as possible, "What was it, mamma? I know something was wrong. Didn't we treat the other children well, or were we too noisy?" In that house reproof was never bestowed unsought—only commendation, of whatever it was possible to commend, was gratuitous.

We think this system would be as good for those grown-up children, the husbands and wives, as for those still in the nursery.

Is Life Worth Living?

When you hear this question asked by a man or woman, with lips curved downward and voice attuned to discontent, you may set that person down as unprofitable. He or she asks practically, "Is life worth living to me?" Worth living? Of course it is, so long as there is one single other soul in the world. If the querist were the last of his race, then indeed the answer might well be "No," but while there is another human being for whom we can do a favour, or whose interests we may advance, life is indeed 'w'orth living."

Friend, when you find yourself depressed and inclined to think that life holds nothing for you, look around you (not very far away), and do the very first favour for another that comes to your hand. It may be a very small one, but do it; and keep on, day by day, hour by hour and minute by minute, working for others, for truly this alone makes life worth living.

"There is no good reason why a man should needlessly put his own wife to the trouble of wiping up the tracks, when he takes great pains to clean his feet before crossing his neighbour's threshhold; neither is it consistent that we women should be too severe on our own husband and son for a little carelessness, when we assure our callers, with the most gracious of smiles, that it isn't of the slightest consequence.'"

If I Only Had Capital.

The above words were recently uttered in our hearing by a worthy boy and undoubtedly they are often reiterated by many who are out of employment or have little or nothing to do. To all such we say, you have some capital, you have hands, feet, bone, muscle, health and are not these capital? What more capital has God given anybody? "But if I only had a few thousand in cash capital" says the young man. But these are better than cash capital, for no one can take them from you, and with these you can earn cash.

Our men of wealth and influence did not start with any cash capital. They went to work with their plow, the hoe, the jack plane or axe, and in time their capital brought them a rich harvest. Ah! but there's the rub; you don't want to work. You want money on credit so you can play the gentleman, speculator and end your career by playing vagabond. You want to marry a rich girl who will support you, while you wear fine clothes, smoke cigars, and be a gentleman of leisure.

Shame on you, young man! Go to work with the capital you have and you will soon make interest enough upon it to give you as much money as you need. If you cannot make money upon what capital you have, you could not if you had a larger amount in cash. If you waste your present capital you would waste money if you had it. So don't stand around a helpless fellow, waiting for something to turn up, but go to work. Take the first work you can get to do and do it well. Always do your best, and if you manage your capital that God has given you well, you will soon have plenty more to manage.

Positively Negative

Some advertising men—experts—have told us that we shouldn't use "don't" in our advertisements. That kind of talk is positive—to say "do." Now we think there are some things we shouldn't do—and we take them. There are some things you shouldn't do when it comes to your eyes. If you need double vision lenses we tell you positively that are the best because being solid lenses they don't make you look like a frog. They are made of one piece of glass, so they don't collect dust, the reading parts are fused into the far view lenses so they don't fall off as in pasted bifocal lenses. Kryptoks don't give you any trouble. They DO give complete satisfaction when designed, made and fitted by us.

TORIC KRYPTOKS

"THE BLACK CROSS"

By OLIVE H. BRIGGS

"Whoever it is," exclaimed Ritter harshly, "from the House, I swear to you, your own mother would not know you, unless she had seen you before in the part. That is nonsense! From the orchestra perhaps, from the conductor's stand—but not from the House. Kaya, you hurt me, child; you hurt me sorely if you refuse!"

He stood before her with his arms folded. "My heart is set on your success," he said, "and it—"

Kaya, looking up suddenly, saw that there were tears in his eyes. "Master," she cried. And then her will broke suddenly like iron in a furnace, red-hot under the stroke of the hammer. "You are sure?" she cried, "from the House no one would know me? You are sure?"

"I am sure."

She hesitated, looking away from him.

"No one?" she repeated, "not even—"

Then she raised her eyes and came closer to the Kapellmeister, looking up in his face. "He loves me," she stammered, "and I—I love him! But the corse is between us—if he should find me again! Ah, it is myself I am afraid of—myself!" Her breath came in sobs and her face quivered.

The Kapellmeister lifted the cloak from the floor and put it around her shoulders. There was a strange light in his eyes. He gazed at her for a moment; then he caught her by the hand and drew her toward the door.

"Come!" he said, "trust me, Kaya. I understand—at last I understand. Come!"

She yielded without a word.

They were both trembling.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The second Act was over. The curtain had descended slowly, hiding the singers; the lights had flashed up, revealing the House. It was crowded from the pit to the gallery. The double row of loggias was ablaze with colour; an dfrom them came a light ripple of talk and of laughter, broken loose as the curtain fell, a sound like the running of water over smooth pebbles.

The Schultz was ill. So it was advertised all over the foyer on huge yellow placards; and a new Brunnhilde was to take her place. The name was unknown; a young singer, doubtless, brought forward under the stress of the dilemma. The audience whispered together and the ripple grew louder. In the next Act, the final scene, she would appear. The moments were passing.

Suddenly the door at the back of one of the loggias opened, and an usher ran hurriedly in. He gave a hasty glance over the occupants, and then bent and whispered to a gentleman in the rear.

"Monsieur Velasco?"

The gentleman nodded.

"Sir—the Kapellmeister has been seized with a sudden attack of giddiness and is unable to continue with the performance. He begs earnestly that you will conduct the last Act in his place."

"I—?" said Velasco.

"There is no other musician in the house, sir, who could do it. The Kapellmeister is in great distress. The minutes are passing."

"Tell him I will come," said Velasco. "I will come." He rose and followed the usher from the loggia.

When the curtain went up for the third Act, a young, slender figure appeared in the orchestra pit, mounting the platform; only his head with the dark hair falling, the arm raised and the baton, were visible. The House was in darkness; a hush had crept over it.

The Act was progressing.

Already the smoke was in wreaths about the couch of Brunnhilde, hiding it, enveloping the stage in a grey misty veil. Flames flashed up there and there, licking in tongues of fire about the rocks and the trees.

As they rose and fell and the smoke grew denser, the music became more vivid, intense, full of strange running melodies, until the violins were to the ear as the flames to the eye. The stage was a billow of smoke curling, and the sound of the orchestra was as fire, crackling, leaping.

The smoke grew denser like a thick grey fog, rolling in wreaths. The music was a riot of tones, sparkling, and the hearts of the audience beat fast to the rhythm.

Suddenly, through the veil, dim, indistinct, showed the couch of Brunnhilde, shrouded in the billows and puffs of the smoke; the goddess herself stretched lifeless, asleep; and the form of Siegfried, breaking through the ring of the fire, leaping forward, the sword in his hand. He sprang to the couch, gazing down at the sleeping Walkure, straight and still, covered with the shimmering steel of the buckler, the spear by her side and the helmet on her head motionless, glittering in the flare of the flames. "Brunnhilde—Brunnhilde!"

Siegfried lifted his voice and sang to her—he had taken the shield from her now, and was bending lower, clasping his hands as if in ecstasy.

The House was like a black pit, silent, without movement or rustle, hanging on the notes, watching the glittering, prostrate form and Siegfried, stooping. . . Presently she stirred. The smoke had grown lighter, more vapoury, translucent. Her form stirred slowly, dreamily, raising itself from the couch. The magic was broken; the goddess was aroused at last.

Brunnhilde opened her eyes—and half kneeling, half reclining, she stared about her, dazed, half conscious. Siegfried hung over her. The flames, the smoke were dying away. She seemed in a trance; and then, as she gazed at the sky and the sunlight, the rocks and the trees, her lips parted suddenly; she raised her arms, half in bewilderment, half in ecstasy, stretching them upwards, and began to sing.

It was like a lark, disturbed by the reapers, rising from its nest in the meadows. The notes came softly, dreamily, from her throats and then as she rose slowly to her feet, shaking the spear, it was as if a flooded gate had been opened and the sounds poured out, full, glorious, irresistible, ringing through the darkness and the silence of the House. Drawn to her height she stood, the helmet tipped back on her red-blonde hair, the white robes tarilng about her, the spear uplifted. As she sang her voice came like a torrent: above the woodwinds and strings, the brass and the basses, the single voice soared higher and higher, deeper and richer, full of passion and pure.

"Heil dir, Sonne!
Heil dir, Licht!
Heil dir, leuchtender Tag!"

The "Heil" was like a clarion note ringing through space; like the sound of an echo through mountain passes. The audience listened and gazed as under a spell; the orchestra played as it had never played before; the baton moved. Siegfried sang to her and she responded; their voices rising and mingling together, every note a glory.

On the stage, still dim with the smoke and the flames, the light grew stronger, illuminating the helmet of Brunnhilde, the tip of her spear, falling full on her face and her eyes. Siegfried nearer, the footlights, still singing, his sight half blinded, gazing unconsciously into the pit of the House and the darkness. She was clasping her spear, and her voice rose high above the violins.

Her eyes sought the baton, the face of her Master; and then as she stood, she trembled suddenly. Her voice died away in her throat; her steps faltered.

The Conductor leaned over the desk the baton moving mechanically as if the fingers were stiffened. The orchestra played on. A shudder ran over the house.

What had happened? Brunnhilde had stopped singing. Siegfried was trying in vain to cover her part, singing his own. The Walkure stood motionless, transfixed, her eyes riveted on the Conductor. A slight murmur ran over the House. "Was she ill—struck with sudden paralysis? Or was it the stage-terror, pitiless, irresistible, benumbing her faculties?"

She stood there; and then she stretched out her hands, trembling; her voice came back.

"Velasco!" she cried.

"Kaya—Kaya!"

But the audience thought she had called out to Siegfried, and to encourage her they applauded, clapping and stamping with their feet and their hands. The sound revived her suddenly like the dash of cold water on the face of a sleep-walker.

"I must go on!" she said to herself, "whatever happens I must go on!" Her eyes were still riveted.

The face of Velasco was white as death; great drops stood out on his brows, his fingers quivered over the baton. He moved it mechanically, gazing, and he swayed in his seat as if faint and oppressed. The other hand was stretched trembling toward her as if a vision had come in his path suddenly and he was blinded.

Her lips moved again, and his. For a moment it seemed as if he were about to leap to the stage over the foot-lights. Brunhilde fell back.

"For God's sake!" whispered Siegfried, "What is it? Are you mad? Sing—sing! Let out your voice—take up your cue! Go on"

Again she cried out; but this time her voice was in the tone, and the emotion of it, the longing, rent the air as with passion unveiled and bared. She shook the spear aloft in her hands, brandishing it, until the gleam from the flames lit it up like a spark, and fell on her helmet.

Siegfried besought her and she answered, they sang together, but as she answered, singing, her eyes were still fixed, and she sang as one out of herself and inspired.

"Siegfried!"

"Brunnhilde!"

"Siegfried! Siegfried! seliger Held!
Du Wecker des Lebens, siegendes Licht!"

The tempo quickened and the rhythm; and the tones grew higher and richer, ringing, more passionate. Such acting—such singing! It was as if the Walkure herself had come out of the trance back to life, and the audience saw Brunnhilde in the flesh. The House reverberated to the sound of her voice; it was a glory, a revelation.

She sang on and on, and Siegfried answered; but the eyes of the Singer, and her hands lifted, were toward the House, the orchestra pit, the desk the baton—the head with its dark hair falling and the arm outstretched.

The curtain fell slowly.

"Brunnhilde! Brunnhilde!"

With the flaring up of the lights the House was in an uproar. "Who was she? What was she? Where did she come from? Ah—h-h! Brunnhilde!"

They clapped and stamped, and shouted themselves hoarse, calling her name: "Brunnhilde!"

. . . . . .

"She is there!" cried the Kapellmeister. "Go to her, Velasco; go to her quickly! Gott! I thought the Opera would have come to a standstill! My heart was in my mouth! Go!"

He pushed the violinist towards the door and closed it behind them; then he fell back against the wall and listened. The noise in the House was like a mob let loose.

"Brunnhilde! Why doesn't she come? Bring her before the curtain . . . Brunnhilde!"

"I must go," he said, "I must speak to them—tell them anything—she is ill—she is [illegible]! Something—it doesn't matter! I must go and quiet the tumult!"

The Kapellmeister leaned for a moment against the background of the scenery; he looked at the door and listened. The House was going mad: "Brunnhilde! Brunnhilde!"

Then, staggering a little, with his hands to his face, he went out on the stage.

ALFALFA FOR HOG RAISING

From Farm and Dairy.

Alfalfa will give better results for hog raising purposes than any other forage known. It is a nitrogenous forage, rich in protein and calcium, and therefore furnishes the necessary protein and mineral matter for the highest development of bone and muscle. It is a very excellent early forage, since it begins growth early in spring. When supplemented with corn to the extent of one-half of a full ration or to the extent of two per cent. of the weight of the hogs, the best results are obtained. When alfalfa is fed alone it is about equal to a maintenance ration; so when corn is fed with it every pound fed will be used for the production of gain.

Under ordinary conditions alfalfa will forage from 10 to 20 shoats an acre. A new seeding should be pastured very lightly the first season. No larger number than 10 shoats per acre or one sow and her litter should be used. After the first season as high as 30 head an acre or two sows and their litters may be pastured on it throughout the season. In any event, it should not be pastured so closely that no woody growth will take place. A very good rule to go by is not to pasture it so closely but that one cutting of hay may be taken off in the fore part of the season.

One year's experiment with alfalfa for hog forage has been completed at the Columbia Missouri Experiment station and very satisfactory results have been obtained. In July of 1909 the ground intended for alfalfa was plowed and worked until a firm bottom with a fine seed bed on top was obtained. This was then worked once each week thereafter until August 10th, when two bushels of seed, taken from a field growing successfully a crop of alfalfa, and six barrels of lime were sown, and then the plot seeded to alfalfa at the rate of 20 pounds an acre. A very thick, heavy stand was obtained, which was pastured for the first season in 1910. The experiment was begun with the [illegible] at the rate of 13 an acre; [illegible] it was thought [illegible] of the alfalfa, to reduce [illegible] to 10 an acre, at which [illegible] was pastured throughout the [illegible] of the season. The hogs [illegible] purchased of a local farmer and were purebred Poland China-Tamworths. They were farrowed in early winter, and were in thin to medium condition of flesh at the beginning of the experiment. The average initial weight was 88.5 lbs., and the average final weight was 181.0 lbs. The forage was supplemented with corn meal in sufficient quantity to produce the standard gain of three-fourths of a pound per hundred weight a day. The alfalfa was six inches high at the beginning of the experiment.

The average amount of grain required to produce a pound gain was 3.07 pounds. The amount of pork that could be accredited to the alfalfa forage was 866.8 pounds an acre. With pork at six cents the return per acre was $35.71; with pork at seven cents, $41.66; and with pork at eight cents, $47.61.

MARKETING EGGS

From Farm and Dairy.

Canadian eggs direct from the producer in the winter months are practically all of first quality. It is in summer that fresh eggs are at a premium, that commission merchants are continually troubled with large consignments of inferior eggs, and that those of us who take proper care of eggs are subjected to the greatest loss unless some special means of marketing is adopted. Produce dealers estimate that taking year in and year out, 17 per cent. of the eggs received on consignment are altogether unfit for use and have to be thrown away.

We poultry keepers owe it to ourselves to take special precautions to collect eggs daily and market them at least twice a week during the warm weather of summer. Even where the eggs are collected regularly if they are marketed in the usual way, that is to the village merchant, from him to the wholesaler and from the wholesaler to the cold storage man and so on through the hands of four or five middlemen before they reach the consumer, the chances are that a large percentage of them will be bad when they are finally sold. If we are to get returns for extra care we must market the eggs so that they will reach the consumer as soon as possible.

It is not possible for all individual farmers to market eggs to the best advantage, but several working together on the cooperative plan can market eggs regularly in wholesale quantities to the big dealers at our larger centres. In some places the local creamery man takes charge of the marketing of eggs with good returns to his patrons.

That 17 per cent. of loss (which we egg producers pay) is not necessary. The way to get around it is through cooperation among ourselves in the marketing of our produce.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS

From Farm and Dairy.

Interesting experiments in regard to the value of casein in milk for cheese making and its relation to the fat content in milk have been carried on for the past three years by the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College. Professor Dean comments upon these experiments in considerable detail in the 1910 annual report of the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm. His conclusions are summarized as follows:

1. The milk containing the higher percentage of casein (.2 per cent.) produced over 4½ lbs. (4.64) more cheese per 1,000 lbs. milk; and required over one-half pound (.51) less milk to make a pound of cheese as the average for the season, when compared with yields from milk testing lower in casein (.2 per cent.) and fat (3).

2. As casein is the moisture carrying constituent of milk we should naturally expect the curd and cheese from the higher casein lots to have the more moisture, but in the eight lots tested for moisture thre was not much difference in the results, what difference there was being a higher moisture content in the curd and cheese made from the milk with a lower percentage of casein. These lots (low casein) also lost more by shrinkage while ripening or curing for one month.

B-H ENGLISH PAINT

Said the House-owner:

"Give me ten gallons of B-H "English" White Paint.

"No, Sir! I won't take any other kind.

"Yes, that other paint may possibly be good paint, but if it is all right in every way, why don't the makers tell you, and tell me, frankly, what they are trying to tell us—namely, what is in the paint.

"I always use B-H "English" Paint because the guarantee formula is on the can telling me that it is made of 70% white lead, 30% zinc white, pure linseed oil, pure turpentine and dryer. I know this formula is the standard in paint making and I know that I am taking no chance when I use that kind of paint."

Not Our Words

Dr. A. P. Grinnell, dean of the Medical Department of the University of Vermont, put on paper what he had said shortly before in a public address:—

"I wanted to say that, 50 per cent of all men living at age 45 were prosperous, contented and more or less established in business, well established in whatever pursuit they were following, and were receiving an income in excess of their expenditures, and therefore, were laying up money and were independent.

Now it is a well established fact that 50 per cent of all men living at age of 45 live to be 65, and at this time I find only 3 per cent of these persons are independent or self-sustaining. In other words, about 97 out of every hundred at age 65 are dependent upon some relatives, friends, the town, or some charitable institution for a part at least of their daily subsistence.

These figures are exceedingly startling and I am free to admit have seriously impressed me with the necessity of men, in professional work at least, to take out Life Insurance between the ages of 25 and 30 as a safeguard against possible disaster which may overtake us a little later in life.

I am sure no stronger argument than the above can be made to convince men of my profession, and equally lawyers and clergymen, of the necessity of the preparation for the future which Life Insurance guarantees."

There is no safer, surer, or better way to make provision for your declining years than by securing one of the guaranteed income policies of the

NATIONAL LIFE OF SCOTLAND

The Main Purpose of the Glasgow Exhibition is to Depict the History of the People

Visitors to the Coronation would do well to spend a few days at the Scotch Exhibition at Glasgow, which is far more interesting than any of the so-called Coronation exhibitions in this city, which have been erected for no other purpose than that of enriching the promoters. The main purpose of the Glasgow exhibition, on the other side, is to depict the national life and history of Scotland, and any surplus will be devoted to the establishment of a chair of Scottish history and literature in the University of Glasgow. Prof. Glaister, of the University, who has taken a leading part in this movement, gave an interesting [illegible] of the principal exhibits in the Historical applied at a luncheon given the other day. Scottish art, from the very beginning of pictorial presentation, is represented by many priceless works. Scottish architecture is revealed in pictures of many notable castles and mansions. Memorials of Wallace, Robert the Bruce, Mary Queen of Scots, and others notable in Scottish history, are on view for the first time, and a unique collection of Burns and Scott MSS., first editions and personal memorials, most of which have never before been publicly exhibited, are collected here for study and observation. The old burghal life of Scotland is represented by many quaint old houses, gathered together in one centre, and depicting the scene in which the forefathers of the race lived and did their daily task. The costumes and other paraphernalia of the various periods are worn and used, while a vivid pageant of Scottish rural life and industry is given as typical of present-day scenes. Highland peasant industries are seen in operation in this extremely well-designed village.

Relics of the Scottish Antarctic expeditions of Dr. Bruce, and other trophies of Scotland's triumphs in science, marine engineering, and other industries, are fully represented, and a special section is devoted to the display of the achievements of Scotland's greatest scientific genius, Lord Kelvin. Many historical pageants, depicting stirring scenes in the troubled and often tragic history of the nation, are in preparation.

BUILT IN A DAY

A Substantial Wooden Church With Seating Capacity of 800

To build in a growing suburb a substantial wooden church seating over 800 people in a day of 24 hours by volunteer labor is unique in the story of Australian development. This was actually accomplished at Preston by some 150 members of the "Church of Christ," a body with over 1,000,000 members in the United States.

The building began at one o'clock in the morning, when the holes were dug for the foundation posts, and it was completed by acetylene gas light shortly after 11 o'clock at night, when the last screw in the door locks was driven home. The workers included some thirty skilled carpenters and twenty or so gasfitters, who followed the carpenters in their work stage by stage. The gangs were all carefully organised, and those who could neither dig, paint, saw, nor hoist, were busy feeding the builders. Even the minister did his share of digging. Thousands of enthusiastic spectators watched the operations, and miles of bioscope films were taken. When the church was opened next day it was found unnecessary to attend to a single detail. Pews, gasfittings, notice-boards, pulpit, etc., were all in position.

QUEEN'S TROUSSEAU

One of the Prettiest Details of It Will Be a Fan

One of the prettiest items of Queen Mary's Coronation trousseau will undoubtedly be her fan.

Mr. Wellescroft Mead's design, which was recently accepted, was so intricate that the Worshipful Company of Fanmakers had some difficulty in securing its acceptance by the lace-workers.

The fan measures about twenty-two inches, and will be entirely British. In the centre of the leaf there is a cartouche with the Queen's cipher surmounted with the royal crown. On the field of the fan there are the arms of England, Scotland, Ireland, and the new arms of Wales.

The most picturesque features in the imperial touch supplied by the symbols of the four great overseas dominions—India, Canada, Australia and South Africa. To complete the design and to unite the imperial emblems to the Mother Country the designer has included the rose, shamrock and thistle.

The sticks are of yellow tortoise-shell from India. They are decorated with the royal crown and the Queen's cypher, and are of exceptionally artistic design.

A gold pin with a diamond at each end holds the fan sticks together. A small white silk tassel completes what is really a masterpiece.

CHINA, JAPAN AND NEW CALEDONIA • MEN WHO CONQUER PLAGUE

KING IS PERPLEXED OVER TWO EVENTS

Wonders How to Fill Time Between the Investiture and Cowes Regatta.

PLANS A SHORT CRUISE

He and Queen Mary Will Touch the North Coast of Ireland and Also the Isle of Man.

[Special Despatch.]

LONDON, Saturday.

KING GEORGE is not easily perplexed, but he is rather undecided at the present as to the best manner in which to fill up the interval that comes between the investiture of the Prince of Wales at Carnarvon and the opening of Cowes Regatta Week.

The probability is that he and Queen Mary will then take a short cruise in the Irish Sea on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, in which the north coast of Ireland would be touched as well as the Isle of Man. Indeed, it is probable that this cruise will become an annual event in the future, the whole of the coast line of the United Kingdom being visited in turn.

The King purposes to give the customary annual dinner to the Royal Yacht Squadron at Cowes on one of the evenings of the regatta week. And on another evening will accept the hospitality of the Royal Yacht Squadron at East Cowes Castle. The King and Queen will have their headquarters on board the royal yacht during the racing week, but the royal children will be at Norton Manor.

The garden party at Buckingham Palace will be a notable event. The Brocklesbury garden function, which took place in the late days of Windsor, and at which some ten thousand persons are supposed to have been present, is not likely to be repeated. The change will be welcomed by the much less corpulent quarters that will be in requisition at Buckingham Palace.

The Palace gardens are very much terra incognita to the present generation, and few are aware of the extent to which they lie which, thanks largely to the late Prince Consort, the grounds are laid out, while how deftly the illusion of distance has been made to lend its enchantment to the view. The gardens boast a lake of unexpected proportions, big enough for comfortably two-oared or pair-oar boats on small occasions.

IDEAS OF ECONOMY.

The economical reforms Lord Farquhar introduced into the royal household soon after King Edward's accession are not being in any way relaxed under the present régime. All sorts of abuses were rife in the latter years of Queen Victoria, who was indisposed conservative and would never hear of any changes being introduced.

All the upper servants of the royal household, for example, were in the habit of travelling first class, and enormous bills were incurred for vegetables and other commodities which could be had for the picking in the royal gardens. Many small items of like kind will at once vanish, and further economies were effected by reducing the number of carriages and horses to members of the royal family from the Mews at Buckingham Palace.

In Queen Victoria's lifetime all her family were free to order a royal carriage whenever they required it, but King Edward discontinued this arrangement, and by way of compensation presented to each of his elderly a carriage and a pair of horses wherewith to start stables of their own.

Until the greatest economy is observed in the royal household to in the course of nine bills for temperance is so generally the rule nowadays that, some years ago, comparatively little alcohol is consumed when the King and Queen entertain. In fact, it is said that at a big dinner party not long ago, at which twelve guests were present, not a single bottle of champagne was opened. The same marked change may be noted at most of the great dinners of the season and also at large country house parties during the shooting season.

WILL NEED NO REGENT.

A great deal of speculation is again rife regarding the appointment of a "regent" while the King is in India. As has already been printed in the HERALD, there will be no "regent," because it is obvious, so long as the King-Emperor is in his own dominions, no "regent" is in any sense necessary.

There is not the least intention, either, of bringing both the Duke of Connaught from Canada to act in this capacity, as has been suggested. There will, in fact, be no "regent" at all.

Viscount Alexander will have charge of the children of the King and Queen, and will be fully empowered by the King to take necessary steps in his absence to deal with matters that come under her notice. She will, indeed, be, to all intents, sovereign of the United Kingdom while the King is in India. So far as arrangements have gone at present, the King and Queen will leave Portsmouth on the 2nd of October and be back again in the latter part of January, in time for the opening of the court season a week or two later.

Kissing the Shells.

"Chinese Work."—The old man had ordered Little Mick clams. The waiter served same on the half shell. The clams were strong and about the size of a quarter, while the shells were enormously large in proportion. "What be these?" drawled the old man, as he critically surveyed his order.

"Little Mick clams, sah," grinned the waiter, handing over the bottle of vinegar.

"Little Mick clams eh? Well, all I have to say is that whoever are the two big fellers that I see kissing each other on the bottom of the shells must be mighty fond of one another."

Beautiful Girls of British and Foreign Parentage Who Will Make Their Bows Before King George and Queen Mary at Court Soon

[Special Despatch.]

LONDON, Saturday.

THE season of 1911 will be the occasion of an unusually large number of debutantes, as already has been stated in our paper. Two of the most attractive debutantes who will make their curtseys before King George and Queen Mary will be of foreign parentage. One is the beautiful daughter of the Grand Duke Michaiyovitch and the Countess Torby, the Countess Zia Torby, and Princess Pretiva, daughter of the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. Then, among others, there are Lady Rosemary Leveson-Gower, seventeen years old, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland; Lady Diana Manners, the youngest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland; Lady Victoria Stanley, daughter of Lord and Lady Derby; Lady Honor Ward, the pretty young daughter of the Earl and Countess of Dudley; Lady Clare Annesley, daughter of Priscilla Countess Annesley; while another interesting Irish débutante at one of the June courts will be Lady Barbara Conyngham, youngest daughter of Marchioness Conyngham. Lady Dorothy Bligh, seventeen, daughter of the Countess of Darnley, is also coming out this season, and among others are Miss Sybil Cadogan, daughter of the Earl and Countess Cadogan; Miss Margaret Beaumont, daughter of Lady Allendale and niece of the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry; Miss Helen Brassey, daughter of Lady Brassey and a close friend of Princess Patricia of Connaught, and Miss Bridget Colebrooke, youngest daughter of Lord and Lady Colebrooke.

China's Triumph Over the Pest Earnest of Progress

DR. WU LIEN-TEH

DR. W. W. YEN

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PEKIN, April 15, 1911.

ABOVE all considerations bearing upon the great plague of 1910-11—more important even than the saving of lives—there rises in the minds of progressive Chinese the valuable lesson which has been taught to China—the lesson of the superiority of Western scientific methods over those which have enthralled this land for centuries.

The young men of China are not nearly so much interested in the work of the International Plague Conference at Mukden as they are in the question whether Chinese officialdom and Chinese use of be people will take that lesson to heart. They hope that the action of the brave old Chinese physician at Puchieh who in recognition of the superiority of the new school gravely presented to Dr. Wu Lien-teh the needles with which he had vainly sought to cure the dread disease by a puncture—a token of unconditional surrender—may prove symbolic of a similar national surrender of the old ideas.

DR. WU REGARDED AS HERO.

In the eyes of these progressives Dr. Wu Lien-teh is a hero. To them those sympathetic and manly compliments made his victory possible they also give due meed of credit. The importance of the results attained by these young men may not be restricted to considerations of sanitation and health. It may prove the necessary leaven to move the mass to realise that China's best hope in all lines lies in those of her sons who, educated abroad or at home, are in touch with modern thought.

This is a lesson yet to be learned. The forces of conservatism and reaction are still very strong in China. Tang Shao-yi and his associates did much in awakening the national consciousness to the opium evil. James Tien-yow and his assistants have obtained equally notable results in the field of railway building while others have done excellent work in other lines, but the total of forward work has been small.

The splendid achievements of Dr. Wu and his associates at Pukhsiehsu, where the ravages of the plague were greatest because incompetency had permitted it to get strongest foothold, have been told in detail in despatches to the HERALD.

GIVES CREDIT TO OTHERS.

But Dr. Wu is the first to give credit to others, who, from their posts in the central government at Pekin, made the success of his work possible.

The first of these is Depat. Vice President T. K. Ahred Sze, of the Wai-wu-pu, into whose hands, because of his familiarity with the Manchurian situation, was placed the direction of the government's efforts. With him was associated Dr. W. W. Yen, one of the Councillors of the Wai-wu-pu.

In applying the methods they knew must be applied these officials encountered many obstacles. The crucial test came over the vital question of the disposition of unburied coffins and of the ever increasing number of corpses for which there were no coffins. The whole tradition of this land was against cremation. Yet these corpses had to be burned and they were burned by authority give, by the Wai-wu-pu itself. Here was an official surrender as complete as that of the old physician and his needle, and, of course of vastly greater significance.

The man who have figured most prominently in the fight are the best type of students educated in America and England, men of ability, character and genuine patriotism.

GRADUATE OF CAMBRIDGE.

Dr. Wu Lien-teh was educated at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, from which he graduated with honor. In England he was generally known as Mr. "Tuck"—much on the same principle that a man might call President Taft "Mr. William" if his only knowledge of the man were obtained from a directory. In his native dialect the final character of Dr. Wu's "given" name is pronounced "teh," so he forthwith became Mr. "Tuck" to his associates. Dr. Wu is now one of the professors at the Imperial Army Medical College at Tientsin.

SEE JAPANESE EYE ON NEW CALEDONIA

Persons Assert That the Empire Has Designs Now on the French Islands.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, April 20, 1911.

THE IDEA that the Japanese may have designs upon the French islands of New Caledonia is reflected in reports published in Australian newspapers.

These reports allege that there are already about four thousand Japanese on the island, this number including many skilled carpenters, engineers and such like. The French residents, weary of the French administration, are described as wholly indifferent to this alien influx.

Dealing with this report, the Japan Mail, the English newspaper of the Japanese government, points out that the area of New Caledonia is 7,339 square miles and its population 56,000 persons, about half of whom are natives, so that even if the figures on the side of the Japanese are not exaggerated they cannot be described as proportionately large. This paper admits that the Japanese who go to or settle on New Caledonia are not likely to be the least venturesome and uneducated, and it may very well be that the class of Japanese in the island is above the average, but it seems going rather too far to suggest that the large French population is so indifferent that they would allow a handful of Japanese to gain possession of the country.

"The large question of Japanese influence in the Pacific," continues the Mail, "is one which greatly exercises Australia, and to some extent the remarks of the Sydney Herald must be taken as going to the root of the matter. If Australia desires to retain her position in the Pacific it must be done by pressing forward in exploitation, not by sitting at home and protesting. Certainly the policy of the Australian colonies has not tended toward that increase in the population which is necessary to prevent commercial invasion, however much it may tend to promote the happiness of the individual.

"The tendency under natural conditions for Japanese to increase as long as the resistance opposed to their advance is not greater than the effort to overcome it has led the Japanese to the South Pacific, and will continue to lead them there quite apart from any design for territorial expansion. Japan, however, that all this portends some dark scheme of political conquest on the part of Japan is fanciful. It might as well be argued that because there are a number of German settlers in South America Germany is nursing a scheme of conquest in the New World. Japan, of course, would not refuse new territory if it came to her in the natural course of events, but she is not seeking to embroil herself with other nations for the sake of a few islands."

China Raises Her Military Status by Very Amazing Edict

Couched in Flowery Language of the Flowery Kingdom, There Is Much Significance in the Order—Baby Emperor, Army Chief.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PEKIN, April 20, 1911.

AN EDICT which may have far reaching importance in developing a military spirit among the Chinese people has just been issued in the name of the Emperor.

The appointment of Prince Tsai-tao as head of the army and Prince Tsai-hsun as head of the navy and much to elevate the two services in the eyes of the people. This was announced by an edict announcing that the Emperor himself had assumed the role of, Commander-in-Chief, the duties of the office to be performed until his majority by the Prince Regent.

Now comes an edict designed to impress upon the people the earnestness of the throne in its desire to see the military, and through it the nation, strengthened. This unique, if not remarkable, document reads as follows:—

"We are of opinion that militarism is the first thing to the building and preservation of a nation and national harmony to the prevention of danger and restraining of disorder. In China or the outside world, in the past or the present, it is always true that a nation must be strong if its sovereign and people are of one body, and a nation must be weak if they are in discord. Our dynasty had its cradle in Manchuria and attained full growth in the Middle Plains. For our first Emperor Taitsu there was not a single army, but the "Dragon" made its appearance in the Liao River, and the capital was founded at Shen Yang. Our Tai Chung being the successor solemnly followed the programme of aggrandisement and extended influence throughout the country. These imperial meritorious deeds were attained by our imperial ancestors through their fighting in arms and travelling afield.

"Soon after the will of Heaven was vested over to our Shih Tsu, who was the founder of the present dynasty. Our Sheng Tsu ascended to the throne when very young. He fought with the three religious principalities, restoring the frontier peace and bringing about a national quietude. He also, out of pity for the miserable state of Mongolia and the changeable attitude of the Mohammedans gifted, went three times to subjugate them, entered the desert and the far North. This being settled there was peace among inner and frontier peoples. He also made visits to Jehol and hunted in wild fields. His fame was so great that all nations paid him respect.

APPEAL TO ANCESTORS.

"This is an instance of the military spirit of our ancestors and people. From that time on able rulers succeeded one after another. Shih Chung conquered Gobi and the Miao territory. Kao Chung conquered the New Dominion and Thet. Wherever the imperial "Bow" directed there was surrender and submission. Jen Chung fought with the Mohammedans. A bloody war had been going on for eight years when in the imperial army strict discipline was observed and no looting reported. With this sovereign at the head of the government the whole nation was at peace. Military spirit was then at its height.

"Since Chien-lung and Chia-ching internal troubles repeatedly arose. But our imperial tradition is not to indulge in distant expeditions but to be friendly and hospitable to foreigners. This policy has been observed by every reign.

"We being alive to the condition of international relations are always aware of our inequality to the burden handed down to us. The more we think of the past military glories, the more we worry about our responsibilities. Our respective ancestors have subdued the Nine Chews by "shampooing in rain and cooking in wind," and left behind them a magnificent governing organism.

"It must be said that the ancestors of our soldiers who have followed the various expeditions heart and soul have played a great role in the building up of the glorious empire, which has existed these hundred years. We, as their trustees, are very afraid of abusing the diligence of our ancestors in founding the empire and the industry of the old soldiers in serving the country.

"We therefore, in order to lead our people, have assumed the Generalissimoship of the Army and Navy of the Imperial Empire according to the requirement of a constitutional government. In our march this post will be intrusted to the Prince Regent, as has already been announced to the people.

"But we must not forget that the weakness or greatness or uselessness of soldiers depends on their national spirit. It is impossible for one who fails to love his country to save his family. On the other hand, one who knows how to save his country must know how to save his family. All present himself is found in all directions. A nation cannot go without militarism. Our soldiers, as their forefathers, having received favors and education from the throne and, having been brought up in good moral atmosphere, should know this well and need no reminder. As we dare not be idle and ignore the will of our ancestors and ancient soldiers, our present soldiers should follow our example. Let us mutually aspire for the safety of our empire so as to make China a military Power and her constitutional government a great success. From high and low will enjoy peace and prosperity to the wishes of our ancestors and ancient soldiers."

CONSCRIPTS IN JAPAN FEWER THAN IN 1910

TOKIO, April 20, 1911.—According to statistics given in a pamphlet recently issued by the War Office, the total number of youths of conscript age last year was 51,681, these figures showing a decrease of 17,288 as compared with the preceding years. Numerous postponements of enlistment were granted for various reasons. With the result that the actual number of conscripts who came up for physical examination aggregated 438,362. Out of the total number examined nearly eight thousand were found to be suffering from trachoma, four of every thousand 321 exceeded five feet three inches in height.

COSTUME BALL ON SPLENDID SCHEME

Royalty Will Attend a Magnificent Affair Now Planned for the Albert Hall.

[Special Despatch.]

LONDON, Saturday.

ALMOST rivalling the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey will be the pageant ball at the Albert Hall on June 26, which is to be held in furtherance of the Shakespeare National Memorial scheme. Several of the royal family and numerous foreign royalties who will be in London for the coronation are to be present.

The Albert Hall is to be transformed into an old garden of the Tudor period, with the rows of boxes in the grand tier converted into leafy bowers and arbors. There will be broad expanses of turf, brilliant flower beds, thick hedges and Italian arches, while the illuminations are to be planned to give the effect of sunshine. Nearly two thousand of Shakespeare's characters are to be represented.

Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, who is chairman of the Ladies' Committee, is now busy arranging her own quadrille, in which her two daughters-in-law, Mrs. Winston Churchill and Lady Gwendoline Churchill, will depict. But all the most beautiful women in London society will appear in this wonderful pageant. Already in the list are one hundred titled women, including eleven duchesses.

One of the best groups of the evening is being arranged by the Duchess of Wellington, who has undertaken "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Lady Maud Warrender has arranged the Amazon Quadrille in connection with it, in which the tallest women in the ball will be the dancers, among those chosen being Lady Juliet Duff and Lady Beatrice Herbert.

Lady Salisbury and Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton will be jointly responsible for "The Merchant of Venice," for which Mary Anderson has chosen a very beautiful Portia in the person of Lady Beatrice Pole-Carew, whose scarlet ermine robes will be supplemented by those worn by Mary when acting the trayed last part of the play, direct from Padua in conjunction with Sir Henry Irving, while Mrs. Waldorf Astor will assume the costume which Nerissa wore in the last act of the play.

The numerous characters in "Henry VI." will give Lady Paget plenty of scope in forming her quadrille. It is expected that the Duchess of Westminster will take the part of Queen Margaret, and her beautiful sister, Princess Pless, that of Queen Elizabeth. The Duchess of Roxburgh, Mrs. Rupert Beckett, and Countess Zia Torby are some of those selected by Lady Paget for the piece.

The organ of the hall will be concealed by a drop scene painted to represent a London as in perspective, and an orchestra of 120 performers dressed in Elizabethan costume will play for the dancers, while all English songs will be sung at intervals between the dances. The ball will open at midnight with a procession of men carrying banners inscribed with the titles of the various plays by Shakespeare, and the pageant will form up afterwards with the leaders for their respective quadrilles.

MUSEUM COLONY IN JAPAN IS GROWING

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, April 20.

JAPAN'S Pan-Asiatic propaganda designed, of course, for the ultimate advantage of Japan—takes on many phases. The latest is sympathetic assistance of a Moslem propaganda in the country.

The colony of Mohammedans in Tokio and Yokohama, for the most part consisting of Turkish subjects and Moslems strong enough to support a regular mosque, knows as Islamic Fraternity, a monthly magazine published in the capital. The latest issue of the organ states that two Moslem students have just returned from Constantinople, under the auspices of the Asiatic society of Japan, a branch of which started, with the object of promoting friendly feeling among Orientals through study, germane subject, in the Asiatic countries.

Apparently one of the objects of the society is to investigate the history of Islam, its growth, present condition and future prospects. If so, then this is perhaps the first time in the history of the country that a representative body of Japanese has manifested any practical interest in Islam, and the change must be accounted a place among a series of post-bellum phenomena which go to strengthen the belief that Japan is anxious to gain the control of a pan-Asiatic movement.

The Islamic organ in this city evidently materialized the hope that Japan was a promising missionary field for the teaching of Islam, and avows itself ready and eager to lay its services at the disposal of the newly born Japanese empire.

Every Rhodes Islander in Tokio will have a bitter enemy of the British empire. Correspondence sent from time to time to the English written newspapers in this country from the above source is temperately anti-British, and more than once brochures have been circulated which in India would call for prompt censorship. But like kind of propaganda leaving the Japanese authorities entirely calm and unmoved despite the Anglo-Japan alliance.

DAIREN WILL REMAIN RAILWAY CENTRE

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, April 21, 1911.—Mr. Hayasaka, president of the South Manchuria Railway Company, has emphatically denied the rumor that the headquarters of the company will be removed to Mukden. The report seemed to have caused considerable consternation among the merchants of Dairen and inquiry after inquiry has been addressed to Tokio to learn the truth of it.

The newspapers state that a vote at a business meeting of the directors of the company has resulted in the decision that Dairen has no foundation in fact. Public confidence is to be restored by the statement that the headquarters will remain where they are. Dairen is already the second largest city in Manchuria, and the change suggested would have practically killed the place. Many business houses have expended all their capital in Dairen with a view to making it the important centre, and it was therefore feared that the headquarters would be diverted to another place.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE Delights the Ladies

Because they know from experience that the intelligent use of Herpicide means much to their personal appearance.

It saves and beautifies the hair and in the vast majority of cases, adds greatly to its abundance. The intelligent use of Herpicide proves its actual worth

GIVES CINCINNATI A PARK

Former Canadian Makes $82,000 Gift to Portugalia

L. A. Ault, of the Ault-Wiborg Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Toronto, and president of the board of park commissioners of Cincinnati, has presented that city with 154 acres of land, valued at $80,000, to be used for park purposes. The property is located near the Lockwood water tower, overlooking the Little Miami River, and affords an obstructed view of the Ohio River and Ohio Valley. The only condition attached to the gift was that the city improve the park, which has been named the Ault Park. Mr. Ault has notified Park Expert Kessler to let him know of other properties adapted for park purposes, as his plans to give these to the city.

Mr. Ault is a native of Mills Roches, Ont., and was at one time a clerk in Cornwall. A year or so ago he bought a tract of land at the head of Shook Island, in the centre of the Long Sault Rapids, which it is understood, he intends converting into a public pleasure resort, providing the municipal authorities will undertake to keep it up.

Richard A. Gibson Was Widely Known All Over America

One of the best-known breeders of shorthorn cattle and sheep in America died at Delaware, Ont., in the person of Richard A. Gibson.

He was a judge of rare ability, and had held official positions in many organizations. He had the distinction of being the only Canadian ever elected to the Presidency of the American Shorthorn Association. He was also Past President of Canadian and American kennel associations, and was an ex-President and life member of the Dominion Shorthorn Breeders' Association.

LIVERPOOL TO QUEBEC

How the Newfoundland Premier Would Shorten the Route

Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, wishes to shorten the route between Liverpool and Quebec by way of Newfoundland. "In New York," said Sir Edward, "are the representatives of a powerful English syndicate, which has acquired rights to a railway running out of Quebec and has a charter to build a railway in the direction of Cape St. Charles on the Coast of Labrador. I see no reason why such a railway should not be constructed and operated in connection with a new line of fast steamers between St. Charles and Newfoundland.

"From Cape St. Charles to Quebec is about 1,000 miles; on a railroad of standard gauge this distance could be covered at 60 miles an hour, which means that passengers would be landed in Lower Canada and the United States a day earlier than by the Lusitania now."

NIGHT OWL AT GALT

A night owl was recently offered for sale at Galt market. The owl had killed and partly devoured a fine duck belonging to a farmer close by. He set a trap and caught the bird by two of its claws. The bird was not hurt, and the farmer endeavored to dispose of it alive and thus repay himself for the loss of the duck.

COLOR PHOTOS NOW PRODUCED

Remarkable Achievements in a London Studio—A Talk With the Inventor

The secret of taking and printing photographs in color—a possibility sought after as eagerly by photographers as the Philosopher's Stone by the alchemists of old—seems now to have been achieved. At the Dover Street Studios numbers of photographs of well-known people in which the most delicate tints of eyes and cheeks and hair, of jewels and lace and silks, had been reproduced on paper, sensitized by an entirely new process, so as to be an exact facsimile to the actual colors seen by the "eye of the camera." "Although colored plates of a kind have been produced," said the inventor, Mr. Hamburger, "I can claim that this is the first time that a true color-photograph has been printed upon one and the same sheet of paper without any touching up or 'transmitting.' Hitherto color photographs have been reproduced by the three-color process—the primary colors, red, yellow and blue, being laid one on top of another and blending into something that will pass for the real picture. With this method, however, it was hardly ever possible to get a pure black or a pure grey. This we have managed to achieve. I must not explain the exact way it is done, as it is a patent, but the result is a photograph that can be true to the most infinitesimal details, and indeed 'cannot lie.' Take, for instance, this photograph," and Mr. Hamburger held up a portrait of a lady whose complexion did certainly seem a little too obviously compounded of the lily and the rose. "Now this lady happened to have 'made-up' her face, imagining that the camera would not know. We implored her not to, but she was obdurate. So here you are, paint and all. Sergbot himself could not be more candid. At the same time, where truth is beauty the picture will be beautiful. You see this portrait of Miss Lily Brayton. It was taken immediately after her Australian tour. You will notice that she is a little sunburnt, but not a whit the less charming. Here is another of our triumphs—a lady in a black satin dress, with sleeves of black lace. You see how the delicate flesh tints show through, yet without any blurring. If you were to look at it through a microscope you would see every thread of the lace.

"As yet, I am sorry to say, we have not been able to take snap-shot photographs. Sunlight itself is too variable for our purposes, but a special flashlight of our own has the photographic power of sunlight, and the colors are exactly the same as if they were seen in the full blaze of the sun. Of course, if people want to be taken under different circumstances 'in the dusk with the light behind them,' or in the glow of the fire-light, we can arrange, and lighting effects to that end. As yet, however, the atmosphere of landscape remains the painter's monopoly. For how long it will remain so is for the future to decide. Our method has the advantage of being a business proposition. There is no 'if' or 'when' about it—no interminable delays. Given our sitter we can deliver the colored plate in a few minutes, and can print off as many copies as are wanted in about three weeks. We have already had orders by the thousands."

Among the celebrities who have already sat for their color photographs are Prince Alexander of Teck, the Gaekwar and Maharanee of Baroda, Mme. Rejane, Lord Esher, Mme. Polova, and Sir Joseph Lyons.

CAMP OF CARAVANS

How the Excessive Coronation Rents May be Overcome

To avoid the congestion and ruinous rents of London next June it is proposed to pitch a Coronation camp of caravans, quite in the gypsy style but far more luxurious, in one of the outer suburbs. The camp is being organized by the Caravan Club of Great Britain, which has 310 members, most of whom are wealthy, and a few titled.

The club has rented a four-acre field at Coulsdon among the Surrey hills, where the caravan will be assembled and where their owners will sleep after fatiguing days of "coronating" in town.

The usual plan for a family camp with a caravan is for the elders to sleep in the caravan itself, the girls having a sort of a canvas annex, while the [illegible] are accommodated in tents. Given fair weather, such a picnic is very enjoyable and health-giving.

The caravan-dwellers will not be the only people sleeping in the open during the Coronation period. Huge camps will be pitched in Hyde Park and other open spaces for the forty-thousand troops who will be brought to London to line the procession routes.

NEW HOTEL IN WINNIPEG

The new C.P.R. Hotel to be erected on Broadway will be an ornament to Winnipeg. A site has been chosen on what was formerly a portion of old Fort Garry. The building will have a frontage of a whole block on the south side of Broadway between Fort Garry and Garry Streets, and will be ten storeys in height, with an interior of Elizabethan in the French chalet style. The total cost of construction and equipment will be well over the million dollar mark.

Cured Awful Ringworm

"Well over four years ago my two little girls were taken with a dreadful scalp trouble that the doctors called ringworm. They treated the ——— Hospital as out-patients for a year. I had to apply their ointment with a brush, giving the children frightful pain. Often had to have their heads shaved every two weeks, but they got no better under the treatment. They used to cry with the tormenting itching, and their heads were covered with a thick scurf and dandruff.

"About a year ago I determined to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used plenty of Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment. I used only about three cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and they were cured. Their hair is growing long and nice again. They had become so ill after their three years of suffering that I had to send one away to a convalescents' home as soon as she was cured, but now she is home, well and strong. My younger girl was away from school nine months with the disease. I am very grateful to Cuticura and for the children's sake I hope other mothers will try it. The Cuticura Soap I will always use for it makes the hair so lovely."

PRINCE ALBERT
Born December 14, 1826.

Cured His Rheumatism in Three Weeks.

Rev. Father Morrisey

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was laid up for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morrisey's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Father Morrisey's "No. 7" Tablets have cured thousands of this terribly painful disease.

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 26

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

You cannot expect good work from a furnace unless it is properly installed.

You cannot buy a Furnace like you do a Stove—send it home and have the "Handy-Man" put it up—not if you expect to get all the heat out of your coal.

¶ Your heating system must be planned. The registers must be properly placed. The warm and cold air ducts must be of certain diameter. The furnace must be installed in just the right spot—and it must be just the right size. ¶ We supply plans to you absolutely free and you do not need to buy a furnace to get them either.

¶ If you have a heating problem to solve—new building or old—send us a rough diagram of your building, showing the location of doors and windows. ¶ We will prepare for you complete plans and specifications for heating that building, give you an estimate of the cost of the heating system, and also the advice of our experts on every detail.

"Hecla" Furnace

The plan is essential, but it is also essential to have a furnace that will give you ample heat—one that will supply pure, fresh air without a taint of gas, and, for the lady of the house, heat that will be free from dust and smoke.

The "Hecla" is such a furnace.

GET THIS BOOKLET:

"Comfort & Health" tells how you can get heat without gas. It tells how to get the same heat from six tons of coal as you ever got from seven. Write for it to-day. And at the same time ask for any information you may require regarding the heating of your home. 147

CANADA'S SONS WIN AT HARVARD

Out of Fifty Students Seventeen Won Fellowships and Scholarships at That College

That the fifty Canadians now studying at Harvard University are able to hold their own with the youth of Uncle Sam is proved by the fact that in the announcement of annual awards for fellowships and scholarships at that college, no less than seventeen, ranging in value from $150 to $1,150, have been won by Canadian students.

The most lucrative prize, which is the Hooper Fellowship, of the value of $1,150, goes to T. Thorvaldson, of Arnes, Man., a graduate of the University of Manitoba, who has been pursuing advanced studies in chemistry at Harvard during the last three years. The Frederick Sheldon Fellowship, of the value of $1,000, goes to Norman S. B. Gras, of London, Ont., a post-graduate student of history. Both these fellowships are available for study abroad, and Messrs. Thorvaldson and Gras will spend next year at universities in Europe.

Two Thayer Fellowships, of the value of $340 each, have been awarded to W. G. Peterson, of Montreal, son of Principal Peterson of McGill, and to Garnett G. Hedgwick, of New Glasgow. Mr. Peterson received his [illegible] from McGill in 1906, and was for three years a Rhodes scholar at Oxford. He is a candidate for the degree of Ph.D. in history at Harvard. Arthur E. R. Boak, of Vancouver, B.C., a graduate of Queen's University, gets the Saltonstall Scholarship of $400; and J. W. Mavor, of Toronto, a son of Professor James Mavor, of the University of Toronto, secures the Gibbs' Scholarship of $350.

Austin Scholarships of the value of $250 each have been awarded to Henry Chodat, of Vancouver, B.C., professor of romance languages in the College of British Columbia, to Professor H. C. Simpson, of Trinity College, and to Professor John S. Turner, of King's College, Windsor, N.S. The Austin Scholarships are awarded to professors in other colleges who desire to spend a year in post-graduate study at Harvard, the competition being open to all the educational institutions of Canada and the United States.

Eight University Scholarships, valued at $150 each, go to Canadian students as follows: Harold G. Black, Pugwash, N.S.; James W. Estey, Fredericton, N.B.; Walter A. McCubbin, Bolton, Ont.; Charles Louis Townsend, Montreal; James F. Bridgeo, Cascumpec, P.E.I.; Calvin W. Day Kingston, Ont.; Arthur R. Kaiser, Billtown, N.S.; and John A. T. WORKMEN'S GRUESOME FIND

Human Bones, Believed to be Indian's, Found in Chimney

A gruesome find was made by workmen engaged in making alterations at the old Albion Hotel, Kingston. In an old chimney the workmen found a quantity of what are believed to be human bones.

In connection with the finding of the bones a strange tale is told. Old residents say that many years ago the building now used as the Albion Hotel was the military headquarters, and that one day an Indian who had some trouble with the militia, suddenly disappeared and was never heard from again. The finding of these bones has led some to believe that the Indian met with foul play and that these are his bones.

"SLEEPLESSNESS."

Thousands of people all over this land toss night after night on a sleepless pillow. The eyes do not close in the refreshing slumber that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Some are troubled with weak and smothering spells; others palpitation of the heart; others have their nerves unhinged; but whatever the cause—it comes entirely from a derangement of either the heart or nerves, or both. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber. They do this by their invigorating effect on the heart and nerves and will tone up the whole system to perfect condition.

Mr. H. Jewal, Keswick, Ont., writes: "I am glad to have the pleasure of telling you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I would have weak spells, seemed to lose my breath, and would have to get up in the night as I could not sleep. I tried many medicines but found nothing good until I used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took three boxes and it is three years ago since I did so, and I haven't been troubled since."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AN ACTIVE LIFE

Sketch of the Career of the Late Archbishop Mellroy.

The late Archbishop Mellroy was born in Lindsay in 1833. In that city he received his early education, completing his classical studies at St Michael's College and the University of Toronto. He then took a post graduate course in theology in the Grand Seminary, Montreal, after which he was ordained at Trenton by Archbishop Cleary in 1862, at the age of twenty-six. As a priest his first duties were at Kingston, but he was soon transferred to the Diocese of Peterboro', and given charge of the missions of Bobcaygeon, Galway and Fenelon Falls. From this time on his progress in the Church was exceptionally rapid, his clear insight and business ability, together with his religious zeal and profound learning carving out for him a speedy and distinguished career.

In 1887 he was appointed as rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterboro' where he was at once entrusted with the renovation of the edifice, the purchase of property for the future hospital, and the acquisition of a number of houses for parochial use, all of which undertakings he brought to a most successful issue.

From Peterboro' the future Archbishop was transferred to Hamilton where, in addition to his duties as rector, he was private secretary to the Bishop. In 1889 he was made Vicar General of Hamilton, undertaking the administration of the diocese.

From that time he was singled out for Papal notice, for he was appointed private Chamberlain to his Holiness Pope Leo XIII. Shortly after this honour was bestowed upon the Monsignor he was advanced to his first bishopric, being elected Bishop of London, in which position he remained for over eight years.

On April 13, 1905, the Pope's signature was subscribed to the Bull which conferred upon the Bishop the highest sacred position which Ontario could offer a Roman Catholic—that which confirmed his appointment to the Archdiocese of Toronto, and on June 17 of the same year he was officially installed in the Archbishopric.

A JEWEL OF ILL-OMEN

Peculiar History of the Famous Hope Diamond.

What ill-luck will befall the Washington millionaire who recently paid $260,000 for the famous Hope diamond? His wife, who intends to wear it, refuses to believe in the superstition attached to the stone. But the history of this jewel is one of misfortune and death.

The man who brought it from the East in 1653 was Tavernier, the great French traveller. His affairs at once went wrong, and, getting out to retrieve his fortune, he died of fever abroad.

Madame de Maintenon, the famous French beauty, dated her decline from Royal favor from the day she persuaded the King to allow her to wear it. Lejar, it was worn by Marie Antoinette, who died under the guillotine, and Princess Lamballe, who also wore it, was killed by a mob.

For forty years the stone was lost, but afterwards came into the possession of an Amsterdam diamond-cutter, whose son stole it, ruined his father, and then killed himself.

Since then its history has simply been a repetition. For a time it was in the possession of a Sultan of Turkey, who afterwards lost his throne, while its keepers at Constantinople were killed.

It has been lost several times, always to return with its message of ill-luck. Even the most unsuperstitious are inclined to wonder what will be the next misfortune it will bring.

SAINT BASS EVEN MONEY FAVOURITE FOR THE FAMOUS KING'S PLATE RACE TO-DAY

It Is Said There Never Was Such a Likely Bunch to Choose From for the Canadian Classic--Powderman is Also Favoured.

KING JAMES' RACE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, MAY 20.— With Saint Bass the favourite at even money this morning, everything is in the greatest shape for the running of the famous Canadian fixture, the King's Plate, at the Woodbine this afternoon. While with the introduction of the pari mutual system, there has been a revolution in the system of placing bets at the track, there are still opportunities for betting in the same old style up town, if the police are not too active. While Gladding's colt, Saint Bass, is the favourite this morning, there are many which profess that the Mackenzie's, Miss Martim's, Sangram's Juan Shore and the Valley Farm entry, Powderman, will be well up all together. It is said that there never was such a likely bunch to choose from for the King's Plate here. The weather is superb and the track exceptionally fast.

The T. A. S. Hall has been secured as the most convenient and most centrally located place in which to hold the demonstration which will be given daily from Thursday, May 25th, to Wednesday, June 7. The demonstrations held by Miss McPhee in other places have attracted considerable attention and there will undoubtedly be a large attendance here.

LOCAL MAN SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS IN GAOL

Several Cases Heard in Police Court This Morning---Blacklister Fined---Man Put on List---Case of Violation of Fisheries Laws and Other Cases.

John Williams was charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place, in the Police Court this morning. He pleaded guilty, but asked for a chance. He stated that he had been suffering from asthma, so that he could not work. He said he had come from Lindsay, and when arrested, he was on his way to his home in Belleville. He promised that if his Worship would let him go that he would get out of the city at once. This request was granted, with the warning that if he failed to do so he would not get a chance for some time.

"Sunny Jim" Wilson paid his regular visit to the Police Court this morning. He was found sleeping in a barn at the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets, last night. He told the court that he had some liquor yesterday and that his heart had bothered him very bad, and he had just went into the barn to rest, but did not intend to stay there. Charles Clarke, his employer, was present, and asked to have him put on the blacklist. Detective Newhall gave the necessary information for this and Jim is accordingly on the Indian list again. He was allowed to go on the present charge.

Herb Laundry was charged with violating the Indian list laws, being found drunk. He pleaded guilty and paid a $10 fine.

H. Waters appeared, charged with vagrancy. He pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to six months in the county gaol.

J. Ayres was charged with illegal fishing on the 10th inst. The Fisheries overseer from Lakefield to Bensford bridge, laid the charge. He said that he was up at the Waterworks dam and saw the accused fishing with a gaff. He went over to get the gaff and the accused waded out into the river to get out of reach. The Inspector also stated that he had been told that the accused was making a boast of catching four and five fish every day.

The evidence was not clear enough so an enlargement was made until Saturday, when four other cases will also be up.

The Chief wishes the attention of citizens drawn to the fact that nonpayment of dog taxes will incur a penalty. Several have neglected to pay these taxes and will consequently have to pay the costs of court.

SPEAKS WELL FOR BANKS

Mr. C. R. Banks, our local sporting goods dealer, has received a letter from a legal gentleman in White Plains, New York, asking him to keep his store open on the evening of June 15, as he and a party expect to reach Peterborough on that date, on their way to Stony Lake, and want to purchase a supply of Banks' trolls, spoons, and other fishing tackle. The letter concludes: "I have hunted New York City for trolls and spoons, such as I got from you last season, and cannot find them. I shall want some of those copper spoons of the willow leaf shape; some of the double spoons, such as we have bought from you before and perhaps, some of the star spoons of the right size, etc.

FINE NEW GOVERNMENT WHARVES HAVE BEEN PLACED ON THE LOWER OTONABEE RIVER

Commodious New Wharf Has Been Constructed at Campbelltown and Will Be Of Great Convenience to Residents of That Section of Township.

ANOTHER WHARF BUILT

The Dominion government has completed a sufficiently commodious new wharf at Campbelltown, about ten miles south of the city and on the Otonabee shore. This wharf will be a great convenience to the residents of a large area of Otonabee, in facilitating access to steamers by the Otonabee people, and will also be a great convenience to masters of steamers in effecting landing or embarking of passengers and whatever freight may be offered. Mr. John Fife, ex-reeve, has long advocated this wharf, and Hon. Mr. Stratton, assuring him that as soon as the work could be completed it would be done, has succeeded in interesting the government to the point of practical action and the result is an excellent new wharf. Nor has the opposite side of the river been neglected. A few miles further up the river on the North Monaghan side, a new wharf has been built, which will serve a considerable section of North Monaghan contiguous to the road between the eighth and ninth concessions, when it is opened out. This wharf is also situated near the T. A. S. Park, which is a popular resort, requented many times during the season by a large number of our citizens.

These wharves constitute a great convenience to the public and the navigation interests of the city and are justifiable as adding to the business and pleasure possibilities of the river south of Peterboorugh, which is one of the most charming river reaches in the country. As the rate in which local interests is withdrawing the consumption of wharves in the river, by the time the canal is completed, it will be well equipped in this regard, and with a little improvement on the channel, removal of obstructions, etc, the Otonabee will be one of the most delightful aquatic resorts in the country. Several additional wharfs along the stream will be constructed this season if the appropriations are not blocked by the obstruction of the opposition.

SPRING DISTRIBUTION OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Older members of the Horticultural Society, who have not already been served in the spring distribution of plants—this season a Crimson Rambler rose plant, or an Hydrangea Runioulata Grandiflora—will not be neglected. SPECIAL SERVICES ARRANGED FOR ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Professor J. J. Lowe, who is to begin to-morrow in St. Paul's church a ten days' mission, comes from Philadelphia. He was connected with the Bethany Presbyterian Church there, better known as the Wanamaker Church, as Dr. Chapman's assistant, and as musical director of the great choir in the Church and Sunday School. When Dr. Chapman resigned the pastorate of the church to devote all his time to evangelistic effort, Professor Lowe went out with him and since that time has been devoting himself to preaching the Gospel, as well as singing the message of salvation. During the last two years he has assumed charge of the meetings for young people in Dr. Chapman's simultaneous campaigns, giving illustrated lessons and addresses. He will employ on the week nights the illustrated form of address in St. Paul's.

The Hespeler paper has the following to say of a mission which Professor Lowe recently conducted there:

"As one sat in the perfect stillness of that hour, he verily lived over again the times of nineteen hundred years ago, in turn viewing Jesus on the cross, standing with Mary at the empty tomb, or, with the disciples, watching His ascension until a cloud overshadowed Him from their sight. It required but little drawing upon our imagination to feel that the spectator was witnessing the reality. When we say that the original paintings of the scenes shown run into the thousands of dollars, it may be readily discerned how realistic they are. Added to this is the great pleasure of hearing Mr. Lowe, in his splendid baritone voice, in some illustrated song, its mellow notes conveying the theme in sympathetic strains to the inmost recesses of the hearts of his hearers. These stereopticon talks will ever remain in the memory of both young and old, and Mr. Lowe will always find a hearty welcome when he returns to Hespeler."

Mr. Lowe's programme in St. Paul's for to-morrow, is as follows: A service for boys at ten o'clock. This service will be dismissed at a quarter to eleven, in sufficient time for any boys present from other churches to go to their own church worship. Then he will give a special address to the Sunday School in the afternoon, the classes meeting in the church instead of taking up the lesson for the day. He will also take part in both the morning and evening worship.

RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS

The firm of Coleman Bros. are deservedly receiving many compliments upon the manner in which they catered for the luncheon tendered Hon. William Jennings Bryan at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday. Until 10.30 o'clock on the morning of the luncheon the firm had not the least idea that their services would be required for the occasion, but in spite of that fact they acted so expeditiously at the eleventh hour that at 12.30 luncheon was ready to be served to the one hundred guests. The completeness of the arrangements under the circumstances is being warmly praised by those who were present.

PEACE SUNDAY.

To-morrow is set apart in many communities in Canada and the United States as "Peace Sunday." We, that is, the world at large, are getting more and more to taking our religion in chunks; by spasms. We have "Peace Sunday," "Temperance Sunday," "Mothers' Sunday," and so on. Is not this getting astray? Why should we not practise the cardinal virtues, upon the observance of which all these special Sundays are founded, every Sunday and every day in the week. The religion or virtue that shines only at times is a poor quality. Religion, virtue, righteousness is a personal belonging, and should be practised every day in the week, and every hour of the day, and enter and influence every act of life. The carpenter can, and should, drive in his religion with every nail; the bricklayer lay it with every brick—in the way of honest, faithful work, and so on through all the diversities of human activity. The religion that will not mould, influence and direct a man's every-day life is not of the sterling variety. Too many of us are pious only on Sundays.

PAYING MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, the son of Mr. "Joe" Chamberlain, declares on the proposal to pay British members of Parliament, that it will "flood the public with money-grabbing politicians seeking an easy livelihood." Mr. Chamberlain must be ignorant of Canadian conditions, if he thinks the pay of members of parliament, means "an easy livelihood." We pay our members of Parliament $2,500 a session, not as a means of livelihood, but to indemnity them for loss through serving their country. With the uncounted calls upon a member of parliament, with subscription lists for churches, charities, etc.—that will not be denied—thrust under his nose at every turn, the average member of parliament is pretty thoroughly exploited, financially; and, if at the end of his term he has remaining much of his sessional indemnity money, he is very hard hearted and has a special art of turning down "the subscription solicitor; and besides, has a rather poor chance of being again invited to sit in parliament. Pay of members of parliament means no "easy livelihood, but is intended to recoup the losses sustained through neglect of personal business to attend to public business. The British opposition to paying members of parliament, comes from the privileged and wealthy classes. So long as a member of parliament must serve without pay, public life is generally open only to those who can pay their own way; and it works to the exclusion from parliament of men of ability, rich in capacity, for service but poor in pocket; tends to shut out the common people from being represented in parliament by men of their own class.

FOR BETTER CIVIC GOVERNMENT

In another column is reprinted an article from the Toronto World dealing with the question of municipal government by commission. Our contemporary seems to take it for granted that it is impracticable to elect commissioners by the ordinary methods; and suggests that they should not be elected by popular vote, but appointed by a council specifically elected for that purpose. At first sight, this seems to be a roundabout way of coming at the desired result. Of course there is this advantage, that for seats on the council board with such light duties; with relief from the thousand vexations and trifling details; with the elimination of the multiplicity of committee meetings, which consume so much of an aldermen's time as if he belonged to a dozen lodges; with these objectionable features eliminated, good men, men of business ability and sound judgment, could easily be induced to offer themselves. But is it necessary to take this devious way to elect commissioners? We have had good results from the direct election by popular vote of water commissioners; and at the same time we have got good men to serve in the City Trust Commission by appointment. Whatever method is best, will be discovered when the people come to a full realization of the necessity of adopting some improvement upon the present unsatisfactory, cumbersome and inefficient system, or rather lack of system, of doing civic government. It is well said that disgust, which is not too strong a word, at the inefficiency that marks the work of the average city council, is largely responsible for the growing belief that government by commission would bring better results. At any rate it could not bring worse results. We could not have more municipal muddling, could not have more waste of the money which the people are called upon to pay in increasing volume every year and with increasingly unsatisfactory results. When we come to consider the conditions that attend the present unsatisfactory mode of civic government, the manner of constituting councils which is accompanied by so much indifference on the part of the ratepayers, it is time that, public spirited citizens, with influence in the community, with interest in the progress of the city, should take an interest in the progress of the city, should take an interest in bettering civic government. Everybody will acknowledge that under the present system a city council to a large extent, represents only itself. Ratepayers are called upon to vote for a certain sort of candidates, brought out by themselves or some occult influence. The people have to vote for what is offered and even at that with the ward system, eight tenths of the electors are practically disfranchised; do not vote and are not represented in the city council by virtue of the votes they cast. Each elector can only vote for two members and only elects two tenths of the council. The other eight members do not represent him, for he has no voice in their selection. This is a mere travesty of representative government, and it is no wonder that a ratepayer does not take any great interest in the work of constituting the council; for whatever interest he might take only results in the election of two out of ten member. He has, in any event, to have his business done by ten members, eight out of whom he has no voice in electing, or no voice in defeating, no matter how flagrantly they mismanage his business. Doesn't it seem to be time for a change?

GROWTH OF BRITISH INCOMES.

The growth of wealth in Great Britain may be accurately measured by the assessment upon which the income tax is levied. All incomes of $800 and over are liable to the tax, and it is safe to say that very few persons escape his drag-net of the treasury department. The work is done with British thoroughness. A noted statistician, Mr. L. G. Chiozza Money, M.P., quotes official figures to prove the amazing growth in the past fifteen years of the aggregate income upon which taxation is levied. In the following table the second column gives the income tax assessment (the total income of persons receiving £160 or $800 a year), and the third column gives the average income of this class:

Year	Assessment	Average Income
1895-6	£ 678,000,000	£699
1896-7	705,000,000	741
1897-8	734,000,000	741
1898-9	763,000,000	783
1899-1900	788,000,000	784
1900-1	833,000,000	816
1901-2	867,000,000	841
1902-3	869,000,000	844
1903-4	903,000,000	880
1904-5	912,000,000	889
1905-6	925,000,000	854
1906-7	944,000,000	874
1907-8	960,000,000	899
1908-9	1,010,000,000	918
1909-10	1,050,000,000	946
1910-11	1,090,000,000	964
Increase	£409,000,000	£266

Here is an increase of over two billion dollars in the income of the income taxpayers, or 50 per cent., in fifteen years. The average income in the same period has risen about $1,330, or 38 per cent. Figures like these make it clear how the present Government has been able to reduce the public debt by $360,000,000 since 1909, and how the British Chancellor can budget for over $900,000,000 a year, while trade and industry continue to boom. They help to explain also why the Government has ventured into great and costly schemes for the annihilation of pauperism and the betterment of the condition of the masses, and why it has laid the burden chiefly upon the shoulders of the richer classes.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

A Proposal To Place City Government By Commission On Business Basis

(Toronto World.)

We welcome the tone of The Ottawa Free Press contribution to the discussion of government by commission. It is at least a change from the captious criticism or the flat denunciation of those who are moved by petty politics alone in considering the question.

We believe that petty politics is almost the whole difficulty in the way of our present municipal government. To the extent that petty politics and its attendant patronage evil is removed the present methods have been fairly successful. That they have been so much more successful than the methods followed in the United States, where the revolt has occurred, and the widespread acceptance of government by commission is due to our somewhat purer political atmosphere.

In the larger political field patronage and corruption occasionally lead to gross scandals, but the issues are generally so large that incompetence and inefficiency on the part of officials will not be tolerated. We have the contrast of comparative purity with inefficiency in our municipal government, and comparative efficiency with political manipulation to put no finer point upon it, in our federal and provincial governments.

We have as little faith as The Free Press in the possibility of electing five good commissioners by the suffrages of the general electorate. And so we have proposed the consideration of the plan that obtains in every other line of business, and which in principle, is adopted in many British municipalities.

The reason there cannot be better men elected to the city councils at present is sometimes blamed on the people, and sometimes on the candidates. The people have little or nothing to do with choosing the candidates, and there is no inducement for, and every obstacle against, good candidates coming out.

In the first place good men have not the time to give to all the petty work of a city council with its endless committees, its interminable and utterly useless discussions which are supposed to impress the voters, and the repetition ad nauseam by a score of people of arguments and views which real men of affairs would take for granted without further ado. Facts are the only things that count in disposing of business, while they are the last things thought of by the average alderman who lays far more stress on votes. In the long run bids have to be obtained from the officials, and it is on the facts that the determination of efficiency depends, not on politics, or votes, or religion or personal prejudice.

We believe that the sensible people of the city are practically unanimous on this point. But they see no way of getting themselves on record. In a joint-stock company the shareholders vote for directors who do not conduct the business of the company, but who see that men are placed in charge who do conduct it. If the directors had to do the business of the company there would speedily be a change in affairs, since only men who could give their whole time to the work could be chosen, and there would necessarily be a less able class of men available. Experience has evolved the present directors' system to obviate just that difficulty. Why cannot the principle be adopted for municipal purposes?

If the members of a city council get no remuneration, are deprived of patronage, and have no duties to engross their time, the result would be to make it possible for a very much better class of men to offer themselves for the council board than we ever get at present. The best of the share holders would present themselves instead of the worst as at present, and we believe the people would be glad of the chance to elect such men. As it is they never get a chance.

With such a council, as in the directorate of a great company, the greatest care would be taken to choose the permanent officials, the commissioners, or whatever title might be given them, and efficiency would be the first consideration. The councillors under such a system would be, we believe, the "big men" that The Free Press regards as the bulwark of the commercial corporations.

We trust The Free Press will not regard our suggestion as anything more than an earnestly considered contribution to a problem which must be solved before our cities grow much older. The people now never know for whom they are voting in cities as large as Toronto or Montreal. When we reach the million mark, and in a generation or two we may have half a dozen such cities, other methods must be adopted. The system that gets our ablest men before the people must surely be the most satisfactory and efficient.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Peterborough is to-day the city beautiful in spite of the indifference and overt acts of untidiness of some of her unworthy citizens. The Examiner has always contended that Peterborough possessed the finest and most generally distributed lines of beautiful street trees of any city in Canada, and visitors who have travelled much confirm this claim.

Now, with our streets, for the first time in our history, generally cleaned and tidied, the trees are seen to their best advantage. The lush foliage of the expanding leaves hang out their emerald banner from every twig, and form over-arching vaults of greenery to the smooth, clean streets, washed with the benign rains of the past day or two. The flanking boulevards leap into Hibernian greenness; and, looking adown or up almost any of our long stretching streets, we look as though a tunnel of foliage, vaulted by the blue sky, and flooded with shifting flecks of sunlight, playing at hide and seek with shadows on the smooth emerald of the boulevards, or the swept and garnished gray of the driveway.

But here and there the beauty is broken by heaps of rubbish and litter, raked or swept off private lawns and premises, and dumped upon the street with a sinful disregard of decency. St. Paul enjoins as a religion, or act of religion: "Let all things be done decently, and in order." It is neither "decent" nor "orderly" to throw litter from private premises upin the streets that have been carefully cleaned. It is both untidy and unchristian.

We have insisted frequently upon the necessity of co-operation—which literally, as well as etymologically, means, working together—between corporation and citizen, if we would realise the city-beautiful to the fullest extent and degree. We need still further cooperation. The pulpit could help. Instead of unsettling old-fashioned devotion with new-fangled theology, preachers might well say a word or two from the pulpit, or altar, as to the duty of their flock to do their duty as citizens in promoting the beauty of the city. Beauty is a sort of religion. The good Lord who made all things, made all things beautiful, and in the beauty of trees and flowers we have the divinest manifestations of the infinitely varied art of the Divine, so to speak. We are only true Christians, true ladies and gentlemen, when we so act as to give pleasure to others. It is no pleasure to others to have the beauty and order that delights the eye of every citizen that walks, or drives, on our streets, destroyed by thoughtless disregard of the feelings and pleasure of others.

Do our teachers ever preach the gospel of beauty to children? Do they ever, incidentally, not to say, persistently, inculcate the principles of good citizenship, by urging children to so act as to promote and preserve the beauty of the public and private places of the city, and thus promote the good name of the city, and spread its fame as a beautiful city of beautiful homes, and an unsurpassed city, to live happily and comfortably in; a city where each neighbour cares for his neighbour—loves his neighbour as himself, in that he will do nothing to annoy, or displease his neighbour, or undo, or mar, or thrust a discordant note into the general harmony of beauty and tidiness?

We should have a chair of civic economy in our schools, where the duty of citizenship should be taught to pupils in our schools, from the kindergarten to the senior leaving.

We are gradually coming to a better state of things; but there are still a host of sinners against civic beauty, who will not create beauty about their own premises, nor respect the beauty created by others in their vicinity.

The Horticultural Society is doing an excellent missionary work in this regard. This year it will be assisted by a large number of new recruits represented by the largely increased membership of the Society. It is to be hoped that the new members will, by the zeal characteristic of new converts, give a fresh impulse to the cult of the city beautiful, and each form a new centre from which will radiate the influence and example of adding to the beauty of the city.

During the coming week there will be made the distribution of the premiums offered to new members, consisting of twelve bedding plants, or twelve plants for window garden, or a fine, plumaged Boston Fern—premiums that, at retail rates, and taken in connection with the Autumn distribution of bulbs, and the subscription to the Horticulturist, amount, in actual value, to half more than the one dollar membership fee.

The campaign for the increase of membership of the Society is practically closed, and has resulted in the addition of about one hundred new names. This is a pitifully small increase for a city like Peterborough; the increase should be five times greater; but it is probable that in the coming week, when the public see the splendid premiums given to new members, considerable additions will be made to the new membership. A gratifying feature is is that each member will practically be a missionary to spread the gospel of tidiness, the cult of the beautiful, whose charm is never so powerful as in the opening days of spring and summer, when all nature is always itself in the garment of gladness and unspeakably and unspeakably satisfying beauty.

A HARD WINTER.

Last winter was unusually hard upon many living and growing things. Lawn grass was killed in a very extensive way, perennial plants, such as clumps of violets, were killed and even the canes of raspberries and other kindred plants were frozen back. In many parts winter wheat and clover were badly winter killed and in a host of many other ways the peculiar rigors of the winter were shown. Many think that the almost total failure of the crop of tulip bloom in Peterborough was due to the severe winter. But that is not the case. Some plots were uncovered too soon, permitting the early showing leaves to be touched by frost, many have informed, but the real cause was defective bulbs. Holland, from which nearly all our bulbs come, had two or three bad seasons; the bulbs did not mature properly and consequently those sent to this country were defective, with corresponding results in blooming. But we forget a great many of these things with the genial air and lusty growth of these perfect spring days.

ANOTHER NELSON DOES HIS DUTY.

(London Daily News)

Earl Nelson, the "father" of the House of Lords, concluded a busy week on Saturday evening, when, in spite of his 85 years of age, he drove over from Trafalgar to Downton (South Wilts) and took part in the opening ceremony of a billiard table at the village club by playing a match with the Earl of Radnor. The game was played before a large attendance of villagers, who heartily applauded the aged peer.

On Wednesday and Thursday Lord Nelson attended the Salisbury Diocesan Synod, and frequently took part in the debates. Friday he spent on his estates; he read the lesson at Charlton Church yesterday; and to-day he is to preside at the annual meeting of the Wilts Friendly Society.

AN EMPIRE DAY PRAYER.

Lord, by whose might the heavens are steady,
The source from Whom they came,
Who boldest Nations in Thy hand,
And callest the stars by name,
Whose thunders forces do not cease,
To mould us as of yore—
The whistling of the arts of peace,
The anvil strokes of war.
Strong are we? Make us stronger yet;
Great? Make us greater far;
Our feet, Antarctic ocean fret;
Our crown, the Polar Star.
Round earth's wild coast our batteries speak;
Our highway is the main,
We stand as guardian of the weak,
We burst the oppressor's chain.
Great God uphold us in our task,
Keep pure and clean our spoil,
Silence the moneyed words which mask
The wisdom of the fool:
The riches of the world are Thine;
Pour down Thy bounteous grace,
And make illustrious and divine
The sceptre of our race.

—Rev. F. G. Scott.

Prohibition Logic.

The saloon differs from all other business in that no one regards it as a blessing.

The saloon is a nuisance, and tolerated only when it is believed to be necessary.

The saloon cannot be defended at all if the community does not want it.

The liquor seller ought to be content to sell when his services are desired, and the manufacturer of liquor ought to be content to dispose of his products among those who desire them.

If the people of a block object to having a saloon in the block I think they ought to have a right to exclude it.

If the people of a ward object to having a saloon in the ward, I think they ought to have a right to exclude it.

If the people of a town object to having a saloon in the town, I think they ought to have a right to exclude it.

If the people of a county object to having a saloon in the county, I think they ought to have the right to exclude it, and so on with the State and with the nation.—W. J. Bryan.

Do You Wish to be at Your Best?

Surely every serious man who respects himself and would rightly fill his place in the world wishes to be at his best. Let such give good heed to what is recorded below:

The following story is told of Paganini, the greatest violinist the world has ever known: A great artist, and friend of the player, who attended the Queen's Hall when the great violinist performed, remarked the Paganini: 'You have played those wonderful passages, requiring the greatest fineness of touch, absolutely without fault, except on two nights this week, but on those nights you slightly blurred certain notes. Why is it?' 'Ah!' replied the great violinist, 'before going on to the platform on those two nights I took a glass of wine. I felt conscious myself that in the most difficult passages I had not transacted them perfectly.'

Dr. Lorenz, the eminent European surgeon, whose remarkable operations have attracted much attention, emphatically declares the danger of alcoholic drinks. A banquet was given in his honour in New York City, and wine was served. The eminent guest declined it, and politely requested the waiter to bring a cup of tea. This caused him to be asked if he were a total abstainer from the use of wines and liquors. His answer was as follows: "I cannot say that I am a Temperance agitator, but I am a surgeon. My success depends upon my brain being clear, my muscles firm, and my nerves steady. No one can take alcoholic liquors without blunting these physical powers, which I must always keep on edge. As a surgeon I must not drink."—Selected.

The Danger of Example.

A tragic story was told by the late Dean Farrar of the appalling consequence of a minister's 'moderation'. One of the speakers at a meeting arranged under Temperance auspices a clergyman, non-abstaining, ventured apologetically an endeavour to prove that strong drink, used in moderate degree, was healthful, Scriptural and gentlemanly. When he had finished, a venerable, grey-haired man arose and desired to be allowed to make a few remarks. It was a tragic incident he narrated in broken accents. A young friend had fallen into the clutches of strong drink's power. At length, after much kind persuasion, he was induced to pledge himself to complete abstinence from intoxicants. Manfully for many months, at the cost of a terrible struggle, he stuck to his promise. At last one evening he was present at a social gathering when wine was passed around. A clergyman who was there partook of the wine, and as he did so, vindicated the practice in a sentence or two. "Well," thought the young man, if a minister can take wine, and justify it, why not I?" With tremendous force the temptation came. He accepted a glass. Like a spark it kindled the dormant alcoholic craving into a flame of insatiable desire. He drank, and drank, and drank, and scarcely ceased, until a few months later he died—a raving madman! For a moment the old man paused to overcome the choking in his throat. Then in a voice vibrant with intense emotion, he added. The young man was my only son, and the clergyman was the reverend gentleman who has just addressed the meeting.—The Alliance News.

A Stainless Flag.

The cry rings out o'er all the land
to-day,
No more let greed and vice on manhood prey!
Oh, let our name for truth and honour stand.
The land of justice, of the helping hand;
No more let sordid greed the laws control,
Nor vice, unstayed, degrade the nation's soul.
The emblem of a noble nation's life,
True sign of power that hushes war and strife,
Give us a stainless flag, men of the nation;
Drive out the greed for gain,
Let rum no longer reign; strive that our land obtain
A stainless flag.

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Stretching, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on," said if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

STANDING IN THE LIBRARY CONTEST

The library contest is still furnishing considerable interest. The leadership this week has been transferred from the T. A. S. to the Knights of Pythias, who now have a lead over the Total Abstainers of about 60,000 votes. However, others are coming up fast, namely the Oddfellows and West End Athletic Club and any count may show a change in the leading half dozen.

In the country district the only great gain this week has been by the Gilmour Baptist Church, which has moved up within shooting distance of the leader in this division.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE RURAL PRESS

From Farm and Dairy.

The source from which comes the opposition to the rural phone and to the information that is disseminated by farm papers should convince farmers of the value of both of these agencies for the improvement of country life. A hog buyer speaking to an editor of Farm and Dairy recently said that he would close up on every rural phone and every farm paper in Canada and out of business. "When you go to buy hogs from a farmer nowadays," said the irate buyer, "he knows as much about prices as you do and there is nothing like the money in buying hogs that there used to be.

It is the good old times, of which we again shall be able, when the farmers had no ready means of following the market up, were practically at the mercy of the buyer and had a take-it-or-leave-it proposition to meet. Competition between buyers was the only factor that counted as a safe guide for produce and as we talk about the competition as well as the prices with regularity. Then were the good old days all right—but from the buyer's point of view only.

A farmer who for several years has had a phone in his home recently informed Farm and Dairy that the first year he had it he saved the cost of the phone on a single deal. A buyer came to the house and offered him what he supposed was a good price for hogs. He skipped to the phone and ascertained in a few minutes that the price he was offered was half a cent a pound below the prevailing market price.

Valuable market information is given in the market pages of the agricultural journals. The rural phone and the market page of the farm papers enable us farmers to market produce to the best advantage. We cannot afford to be without either.

DEATHS

HE'S A CONVERT TO A GROWING BELIEF

That Dodd's Kidney Pills are the Sure Cure for Kidney Disease

Mr. Renie Moulaison was treated by two doctors, but found his relief and cure in six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Surette Island, Yarmouth, N. S., May 19.—(Special.)—Renie Moulaison, a fisherman of this place, is a convert to the growing belief that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the sure cure for Kidney Disease.

"My trouble started with a cold," Mr. Moulaison states. "My muscles would cramp, I had backache and I had dizzy spells. My head often ached and I had a tired, nervous feeling while specks of light flashed in front of my eyes.

I suffered in this way for over five months and was treated by two doctors, but they didn't seem to be able to do much for me. Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and soon started to improve. I took six boxes in all and now I am glad to say I am cured."

If you have any two or three of Mr. Moulaison's symptoms you may be sure your Kidneys are not in good working order. Bad Kidneys mean Backache, Rheumatism, Heart Disease or Bright's Disease unless attended to. The sure way to cure them is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

APPLE GROWING

From Farm and Dairy.

Minor Lick, Ontario Co., Ont.

"Discussion along the lines of tariff and reciprocity with the United States naturally gives rise to the question, "What would free entry to the United States market mean to Ontario apple growers?" Ontario has as good men, able to care for apple trees and with experience in marketing as any part of America. We have the soil and climate suited for the production of high class apples of the very best quality. We have Ben Davis, McIntosh Red, Greenstein, Spy, and other high class apples that cannot be equalled in any part of the world.

Now with the men, the soil and conditions such as mentioned, why should we be closed or almost closed out of the large United States markets? Before the heavy duties were placed on apples, entering the United States a large share of our apples was shipped there. In spite of the 75 cent duty even now some are shipped every year. It would appear that with that duty off that we would find ourselves close to one of the best markets for the varieties already named, and also for Belleflower and Talman Sweet. To-day we can place apples on most of the Old Country markets and in Winnipeg as cheaply or cheaper than in Buffalo.

If there was a high range of mountains between Oshawa and Buffalo, every pressure would be brought to bear on the Government to have the mountain range tunnelled through that traffic should be hindered as little as possible. But we have a tariff wall that is equally obstructive of trade. I can remember when the duty on apples that we had sold to a United States buyer 25c per barrel the buyer paid. We sold to England.

We want the widest market possible. It would appear then the enlargement of the market would encourage producers, and especially stimulate various growers to improve their methods and thus eventually lead to further development of apple growing in this country.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad, and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

KICKED BY HORSE

Fourteen Year Old Boy Kicked on the Hip and Narrowly Escaped Serious Injury

The fourteen-year-old son of Mr. Wesley Gilson, who resides one mile east of Lindsay, narrowly escaped being seriously injured yesterday when he was kicked by a horse on the hip, and knocked down. The accident happened at six o'clock this morning, while the young chap was leading a colt about the yard. Although not seriously injured he is suffering intense pain, and was attended by a physician. The colt had no shoes on or the accident might have been serious.

Spring Humors

Result From the Poisoned Condition of the Blood

Discharge is Checked—Sores Are Cleaned Out and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Aside from the suffering caused by pimples, sores and skin eruptions, there is the annoyance and embarrassment to which they give rise, particularly when on the hands or face.

It is quite proper to try to get the blood right by use of internal treatment, but this is a tedious method of overcoming the skin troubles, which can so readily be gotten rid of by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The three pricipal ingredients of this great, soothing, healing ointment are the most potent known to the medical profession as a means of cleaning out sores and ulcers, destroying morbid growth, lessening the discharge, preventing blood poisoning and stimulating the healing process.

Dr. Chase's Ointment stops itching almost as soon as applied and often heals almost like magic.

The time required for cure depends on the nature of the ailment, but, unlike internal treatment, the benefits are apparent to the eye, and you can note from day to day the improvement made.

The wonderful success of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the cure of eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis and old sores and wounds is sufficient proof that it is bound to be satisfactory in the treatment of less severe cases of the skin. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. HOW MILK SOURS

May be Responsible for Many Diseases and Ills

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity, weak, thin, run-down, tired out and nervous. Such women need Vinol just as much as did Mrs. Jessie Fuller, of 2207 Sterling street, San Francisco, Cal., who says:

"I have used Vinol for some time with particularly gratifying results. I was run down, weak and debilitated, and my appetite was gone. After taking several bottles of Vinol I found my condition greatly improved, and do not hesitate to recommend Vinol to anyone similarly afflicted." (We guarantee this statement to be genuine.)

Vinol is not a patent medicine, but a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, which creates an appetite, tones up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid and [illegible] George and Charlotte streets, also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

HORSE KILLED

A MARINE MIX-UP.

Captain and Steward of German Ship, Cause Legal Tangle.

Halifax, N.S., May 20.—An interesting question of law and discipline on board ship is furnished by the captain of the German freight steamer Rheingraf now in this port. Captain Schnoor of that steamship had some trouble with his chief officer, but particularly with his chief steward, whose name is Martin. The upshot of it was that Steward Martin had Capt. Schnoor arrested on a charge of assault, committed on board the steamer, and on which the police magistrate fined the captain $20.

Capt. Schnoor from the first stubbornly held that no court had any jurisdiction over a German ship except on a charge as serious as that of murder for instance. He was amenable only to German law. A decision given by Judge Drysdale of the Supreme Court, that British law governed German ships in Canadian waters had no weight at all with Capt. Schnoor, and he refused to pay the fine, appealing to the imperial German consul at Halifax, N. C. Grant, to straighten out the matter. To avoid further complications, the consul became responsible for the fine and Schnoor was released.

Then the captain asked that the steward be sent back to the ship. The [illegible] refused to go, alleging that he was afraid of his life. A second appeal was then made to the German consul, who replied, telling Mr. Grant that the most he could do was send back to the ship. The consul could not persuade Martin to go, though he was told that otherwise he would be considered a deserter. All arguments and [illegible] failing, Mr. Grant had Martin committed as a deserter, and in the meantime the jurisdiction of German law in Canadian waters over German shipping and the case of a steward who will not go back to his post with a captain who assaulted him are matters to be considered by the authorities.

BRAKEMAN MISSING.

Life May Be Lost in Wreckage in Collision on C.P.R.

Montreal, May 20.—An engineer and fireman were injured and a brakeman is reported missing in a collision of C.P.R. freight trains near the city at midnight Thursday. The injured are engineer Robert Crawford and fireman Arthur Hughes, of Ottawa.

A brakeman named Miller, from Quebec, is missing. It is feared he was buried in the wreckage.

The two trains were the Ottawa and Quebec fast freights. The accident occurred at an intersection. The Ottawa train ran into the other, striking the cars sideways with such force that the engine was derailed and turned turtle. Crawford was pinned under the engine, being badly scalded.

Hughes says the signals were set for "line clear."

Apiary Demonstration.

Trenton, May 20.—An apiary demonstration under the auspices of the Northumberland Beekeepers' Association in connection with the Northumberland and Durham branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture was held in the wards of Mrs. J. W. Fraser at Frankford yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Morley Pettit, provincial apiarist, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, was present. Methods of swarm control, the use of the wax press and illustrations showing how to detect foul brood and approved remedies for this, were among the matters discussed.

Thursday a grand rally of beekeepers under the auspices of the Hastings Beekeepers' Association was held upon the premises of Mr. E. Geary, Creekston. Inspector Elliott of Wooler and Mr. Morley Pettit were among those present.

C.P.R. as Tree Planter.

Montreal, May 20.—The latest C.P.R. enterprise which will turn out in the planting of millions of young trees along their lines in Western Canada. These trees will in time serve the double purpose of taking the place of the present snow fences and of encouraging their settlers to beautify their homes by the planting of shade trees. So far the railway has had great success with their trees, nearly all of them appearing to be in a flourishing condition.

Ten Years For Murder.

Chatanooga, Tenn., May 20.—Dr. J. Sherman was sentenced yesterday to ten years in the penitentiary for the murder of Thomas B. Herman, his brother-in-law, whom he killed; he succeeded on self-defence.

HONOR TO KAISER.

First State Ball of the Reign Held at Buckingham Palace.

London, May 20.—The first state ball of the reign of King George, the date for which was selected in honor of the visit of the German Emperor and Empress, was held at Buckingham Palace last night. It was an unusually brilliant function.

King George and Emperor William previously had dined together at the palace with the royal family, and afterwards were joined by some thirty additional members of the royal household, who formed into a magnificent procession. The King and Empress, in German and British uniforms respectively, were preceded by the state officials attired in gorgeous robes, carrying their wands of office, through the whole length of the state apartments to the ball room, where Lord gathered thousands of guests, including the entire diplomatic corps.

Queen Mary and the Empress Augusta Victoria and all the ladies were lavish displays of jewelry. Emperor William took as his partner Queen Mary, and King George, the German Empress. The Duke of Connaught and Princess Victoria Louise opened the ball with the "Royal Quadrille." Midnight saw a repetition of the procession, this time from the ball room to the supper room.

RESCUES BROTHER.

Twelve-Year-Old Girl Performs Brave Feat.

Ottawa, May 20.—The plucky rescue by a twelve-year-old girl of her baby brother, and the revelation of a dangerous fire trap in the shape of a spike fence erected near a lofty apartment house, were features of a fire on Elgin street yesterday. The fire originated in one of the apartments occupied by Mr. A. B. Shehyn of the civil service, on the third floor, where seven children were playing with matches. The family were in the rear, all save the baby and a brother, and by the time they reached the front of the apartment the place was in flames. Simcoe Shehyn, aged 13 dashed through the burning hall and carried the little one to safety, though a cushion on which it was lying was ablaze. The girl's arms and face were burned. The fire brigade was seriously handicapped by a thirty-foot fence erected by a neighbor to prevent the windows of the place from overlooking his lawn. Removal of the fence will be ordered.

C.P.R. Increases Wages.

Winnipeg, May 20.—In the Canadian Pacific Railway's freight sheds here the truckers, storemen and checkers will receive an all-round increase in wages at once, the raise being given voluntarily by the company. There are about five hundred men who will benefit by the increase. The rates paid previously were 18 1-2c. per hour, to truckers or porters, and $58.80 per month to checkers. The pay to truckers is raised now to 20c. per hour. Checkers will now receive $65 per month for the first six months and then $67.50 for another six months, which will later be increased to $69 and after two years to $70. The previous maximum was $60.

A Difference of Opinion.

Kingston, May 20.—The stonecutters have agreed to the proposal of arbitration. The masons, however, persist in their contention that they have no dispute with the stonecutters, but that they have an agreement with the mason contractors, whereby they are given authority to do work on the Nicol building, which is in dispute. This they are agreeable to taking the matter up with the contractors, but not with the stonecutters.

More Boats From Belgium.

Antwerp, May 20.—In consequence of the growing popularity of emigration to Canada, it is reported that several steamship lines are altering their service accordingly.

SKIN SUFFERER TRIED EVERYTHING—THEN D.D.D. CURED

This was the experience of Mrs. Geo. Newman, of Orangeville, Ont. She wrote in Jan., 1910.

"I was terribly troubled with eczema on my face, neck and hands for four years. I tried everything I had heard tell of, then saw your advertisement in the paper, sent for a trial bottle of D.D.D., used it on my face and got well. It is now two years and no return of the eczema. I consider I am cured and it certainly was a blessing to me."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm or any other skin disease, you will feel instantly soothed and the itch relieved at once when a few drops of this compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc. is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent, too.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 20.—Wheat opened easy, being influenced by weaker American cables and prices 1/4d to 1/2d lower. Following the opening there was further pressure in the way of realizing and values further declined. Pressure was due to reports of general rains in the wheat belt of Russia and prediction of large world's shipments with Russian offerings freely at the decline. Crop advices from India, Australia and Argentine favorable. The lighter Argentine shipments than expected as well as light shipments for Australia, were offset by rains in Russia.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Promises of cooler weather and showers turned wheat prices into a downward course to-day. A prediction that shipments from Russia would be heavy formed another important influence on the bear side. As a result opening figures were 1/2c lower all around than 24 hours before. The end of the day left every other leading staple at a decline, corn off 1/2c to 3/4c, oats a shade to 1/4c to 3/4c, and provisions in a slide from last night's level to 1c beneath.

Acquitted.

St. Catharines, May 20.—In acquitting James Bohen, Frank Tracey, James Everett and William Cox of a charge of abduction yesterday afternoon, Judge Carman administered a strong rebuke, telling them that they escaped punishment because the child wavered in her evidence. Their own stories, he added, were sufficient to show their character. In dismissing them he complimented them on their luck, as he had intended to be severe, and to give Bohen, who is the oldest of the men, the full limit of the law, five years.

Cressman's

SPLENDID DEMONSTRATION OF KINDERGARTEN WORK

A most interesting demonstration of the Hulda Westmann Kindergarten method of music, was given at the Conservatory of Music Hall last night by Miss Hazel Dean and her pupils. There was an attendance of about three hundred, who were more than delighted with the proficiency of the infant musicians, and at the excellitude and scope of the musical knowledge, both theoretical and practical, displayed. It is impracticable to describe in detail the manner in which the programme was worked out; it was simply the kindergarten system of the schools applied to musical instruction. The demonstration demonstrated that the musical kindergarten provides a solid foundation upon which to build a future structure of musical culture based on a sound, theoretical knowledge, which is so often lacking in much of the mechanical music of these modern days, which paradoxical as it may appear in pure art, in that it is unaccompanied with little or nothing of the science of music. Last night showed to great advantage the merits of the system, and showed at the same time how excellently Miss Dean has mastered the details of the system and what a happy faculty she possesses, of imparting knowledge and enlisting the interest of her bright little students. The following is the programme presented which, however, gives no more idea of the intense interest it involved, than a simple cerincerent that Paderewski played, a Beethoven sonata, would give of the performance itself:

AN ERROR

Through an unfortunate error it was announced in the Examiner some days ago that the 34th Battery Canadian Artillery, would go into camp for the annual training this year on June 10. As a matter of fact the local artillery men will leave for camp on June 11, four days earlier than announced through the mistake.

EXCAVATION COMPLETED

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new addition to the post office. The work of excavating the cellar is now completed and the erection of the walls will commence on Monday. These will be constructed of cement. The contractors for this portion of the work are Messrs. Rose and Hickey.

BIRTHS.

PLACATING THE DEVILS.

Paying Homage to Evil Spirits of Land and Sea in China.

Once every year, during the first fifteen days of the seventh Chinese month, the curious ceremony of Yu Man Whui is celebrated, being, in fact, the paying of homage to the land and sea devils.

Seven priests carry out the ceremony by offering up various forms of prayer, says the Wide World Magazine, and making an unearthly noise by beating gongs.

Any one wishing to show his respect to the devils can do so by a payment of 600 cash—about 32 cents—to each of the priests, for which amount they will continue their performance for twelve hours, a truly modest remuneration.

For an extra payment of 2,000 cash a number of small red paper boats about six inches long, with lights inside, will be sent floating down the river with the current. These lights are for the benefit of the sea devils in order that they may be able to see their way about on dark nights.

Having finished this performance the person on whose behalf it has been carried out goes away happy in the conviction that he will not lose any of his family throughout the year either by sickness or drowning, so that the whole ceremony may be looked upon as an insurance policy. At this time of year many thousands of the small lighted boats may be seen floating down the Tungkiuliang.

Auto Travels Two Miles.

Belleville, May 20.—A serious auto accident occurred Thursday on the gravel road in Sydney near this city The machine, which was running fast, was thrown into the ditch. Seated in the car in addition to the driver were Mrs. Thomas Kelso, Miss Kelso, Mrs. A. A. Roberts and two young children of this city and Mrs. L. Grant of Montreal. Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Roberts were the most seriously injured, and were conveyed to the hospital. Mrs. Grant sustained a fracture of the right wrist and was cut about the head and face. Mrs. Roberts' injuries consisted of cuts about the head and face and bruises. Her young son was also bruised. Mrs. Kelso, Miss Kelso and the driver escaped with some painful bruises.

Control Over Cable Rates.

London, May 20.—In the course of a statement in the House of Commons concerning the postoffice appropriations, Postmaster-General Samuel announced that he had arranged to obtain some control over cablegram rates from now on by the insertion of a clause in the licenses of cablegram companies, giving the Government power to protest against excessive rates, and, in cases of dispute, to refer the matter to impartial arbitration.

The cable companies had agreed, the Postmaster-General said, to reduce by 50 per cent their rates on telegrams written in plain language, which are liable to delay not exceeding 24 hours.

Eli Hebert's Body Found.

Windsor, May 20.—The mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance of Eli Hebert, aged 68, a well-known farmer living near Tecumseh, was partly solved when the bloated and almost unrecognizable body was discovered by the crew of the U. S. dredge boat floating in the river off the foot of Bates street last night. The head was cut and battered, and the body bore strong indications of having been thrown into the river after death. All the pockets but one were turned inside out.

The Canadian Type.

Before the Royal Colonial Institute, Mr. Ellis T. Powell spoke of the native-born Canadian as evolving a distinct facial type. No observant traveller, he thought, could have failed to notice it. It carries "the stamp of resolute determination combined with intellectual alertness, but both these characteristics soften instantly into geniality when the more human emotions come into play." . . . Canadian faces may spring partly from contemplation of the vast national heritage handed down to them by their fathers.—Toronto Mail.

Adventures on a Canadian Fishpond

Any man who ever carried a map in the woods or "cut a line" in pursuit of any member of the tribe of fins and scales, will find delightful reading in a volume of humorous and fishing stories by Stephen Chalmers which had just been issued, the Canadian edition being published by the Musson Book Company of Toronto. The volume is called "The Trail of a Conductor." It need be read through easily at one sitting. All the stories are full of life and color, and they are related as only jolly sportsmen would tell a story to a group of congenial companions.

The last chapter of the book is especially interesting to Canadians. It's title is "Out With a Fish Patrol," and it throws some new light on one phase of a big question—the enforcement of fisheries regulations along the Canadian-American boundary lines. Mr. Chalmers was at Campobello Island on the Canadian side of Passamaquoddy Bay when the Hague Tribunal held that Great Britain had the sovereign right "to make fisheries regulations without the consent of the United States." So he made friends with a Canadian patrol captain with the idea of seeing how the "sovereign power" worked there-abouts. He got up one morning at three o'clock, in the midst of a Fundy fog, and went out with Captain Allan Mitchell, of Dominion Fisheries Patrol No. 2. He saw how things are done. Also, he heard some good stories.

Patrol No. 2 is a fast little boat, "derisively called 'The Pup' by those who fear it." It figures in many adventures. This one was told by Mr. Chalmers by Charles Olive of the crew concerning the handling of some Yankees, who were not only on the wrong side of the line, but were breaking the laws of both countries:

"We had a Scottish commander not long ago. There were half a dozen dynamiters from the Maine shore that had been carrying on operations —following which shipped north for the line just as he came up. Miles from it, like a gun, but one day he got round them through. He heard the explosion and knew them to be the fish. He crammed on all speed and arrived as if he'd got to them before they got to the line. But personally it looked like another getaway. Miles couldn't stand for it. He whipped out one of his fenders and sent a young cannon-ball right over their heads, then another one between their boats. Still they didn't stop. Miles didn't fire again, because there might be a war if you hit an American who was one-eighth of an inch over his own side.

"But the funny thing—as that they stopped right over the line and began swearing something awful. Miles came up, mad clear through. But what-d'y suppose? A conjecture them got up with dynamite in their hands and lifted their arms in a way that made a man's inside creep.

"'Now blankety blank blankety' they roared. 'You'll shoot us up, will you? Now you put down that gun quick or—'

"Miles didn't put it down. He put it up to his shoulder.

"'Look here,' says Miles, 'the minute that dynamite hands the man who is throwing it aboard comes down on them, the rest of us will send you straight to glory.'

"So there was a deadlock. They held up the dynamite ready to throw, and Miles never took his finger off the trigger or his eye off the man he was covering. But The Pup was drifting in, and when she was at a big rifle distance he says:

"'Now, listen to me. If you throw that dynamite, you'll make one hell, or the concussion won't be hard enough at this distance to set it off. If any of you attempt to light a stick we'll riddle you. Charlie,' he sang out to the 'are you ready with that other Snider?'

"I sure was, and so was Poltenhoers with the big Colt. They talked a lot, but finally rowed away. You see, the line ran between us and them and we couldn't even resent their language."

The Real "Buffalo."

Most towns like other towns are built. Wainwright, Alberta, breaks the rule. Wainwright is just as much unlike any town in America as could be. She has a park. So has New York, Central Park; Toronto, High Park. How because Wainwright has a park she is different.

Wainwright's park is the whole town. That explains partly why she is different. What would think of naming Toronto or New York Canadians?

Wainwright is Canadian. Wainwright, the park, is different from Central Park or High Park. It's bigger. Wainwright is 11,000 acres surrounded by a wire fence 25 miles long, which cost $3,000 a mile to put up.

And Wainwright has over a thousand of the rarest animals on the globe—over a thousand buffalo.

Interesting Work.

In Shelburne County, N.S., a company began work on a dam and in the bottom of the river discovered a perfect well, round and smooth bored. The engineers followed it down and found the well was 20 feet deep and still boring. A round stone, whirled by the rush of the river, had been boring—for how many million years? It was still whirling, indomitable, and still boring.

Metropolitan Improvement.

Berlin is getting to be more like New York every day. "Just imagine two plays and two picture shows doing a land office business on one night." So says one of the town's papers.

Corn Pudding.

MOISTURE IN SOILS

From Farm and Dairy.

The total rainfall in Ontario in the summer months is much short of sufficient to supply the moisture demands of growing crops. The moisture stored in the soil during fall and winter is the great supply on which crops must depend. The greater facilities we give the soil for storing this moisture and for holding it to be used gradually by the plants the more certain are we of good crops, be the season dry or wet.

The incorporation with the soil of organic matter, or humus, and the tile draining of wet soil, increases the porosity of the soil and therefore its water holding capacity. Thorough cultivation of the soil as early in the spring as possible, the early seeding of crops and in the case of hoe crops, thorough cultivation to maintain a dust mulch, are the best methods of conserving soil moisture from evaporation during summer.

Proper attention to these two factors in the conservation of soil moisture will place our crops practically independent of summer rains. These principles underlie the dry farming that is practised in countries where there is little rainfall and these same principles applied to farming in the more favored sections of eastern Canada will result in larger and better crops.

WEIGHT OF CHEESE

From Farm and Dairy.

The inspector of imported cheese at Glasgow has published a serious indictment of Canadian cheese makers and shippers as inexcusably careless if not criminally dishonest, in the matter of weight. The Scottish inspectors find it absolutely necessary to test thoroughly the weights of each shipment for shortage, particularly during the summer months. He adds that "it is a serious matter to importers, who have contracted to take a factory's weekly output, to find the cheese arrive showing from one-half to two or three pounds short weight per box, not to speak of odd boxes turning up five to ten pounds lighter than the marked weight."

In some way or other this grievance of British importers must be faced and remedied by the Canadian cheese makers, under pressure, if need be from the Canadian Government. An equally annoying grievance existed a few years ago in relation to the grading and labelling of apples put up in barrels and boxes. The law was amended to meet that kind of fraud, and it is diminishing every year. So it will be with short-weight cheese if equally drastic enactments and equally severe penalties are promulgated by Parliament and applied by Canadian inspectors.

NEW INTEREST IN ORCHARDS

From Farm and Dairy.

The farmers of Peterboro Co., Ont., as well as elsewhere, are taking a new interest in their orchards this year. This interest is typified in the case of Mr. John Elliott, a real farmer some miles out from Peterboro. He has but 40 trees. Recently while in the office of Farm and Dairy he told our editors that he had pruned them thoroughly and will spray them this season with the commercial lime-sulphur.

Speaking of spraying Mr. Elliott said: "We have simply got to spray or the fruit will be no good. It will be small, scabby and wormy. I have never sprayed before; but this year I have purchased a new sprayer to do the work. I have concluded that we must spray if we want to get anything out of our orchards."

A QUESTION ANSWERED

From Farm and Dairy.

Last year I put a field of alfalfa which gave me good returns. I cut it three times, the third cutting on September 17th. I got about four tons to the acre in the stook. I did not measure it as I had to get on to it. This spring I find it killed out by the frost. The field is a heavy clay loam. What would you advise to be done with it? I feel encouraged as to being killed out, as I have about 15 acres sowed.—J. C., Peterboro Co., Ont.

The answer to this question was given in Farm and Dairy last week, but we will repeat. You do not say if the roots of the alfalfa are thoroughly inoculated. The usual cause of winter-killing is lack of inoculation, but about once in six or eight years we get a season like last winter, which has been particularly disastrous to some old fields that are thoroughly inoculated.

The only thing to do in such cases is the same as when fall wheat or red clover is killed out—sow it over again. If the alfalfa is entirely killed out the only thing to do is to plow the field and seed over again, which is rather poor comfort with seed at $15 a bushel.

If, as is likely the case, there is quite a sprinkling of living plants, I would cut it up thoroughly with a springtooth cultivator and sow more alfalfa seed. Examine the roots of the living plants, and if no nodules are found on them, either inoculate the seed with culture obtained from the O. A. C., Guelph, or, what I like better, sow 200 lbs. of soil from an old successful alfalfa field to the acre and harrow it in well.—Chas. F. Marsh.

CRITICIZES EARL GREY

Senator Power Says the Governor-General is Shirking His Duty—Sir Richard Cartwright Defends His Excellency

SENSATIONAL EPISODE

Ottawa, May 20.—A sensational episode took place in the Senate yesterday. His Excellency Earl Grey being severely criticized for his alleged slighting of Parliament by sending his deputy, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, to give royal assent to bills prior to the two months' adjournment. Senator Power led the attack, and he was in some degree supported by Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Sir Richard Cartwright came to the defence of the governor, extolling his service to Canada in the high position he holds. "I am a very strong believer in British connections," said Senator Power. "I should very much regret that the present practice of having the Governor-General come from England be discontinued. I am altogether opposed to the idea of our becoming independent and separate from the Mother Country. The connection which now exists is not any too strong, and I would regret if anything should be done which would tend to weaken the silken tie that binds us to the Mother Country. I feel that the fact that the gentleman who represents the crown here apparently is desirous of stating that he is not necessary, and that we can get a chief justice of the Supreme Court who will discharge his most important functions just as well as he does, is really doing a good deal to teach this country that we do not want a Governor-General from England. From that point of view it is to be hoped that future Governors-General will do what was practiced formerly and will, unless absent from the seat of Government, make it a point to do what I consider their duty as one constituent of Parliament."

Sir Richard Cartwright: "My hon. friend is perhaps a little too severe with His Excellency."

Senator Power: "I do not wish to be understood as reflecting on His Excellency. I simply think he has made a mistake, and we should enter a protest."

Sir Richard Cartwright: "There is a material difference between an adjournment and prorogation. Unless my memory is wandering at fault I think that in Great Britain the sovereign does as a rule or very frequently delegates the adjournment of the House where such a thing occurs to commissioners equivalent to our deputy governors.

"One thing I can assure the House, that the last thing the Governor-General would desire would be to show any discourtesy to either Houses of Parliament. That I am perfectly certain is entirely removed from his intention or desire."

COMMONS ADJOURNS

Members Will Take a Recess Until July 18th—Borden Passes One Item on the List—Postal Savings Measure Passed

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Ottawa, May 20.—After attending in the Senate where Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, the Deputy Governor-General, gave the royal assent to a supply bill for thirty-four and a half million dollars, and all the other bills which had passed their third readings, the members of the House of Commons ceased work shortly before ten o'clock last night. Just before the Speaker left the chair R. L. Borden asked what business would be taken up when the House met on July 14. "Probably reciprocity," was the laconic reply of the Minister of Finance.

The supply bill, which includes twelfthths of all the items not voted, is made up of main estimates for the current year, totalling over twenty-six millions, supplementary estimates of slightly less than eight millions, and $260,000 of supplementaries for the previous fiscal year.

At the evening sitting Mr. Demers' bill to increase the salaries of postoffice officials was given a third reading. The Minister stated that he expected within a year or two to bring all the outside postal service under the Civil Service Act.

Hon. Mr. Graham introduced his resolutions providing for the lease of various short lines of railway in the Maritime Provinces, by the I.C.R. They were under discussion when the Black Rod summoned the members to the Senate chamber, Hon. H. R. Emmerson, who was the author of this policy, advocated the inclusion of the lines of the Maritime Coal & Railway Co. and the Cumberland Coal & Railway Co. in the terms of the resolution, pointing that it would not be in the interests of the I.C.R. to have them fall into other hands.

Mr. Emmerson said that this was a business proposition, which should not be treated as a party matter.

In committee of supply Hon. William Pugsley produced a list of 447 items for dredging and public works, which he said it was necessary to put through before adjournment.

R. L. Borden took exception to the proposal. He said that the Minister of Public Works had purposely submitted a list which he knew the Opposition could not accept.

Mr. Pugsley said that if the Opposition refused to pass the items it would be necessary to give orders to have the work stopped.

George H. Perley said that during the early part of the week the House had been discussing matters which were not of urgent importance, including amendment to the Railway Act. The Minister of Public Works, he said, was putting up a bluff. The Opposition did not object to the items, but desired time to discuss them.

Mr. Pugsley said the officials of the Department had informed him that it was essential that these items should be passed, as they covered repairs, necessary dredging, and small works.

Both Dr. Sproule and Mr. Perley declared that the Minister was not sincere in his proposals.

After some further protests by the Opposition members, Mr. Pugsley said that if the Conservatives decided it was not in the public interests he would not press the votes.

Hon. George P. Graham secured the approval of the House for several votes which he described as urgent, including one of $600,000 for a dock at Halifax.

Mr. Borden gave his approval. He said that increased facilities were necessary because in past seasons there had been much delay owing to the lack of proper dock accommodation.

Mr. Pugsley, to the amusement of the House, said the Opposition leader was quite willing to put through this large vote affecting his own constituency, but declined to allow many items just as urgent to pass.

Mr. Borden said if the Minister of Public Works had adopted the policy of Mr. Graham and submitted only a few items he would have received different treatment. He had, however, asked the House to pass no fewer than 447 items, without consideration.

Thistle Fields Wrong View.

Kilmarnock, Scotland, May 20.—At a meeting here, presided over by Keir Hardie, Hon. Andrew Fisher, Premier of Australia, voiced his dissent from the chairman's views with regard to naval defence. "If anyone holds the same ideas after looking at a map of the South Pacific ocean," he declared, "I would say that he lacks perspective in his judgment."

LUMBER COMBINE

United States Will Proceed Against a Great Group of Companies to Restrain Operations

PERMANENT INJUNCTION

New York, May 20.—[illegible] charges of a gigantic conspiracy to maintain high prices, to blacklist non-union mill men against [illegible] and in violation generally of the sherman anti-trust law, [illegible] General Wickersham in the U. S. Court here yesterday against the so-called lumber trust. The trade organizations and many [illegible] individuals are named as defendants in their suit.

The defendants named in the suit, and who are alleged to have conspired among themselves and with the assistance of the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association, have prevented wholesalers from selling directly or indirectly to consumers, are: The Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, a New York corporation, whose offices are in the Brooklyn Borough of New York City; the Building Material Men's Association of Westchester County, New York; the Lumber Dealers' Association of Connecticut; the Massachusetts Retail Lumber Dealers' Association; the Lumber Dealers' Association of Rhode Island; the Retail Lumbermen's Association of Baltimore.

The officers and directors, trustees and members of the above-named are individual defendants, as well as the officers and directors and members of the three following voluntary organizations: The New Jersey Lumbermen's Protective Association; the Retail Lumbermen's Association of Philadelphia; the Lumber Exchange of the District of Columbia.

The Government asks for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from continuing the conspiracy charged.

Briefly the retailers have conspired among themselves to prevent manufacturers and wholesalers from selling lumber direct to the consumer. A consumer for these purposes is held to be a contracting builder, mail order house, farmers' co-operative union, or the citizen who buys a pine board to repair his woodshed.

That hundreds of consumers, some of them the largest industrial corporations in the country, have been compelled to enter into unlawful agreements to secure lumber from retailers at much greater prices than they would have paid to wholesalers.

That wholesalers and retailers, in joint conventions and by agreements, have classified the consumers into "proper" and "improper" trade and have prepared and circulated blacklists [illegible]

That, although the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association is not named as a defendant in this action, by agreements with the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Association has organized and circulated blacklists which have affected the lumber trade in New York, North Carolina, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Michigan, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Tennessee, South Carolina, Virginia, New Jersey, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Connecticut, Indiana, Florida, Georgia, Missouri, Alabama, Rhode Island, California, Mississippi, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia.

That as a result of the alleged blacklists wholesalers have been directed not to sell lumber to retail dealers, will have dealt with consumers in wholesale quantities and that wholesalers who have dealt with consumers in retail quantities have been "protested" to the organized retailers who were directed by their organization not to buy lumber from such wholesalers.

That retailers who have sold lumber in wholesale lots or who have complained to national officials their alleged grievances have been posted to the brokers as "poachers" or "scalpers" and in some instances have been heavily fined or expelled from the organization.

More to Follow.

Washington, May 20.—At the Department of Justice yesterday it was stated that the suit filed in New York against the so-called lumber trust probably would be the first of a series to be instituted wherever similar violations of law are alleged.

Storm in Brockville.

Brockville, May 20.—This section was in the grasp of a violent electrical storm for an hour or so yesterday, accompanied by a heavy down-pour of rain and sleet. Two houses were struck in Brockville and slightly damaged, but the occupants escaped.

From the rural section reports are coming in of similar damage wrought. The barns on the farm of John Harvest, near Kemptville, were struck by lightning and totally destroyed. Five cows were burned, besides a quantity of hay and grain. Members of the family had just finished milking and left the cow barn when the bolt descended.

Lunatic at Large.

Brockville, May 20.—Guards of the eastern hospital are scouring the district in search of John Wilson, a patient committed from Kemptville a few months ago. Wilson wrenched a leg from his bedstead and with it smashed the iron bars of the window. This makes the second time Wilson has left the institution without leave.

Dropped Dead.

Brockville, May 20.—Yesterday evening a sudden death took place in the Township of North Crosby. The victime was Mrs. Thos. Eier, who dropped dead. The other members of the family left the house to do the evening milking, and on their return discovered the lifeless body lying on the floor. She was 68 years of age.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

President Taft regards the proposed amendments to the reciprocity bill as dangerous.

Thursday evening a two-year-old son of George Moore of Virgil, near Welland, was drowned by falling in an unused well.

Charles Webster, a fourteen-year-old Barnardo Home boy, dropped dead on Thursday while engaged on the farm of Mr. Adam Knister, Middle road, Rochester Township, near Cornhee.

Alfred J. Assaf, a Syrian, was yesterday presented, with the medal of the Royal Humane Association for bravery, in Montreal. Mr. Assaf on Feb. 25 rescued six women and four children from a burning building.

The Nottingham, Eng., election petition—an attempt to unseat Captain James A. Morrison, Unionist, who defeated Dudley Stewart Smith, K.C., by 3,650—was yesterday dismissed. The petition alleged 320 charges, including 443 cases of alleged bribery, 74 allegations of treating.

At a largely attended meeting of seamen yesterday Secretary French of the Glasgow Seamen's and Firemen's Union stated that a date for a general strike at all ports had been fixed, but that the union officials had decided to keep the date secret until the eve of the day that the strike was to become effective. It is believed to be May 29.

For Alsace-Lorraine.

Berlin, May 20.—After prolonged bargaining the committee of the Reichstag yesterday adopted the Government's bill providing a constitution for Alsace-Lorraine.

The purport of the Socialists was secured by abolishing the proposed plural voting. The original measure provided that the lower Chamber should be made up of members elected by universal suffrage of those twenty-five years old or over, and that voters over thirty-five years old should have two votes and those less than forty-five years old three votes.

The clericals were won over by concessions in the matter of religious freedom, and an arrangement by which the French language will be used officially in the schools of these districts of Alsace-Lorraine where there is a French-speaking population.

Laurier at Liverpool.

London, May 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Wilfrid Laurier landed at Liverpool Thursday. The Canadian Premier was met at the landing stage by the lord mayor and accorded a civic welcome. A large crowd had assembled to witness the arrival of the Virginia, which was gaily dressed in bunting.

Sir Wilfrid refused to be interviewed on political topics, and remarked that he was truly delighted to be in England once again. The London & Northwestern Railway Co. placed at the Premier's disposal one of the saloon carriages of the royal train, which [illegible]

Rosevear To Umpire
The Big Holiday Game .
Cobourg vs. Peterborough

J. M. Rosevear, of Port Hope, the "Silk O'Loughlin" of the Midland district, and one of the best known and most popular umpires that ever handled a game in this neck of the woods, will umpire the Peterborough-Cobourg Midland League game at Riverside Park on Victoria Day afternoon. The game is already the sole topic of conversation in local sporting circles and will undoubtedly be witnessed by a record crowd. Cobourg are always a drawing card, because they invariably have a good team and make things interesting from the drop of the hat. Their team this year is a strong combination of veterans and fast youngsters and they expect to grab off the Midland League pennant without half trying. Manager Quinlan feels, however, that the Lakeshore bunch will have to reckon with the Petes before they start building a shelf for the cup. "We have all kinds of material this season" he said last night, "and I see no reason why we should not have the best team in years." All of which goes to show that the holiday fixture will be about as gingerly a game of ball as has been seen around these parts in the past few seasons. The Petes are having a practice game this afternoon against the Yanigans, with Creswell, the young south-paw doing the throwing for the latter and Quinlan and Rahmel pitching for the Regulars. The final practice will be held on Tuesday night.

The fans can do their share by turning out in large numbers to the games. If the Midland League works successfully this year on a strictly amateur basis, there is no doubt that it will be continued from year to year and the question of amusement for the summer months, as far as athletics are concerned will be solved.

BASEBALL

A feature of the practises so far has been the splendid turnout, at least a score being on hand for every practice. This has make the task of selecting the team for Wednesday a difficult one owing to the wealth of material and of course the showing made by the players on the holiday will have a lot to do in regard to their being retained on the team for the season. Every man from Manager Quinlan down is enthusiastic and it is confidently felt that a good season is in store for the Peterborough Baseball Club.

HIS WARD

He Was Very Much Surprised When He Saw Her

By Ella B. Barker

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Mr. Willard Lane, bachelor, returned to his house after business, sat down in the library and took up a newspaper. He turned over the sheets three or four times, vainly endeavoring to become interested in something, and finally fell to reading the advertisements. Then he threw down the paper and, leaning back in his chair with a bored expression, mused:

"This house is comfortable, but it isn't home. I have a mind to give it up and take bachelor apartments. I can buy anything I want, but I can't buy a helpmeet. I'd give one-half of all I'm worth if I could go back ten or fifteen years and meet again the girls I used to associate with. I'd propose to every one of them successively till I got one for a wife. There's Molly B., married and four children; Matilda B., gone, I don't know where; Edith Jenks is still unclaimed, but she was always sour as vinegar, and she hasn't improved with age. As for me, I'm altogether too old to get a wife from among young women, and I'm sure none but a youthful one could ever get on with me, and she would have a hard time of it. I'll call this tomb"—

"A letter for you, sir."

Mrs. Parker, the housekeeper, handed him a missive that the postman had just left at the door. He opened and read it:

Willard Lane, Esq.:

Dear Sir—We have to announce to you that by the will of the late Hamilton Bingham, which has this day been admitted to probate, you are appointed executor of his estate and guardian of his daughter, Marie Southworth Bingham. Your ward has no relatives, and it is incumbent upon you to provide a home for her. Very respectfully, your obedient servants, KINGSLEY & KINGSLEY, Attorneys.

"Well, well! Poor Bingham's gone! And left his child to me! Why didn't those musty attorneys say something about her sex? Will she need a nurse or will she 'do' herself? Let me see, 15 have had no knowledge of Bingham for a dozen years. I can't figure out how old the child is. But, only think. It will break up this home to have any living thing in it. I mustn't call it. I'll send it for her home. By Jove, that's what I'll do! I'll make a home for her right here!"

Going out to a telegraph office, he sent the following message to the attorneys: "Send Marie Bingham here."

During the evening Mr. Lane received a reply that his ward would be with him at 6 o'clock the next evening. And it was suggested that he meet her at the station. Calling for Mrs. Parker, he gave her minute instructions as to the preparations he desired made.

"Put in order," he said, "the two rooms adjoining on the west, second story—the one for a nurse, the other for a child. In the garret is a crib that has been there for years. Get it down, and I'll order a new mattress."

"How old is the child, sir?" asked the housekeeper.

"How old? I don't know. The stupid attorneys didn't say anything about her age, but I figure it out that she can't be over, say, two years old. If she is I've been getting old mighty fast. I hope she's between six and twelve. We'll assume that she's seven, not too old for dolls, sets of dishes and all that. At any rate, I'll provide them when I go downtown tomorrow. Poor little thing! I wish her to feel at home. She's just lost her father."

"I'll see that everything is done, sir."

So Lane the next day sent home all that was required, including such toys as would please a child seven years old. There were three dolls and a playhouse big enough for the little girl to get into—that is, if she wasn't large for her age. By 4 o'clock in the afternoon the two rooms were in prime order and looked both comfortable and cozy.

At 5 o'clock Mr. Lane was at the station and watched the people pour from the train when it came in, looking for a woman with a little girl, but there was none such—at least none that did not go away at once. Lane was disappointed. He had made up his mind to have his little companion by him at the table for dinner. He was turning away when a girl about seventeen accosted him:

"I beg pardon, sir. Have you seen an elderly gentleman who appeared to be waiting for some one?"

"No; I have not."

"He was to have met me here, but I don't see him."

"I was to have met a little girl myself. She hasn't come, or if she has I've missed her."

"I don't know what I'm going to do."

"I have a carriage outside and will be happy to drive you wherever you wish to go."

"Thank you ever so much. I'm to go to my guardian, Mr. Willard Lane, No."—

"What!"

"Mr. Lane."

"I thought you said he is an elderly gentleman."

"Why, I suppose he is. He and my father"—

"Are you Marie Bingham?"

"Yes."

Lane looked at her for a moment as if dazed, then said:

"I'm the elderly gentleman you're looking for, and you're the child I'm looking for. I'm your guardian. Come right along."

Seizing a bag she carried, he led her out of the station, put her into a carriage and drove her home. The housekeeper received them at the front door and looked surprised at seeing instead of a child a tall, willowy girl who might have passed for twenty.

"Just wait here a few moments," said Lane to his ward. "I wish to be sure your room is all right. Mrs. Parker, we'll go and see."

The two hurried upstairs.

"We must get this out first," he said, taking hold of one end of the playhouse.

"She'll never get in it in the world," remarked Mrs. Parker dryly.

"Run it up into the garret."

The crib was next removed, after which the dolls, sets of dishes and other toys. Then Lane went down and told Miss Marie Bingham that her rooms were ready for her.

Mrs. Parker had been to the Lane family long enough to have taken care of Willard Lane when he was a kid. She was the only woman upon whom he could rely for advice, and as soon as she came downstairs he said to her:

"What am I to do? Will it be proper for me to keep her here?"

"In the first place, Mr. Willard, I understand she has no other home. Some people will think it right for you to give her a home here with me for chaperon, while some will talk. But if we're going to listen to what people say of us we'll be hearing something disagreeable all the while. If she's happy here I see no reason why she shouldn't stay."

"That settled it; she remained."

Marie Bingham was of an age to be treated either as a woman or one just emerging from childhood, especially by her father's old friend. The tomb, as he had called his home, seemed to have thrown off its sepulchral atmosphere from the day she came into it. Two weeks after her arrival she felt deeply the loss of her father. But youth is quick to throw off sorrows, and even during this period she was cheerful. Beyond this was the presence of a young girl. It seemed that the very atmosphere had been changed. The servants were better contented and easier to manage. Mrs. Parker's heart, that had been supposed to have congealed with age, came out to the motherless girl, and she was happy in having some one to care for. As for Lane, it seemed to him that he walked lighter, breathed freer—indeed, that the whole world had taken on a brighter hue.

Three years passed, years that Lane afterward referred to as the happiest of his life. From the first he was interested at having the direction of a young girl's education, she being as it was—when the time changed. She became was a docile one, entirely indifferent to give her special attention. He supplied the deficiency, keeping her in ignorance of the fact.

"I must find some young fellows for her," he said to Mrs. Parker. "She needs to associate with young men of her own age."

Mrs. Parker looked up at the ceiling and said nothing.

So Lane hunted up some of the younger members of his club and told them to call upon his ward. She appeared to enjoy their society, but it was not to be supposed that she would fulfill the purpose for which he had brought them—that is, that she should marry one of them. Her twenty-first birthday was near at hand, when by the terms of her father's will her inheritance was to be turned over to her, and, though her guardian had invited up a number of attractive young men, she had shown none of them any preference.

The day she was twenty-one Lane handed in to the chancery court an account of his stewardship. His ward surprised him by asking for a copy of it. He gave it to her, and she perused it carefully.

"I can't make this out," she said to her guardian. "What has been the average income from the estate since father's death?"

"About $700."

"How much have you charged me for board?"

"There hasn't been any income for board. It has all been needed for schooling."

"And how much has been drawn for schooling?"

"Nothing has been drawn for schooling. It was all needed for board."

She looked up from the paper. There was a revelation for him in that look. She put out her hand and touched it on his. He drew her to him and kissed her.

The next morning Lane said to Mrs. Parker, "I have a surprise for you."

"What is it?"

"Marie is going to turn down all the boys to marry the old man."

"Tut! That's no surprise."

LIGHTNING'S PRANKS

The severe electric storm which swept over this district yesterday morning seemed to have spared Peterborough, while it centred its fury on the surrounding districts. In North Monaghan yesterday an electric bolt struck the barn on the property of Mrs. Rose Mullen, about three and a half miles from the city and killed a valuable cow, which was standing in the lane nearby. The barn caught fire but the flames were extinguished before any serious damage was done.

Attorney General Asks for Judicial Decision for an Opinion

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, MAY 20.—The question as to whether or not it is legal to sell cigars, candies and soft drinks on Sunday in Ontario, was re-opened before Mr. Justice Middleton this morning by the Attorney General of Ontario, who wants judicial opinion on the matter. Judgment was reserved.

A COOL PLUNGE

One of our local coal dealers, who is an expert at rolling lawn bowls and curling stones, had a rather unpleasant experience the other day. He was in Lakefield helping his men to roll some logs into the river when his dant hook slipped and he took a header into the water. With the exception of a rather cool wetting, he got to shore safely, none the worse of the mishap.

IMPORTANT MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Midland League team to-night at the Examiner office at 8:30 o'clock. A full attendance of officers of the Club is expected, as most important business will come before the meeting.

PRESENTED WITH PURSE

On the eve of her departure for Peterborough the friends and neighbours to the number of 50 or more, assembled at the home of Mrs. W. Brisbin, of Yelverton and presented her with a substantial purse and an address as a mark of their esteem.

Mrs. Brisbin and family have taken up their residence on Murray street, city, where they are followed by the well wishes of their numerous friends.

BAD STORM

A very severe electric storm passed over Lakefield and that section yesterday, doing considerable damage in some districts. Mr. George Johnston, who resides at Lakefield, was one of the losers. Three valuable cows and a bull were killed by the lightning, entailing a loss of over $200.00. It was reported in this city, that a child had been killed, while leaping over a wire fence, but this is apparently a foundationless rumour.

PREMIER OF FRANCE HAS HOPE OF RECOVERY

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, MAY 23.—Premier Monis, who was terribly hurt in the monoplane accident, was a trifle better this morning, and hope is entertained for his recovery. The remains of the Minister of War, Berteaux, are lying in state at the Minister of War's office.

The troops will go into mourning for thirty days. Several aviators in the race which brought about the accident, retired from the contest, having no heart to continue.
